

NEW HEIGHTS EDUCATIONAL GROUP

EDGE Guide

ISSUE 11-12

2022 NOVEMBER - DECEMBER

NHEG EDGUIDE

EDITORIAL TEAM

EDITOR IN CHIEF	● Pamela Clark NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com
PRODUCTION MANAGER	● Marina Klimi MarinaKlimi@NewHeightsEducation.org
PROOFREADERS/EDITORS	● Laura Casanova
PHOTOGRAPHERS IN THIS ISSUE	● Frani Wyner William Atkinson Pamela Clark

Contents

2	EDITORIAL TEAM	66-69	NHEG BIRTHDAYS AND ANNIVERSARIES
4	THOUGHT OF THE MONTH	70-71	NHEG VOLUNTEERS REVIEWS
10-11	LETTER FROM OUR DIRECTOR PAMELA CLARK	72-73	EARN BOX TOPS
12-23	NHEG MEDIA PACK	78-103	NHEG WRITERS ARTICLES
24-25	MISSING CHILDREN	104-127	FEE ARTICLES
30-31	NHEG GROUP NAMED BEST CHILDREN & ADULTS LITERACY GROUP	130	HSLDA ARTICLES
38	NEW COMIC STRIPS CREATED BY BARBARA BULLEN	134-135	GREAT COMPANIES
46-47	VOLUNTEERS PAGES	136-141	RECIPES
48-55	NHEG INTERNET RADIO PROGRAM	142-143	NHEG PARTNERS & AFFILIATES
58-59	NHEG FREE BOOK PROMOTIONS

Thought for the Month

I wish everyone a safe and warm holiday season.
I hope you're surrounded by loved ones and enjoy every moment, great and small.

Pamela Clark
Founder/ Executive Director of
The New Heights Educational Group, Inc.
Resource and Literacy Center
NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com
<http://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>

Learning Annex
<https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

A Public Charity 501(c)(3)
Nonprofit Organization
New Heights Educational Group
Inc.
14735 Power Dam Road, Defiance, Ohio
43512
+1.419.786.0247

Welcome to the official
New Heights Educational Group store.

<https://NHEG.memberhub.com/store>

NHEG Store | New Heights Educational Group, Inc.

MORE PRODUCTS SOON!

amazonsmile

Shop school essentials at smile.amazon.com and Amazon donates.

NHEG Media

NEW HEIGHTS

SHOW ON EDUCATION

<https://Radio.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

<https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

<https://NewHeightsEducation.org/Who-We-Are/NHEG-EdGuide/>

Donate Today!

Paypal.Me/NHEG

Happy 16th Birthday

To New Heights Educational Group

New Heights Educational Group™

Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals

Resource and Literacy Center

<https://NewHeightsEducation.org/> • (419) 786-0247 • NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com

Merry Christmas and Happy Holidays to all of our family, friends, NHEG volunteers, clients, sponsors and supporters.

This year has been a challenging yet rewarding year for the Clark family and the New Heights Educational Group, and we continue to be grateful for so much.

M is for the Many blessings, even through difficult times and extraordinary circumstances.

E is for Every moment, big or small.

R is for the Remarkable and amazing 73 volunteers that helped hold NHEG together after the car accident.

R is for Really fun times with our grandson and granddaughters.

Y is for another stellar Year of work, goals met, awards and blessings for NHEG.

C is for Caring families and volunteers who helped us make it through some big obstacles this year.

H is for Happy moments shared with family.

R is for Rising above rough times and moving on.

I is for the gift of Inspiration from God and those He has placed in our lives.

S is for enjoying the Simple things.

T is for Thinking of others always (not just through the holiday season).

M is for Greg and Pamela's 34 years of Marriage.

A is for our Amazing new granddaughter.

S is for Smiling even through difficult times.

Letter from our Director Pamela Clark

Dear Readers, Supporters, Families, and Wonderful Volunteers,

This has been one of the most challenging years I've ever faced personally and professionally, and it's been hard on our organization as well. We are still struggling but fighting to survive the year. I want to say thank you to all of you. We would not have survived this year without our incredible volunteers, and it reconfirms that this is the people's organization and not just mine.

NHEG is for anyone looking for a more successful life through education—real education, lifelong education—and a deep love for it.

It's for everyone, and I believe it is a human right.

I have been through a lot in my life, but surviving a serious car accident along with my husband is up there with the top challenges.

It's a miracle that we both walked away from a semi-truck trailer accident, yet due to the injuries we sustained the incident has dragged on and on. We are thankful, but continually deal with the repercussions. This has brought us to a point in our history when we require immediate funding so I can hire local and remote staff to help continue our work and cement our legacy in history.

Most importantly, though, I'm writing this to thank those of you who have been behind the scenes making a difference this year. I'm in awe and so appreciate you and your belief in my dream to make education affordable and accessible to everyone through our a la carte learning programs.

THANK YOU.

NHEG MEDIA PACK

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

Pamela Clark
Founder/Executive Director
NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com
www.NewHeightsEducation.org
www.School.NewHeightsEducation.org
14735 Power Dam Road by appointment only
Defiance, Ohio 43512
419-786-0247

Mission Statement

The New Heights Educational Group, Inc. promotes literacy for children and adults by offering a range of educational support services. Such services include: assisting families in the selection of schools; organization of educational activities; and acquisition of materials.

We promote a healthy learning environment and enrichment programs for families of preschool and school-age children, including children with special needs.

Student Services

New Heights Education Group promotes a healthy learning environment and enrichment programs for families of preschool and school-age children, including children with special needs.

Student	Parents and Teachers
• Tutoring	• Classroom Resources
• Academic Growth Assessment	• Education Technology
• Support for Children with Special Needs	• Teacher Resources and Training
• Computer and Internet Resources	• Tutoring Resources
• Scholarship Searches and College Exam and Prep
• Private Library (in progress)
• Leadership Opportunities
• Online Courses
• NHEG Baton Corp. and NHEG Color Guard

Discounted and Free Online Classes

NHEG is providing students discounted and free online classes that they can take in their free time or incorporate into their current studies. This includes students who are homeschooled or attending a charter, private or public school.

NHEG has partnered with HSLDA Academy, Touch Type Read and Spell, Reading Success Labs, Classic Learning Test and we have partnered with a number of talented instructors who offer unique learning opportunities. This includes an Animation and Drawing Course, and Generation Self-Employed Course. Students can receive a discount by using our code when registering in most of these classes. We also partnered with others who provides free courses through our site.

These free courses are from Hilldale College, Virtual Home School Group, FEE online courses and Roots and Shoots.

The NHEG Online Learning Annex provides its own online courses, free and for a fee to children and adults who wish to learn more and are looking for something affordable. Our online classes are either self-enrolled or pre-recorded, meaning you can learn at your own pace or by attending standard online weekly courses taught by one of our volunteer teachers or tutors.

More Student Services

In order to promote leadership, we offer a Student Advisory Group for students ages 7 to 13 and a Student Leadership Council for students ages 14 to 23 with at least a 3.0 GPA. These internships give them opportunities to serve in our organization and earn relevant experience. It also empowers them to make a difference.

Additionally, NHEG offers an Adult Advisory Group for parents and provides an outlet for adults to have a voice in improving education.

NHEG Travel Programs offer students and teachers the opportunity to experience travel and understand new cultures around the world for the first time.

More Student Services

The NHEG Parents Information & Resources Portal is a dedicated page of information and resources for parents of home, public and charter school students.

NHEG Support Groups provide various support to not only our board members, but also to students, parents and teachers in Ohio. Each group provides a pivotal function in our organization to strengthen our programs and services; moreover, it helps support and educate children and adults, so they can build a much stronger educational background.

More Services

The New Heights Show on Education is an internet radio program in which the hosts cover various topics of education for home, charter and public school families in Ohio and beyond.

We publish a Bi-Monthly Magazine, titled NHEG EDGuide to our subscribers, and they can get the latest news and information about our organization, teachers and students. It has a reach of more than 85,000 views.

Comic book

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals

EASYtoons
EDUCATIONAL ANECDOTES FOR STRUGGLING YOUTH

E.A.S.Y. Toons
(Educational Anecdotes for Struggling Youth)
"We Rogers" mentality comic book to help reach students with great kindness and understanding.

NHEG's team of graphic designers have created the cartoons, and educational writers create scripts for the comics. An NHEG radio host will be chosen to read the comics and take calls from students.

KELLY BEAR FRIENDS

teen line
teens helping teens

THIS Life. THIS Voice

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org/easytoons>

The NHEG Books

UNCOMMON KNOWLEDGE
BY LISA B. BROWN

It presents strategies and alternatives for developing reading and writing in children, youth and adults in a practical and dynamic way. Through diverse cultural and literary, authors address various learning styles, with consideration for how the brain learns and processes information in a socially, culturally and linguistically.

ONE ACCEPTANCE
BY LISA B. BROWN

An inspiring story of a woman of faith who stepped out of her comfort zone to become a leader and a role model for others. She shared her journey of faith, love, and acceptance with the world, and her story is a testament to the power of faith and love.

AVAILABLE AT:
Amazon
Walmart
BARNES & NOBLE

WWW.NewHeightsEducation.org

Find us on....

Facebook

YouTube

LinkedIn

Pinterest

Twitter

Yelp

Click on the image to go to NHEG site

2020 and 2021 BBB Nomination for Torch Awards for Ethics

All Awards - QR Code

CONGRATULATIONS

New Heights Educational Group

FORT WAYNE NEWSPAPERS

READERS' CHOICE

2021 TOP-RATED NONPROFIT

2021

2021

2021

2022 Silver Stevie® Award in the Best Use of Thought Leadership in Customer Service category and a Bronze Stevie® Award in the Best Use of Thought Leadership in Business Development category in the 16th annual Stevie Awards for Sales & Customer Service

BRONZE 2022 STEVIE WINNER FOR SALES & CUSTOMER SERVICE

SILVER 2022 STEVIE WINNER FOR SALES & CUSTOMER SERVICE

October 2021 International Best in Business Awards
Media Hero of the Year (NHEG EDGUIDE AND New Heights Show on Education)
GOLD GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA | Educational Resources and Opportunities

October 2021 Communications Excellence Awards
Media Hero of the Year
GOLD GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA | Volunteers creating bi-monthly educational magazine and weekly podcasts on education |

12th Annual International Business Awards®
New Heights Educational Group
Category: Company of the Year - Diversified Services - Medium-size
Status: Gold Stevie Winner
NHEG - Education Hero of the Year
Category: Education Hero of the Year
Status: Gold Stevie Winner

New Heights Educational Group
Category: Company of the Year - Business or Professional Services - Medium-size
Status: Silver Stevie Winner
July 2021 NHEG was named Best Literary Promotion & Support NPO - Midwest USA by Acquisition International 2021
Non-Profit Organization Awards
<https://www.acquisition-international.com/winners/New-Heights-Educational-Group/>
2022 NHEG was named Best Literary Promotion & Support NPO - Midwest USA by Acquisition International 2022
Non-Profit Organization Awards
<https://www.acquisition-international.com/winners/New-Heights-Educational-Group/>

2021 American Best in Business Awards by Globe
Executive Hero of the Year | Effective Leadership During COVID-19
—BRONZE GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, California, USA | Amazing Online Growth and Achievements |
Pamela Clark, Executive Director Education Hero of the Year
—GOLD GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, Ohio, USA | Amazing Online Growth and Achievements |
Team of the Year | During COVID-19
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, Ohio, USA | Amazing Online Growth and Achievements |
Board Members: Pamela Clark, Jon Aitken, Sheila Wright, Kristen Congedo
Best Non-Profit Response | Helping Local Communities and the World During COVID-19
SILVER GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, Ohio, USA | Amazing Online Growth and Achievements |
Board Members: Pamela Clark, Jon Aitken, Sheila Wright, Kristen Congedo

2021

2021

2021

2021 Golden Bridge Awards

Executive Hero of the Year | Effective Leadership During COVID-19
Pamela Clark, Executive Director, SILVER GLOBEE® WINNER

Education Hero of the Year – GOLD GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA |

Public Service Hero of the Year – SILVER GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA |

Team of the Year | During COVID-19 – GOLD GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA |

Company Response of the Year – BRONZE GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA |

Company Innovation of the Year – BRONZE GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA |

Best Non-Profit Response | Helping Local Communities and the World During COVID-19 – BRONZE GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA |

2021

2021

2021

2021 – Pamela Clark - Gold American Business Awards/ Stevie® Award - Named Education Hero of the Year
2021 BRONZE STEVIE® American Business Awards/ AWARD – SUPPORT STAFF OF THE YEAR
Julia Landy
2021 BRONZE STEVIE® American Business Awards/ AWARD MARKETER OF THE YEAR & American Business Awards/ PRODUCT DEVELOPER OF THE YEAR
Marina Klimi

2021 Sales and Service Excellence Awards
Business Development Outstanding Performance of the Year
GOLD GLOBEE® WINNER
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA | Affordable Tutoring and Courses with Massive Growth

Customer Service & Support Team of the Year | During COVID-19

BRONZE GLOBEE® WINNERS
New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA | Affordable Tutoring and Courses with Massive Growth

2021

2021

2021

2021

5th Annual 2020 Pillar World Awards
Advancing Diversity Within Community
GOLD WINNER
New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio, USA | Expanding educational opportunities for all | Pamela Clark, Marina Klimi, Michael Anderson, Jyoti Aggarwal, Tyler Maxey-Billings, Enjoli Baker, Erika Hanson, Sheila Wright, Padmapriya (Priya) Kedharnath, Allene Yue, Sampan Chaudhuri, Julia Landy, Frani Wyner, Kaitlyn Rottingen, Khrista-Cheryl Cendana, Bruno Moses Patrick, Nimisha Basarkar, Caroline Chen, Aayush Gauba, Sarika Gauba, Nayana Mogre, Elizabeth White, Rhone-Ann Huang, Charlotte Picardo, Alina Sheikh, Hamsatu Bolori, Buffie Williams, Ming Wei Chong, Chinmay Arvind, Ruzzel Solayao, Jane Wen, Rachel Fay, Jacqueline (Jakki) Taylor, Kristen Congedo, Leah Sedy

PILLAR

BEST

2020

GOLD

5th Annual 2020 Pillar World Awards
Advancing Global Diversity
SILVER WINNER
New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio, USA | Creating leadership opportunities for National and International Students | Pamela Clark, Marina Klimi, Michael Anderson, Jyoti Aggarwal, Tyler Maxey-Billings, Enjoli Baker, Erika Hanson, Sheila Wright, Padmapriya (Priya) Kedharnath, Sampan Chaudhuri, Julia Landy, Frani Wyner, Kaitlyn Rottingen, Khrista-Cheryl Cendana, Bruno Moses Patrick, Nimisha Basarkar, Caroline Chen, Aayush Gauba, Sarika Gauba, Nayana Mogre, Elizabeth White, Hamsatu Bolori, Buffie Williams, Ming Wei Chong, Chinmay Arvind, Ruzzel Solayao, Jane Wen, Rachel Fay, Jacqueline (Jakki) Taylor, Kristen Congedo, Leah Sedy, Allene Yue Aayush Gauba Alina Sheikh Caroline Chen Doyoon "Dean" Kim Fatima Saad Rhone-Ann Huang Anagha Sridharan Charlotte Picardo Michelle Alwin Diya Sharma Dannah Altiti Ashmeet Kaur Mariam Qudoos Israa Hammond

PILLAR

BEST

2020

SILVER

5th Annual 2020 Pillar World Awards

Diversity Hiring Team of the Year

GOLD WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio USA |

Volunteers bringing on new Volunteers | Pamela Clark, Jyoti Aggarwal, Caroline Chen, Nimisha Basarkar

Diversity Leadership of the Year

GOLD WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio USA | Inspiring programs and amazing growth | Pamela Clark, Marina Klimi, Michael Anderson, Jyoti Aggarwal, Tyler Maxey-Billings, Enjoli Baker, Erika Hanson, Sheila Wright, Padmapriya (Priya) Kedharnath, Allene Yue, Sampan Chaudhuri, Julia Landy, Frani Wyner, Kaitlyn Rottingen, Khrista-Cheryl Cendana, Bruno Moses Patrick, Nimisha Basarkar, Caroline Chen, Aayush Gauba, Sarika Gauba, Nayana Mogre, Elizabeth White, Rhone-Ann Huang, Charlotte Picardo, Alina Sheikh, Hamsatu Bolori, Buffie Williams, Ming Wei Chong, Chinmay Arvind, Ruzzel Solayao, Jane Wen, Rachel Fay, Jacqueline (Jikki) Taylor, Kristen Congedo, Leah Sedy, Allene Yue Aayush Gauba, Alina Sheikh, Caroline Chen Doyoon "Dean" Kim, Fatima Saad, Rhone-Ann Huang, Anagha Sridharan, Charlotte Picardo, Michelle Alwin, Diya Sharma, Dannah Altiti, Ashmeet Kaur, Mariam Qudoos, Israa Hammond

5th Annual 2020 Pillar World Awards

Diversity Team of the Year

SILVER WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio USA | Expanding our services and amazing growth | Pamela Clark, Marina Klimi, Michael Anderson, Jyoti Aggarwal, Tyler Maxey-Billings, Enjoli Baker, Erika Hanson, Sheila Wright, Padmapriya (Priya) Kedharnath, Allene Yue, Sampan Chaudhuri, Julia Landy, Frani Wyner, Kaitlyn Rottingen, Khrista-Cheryl Cendana, Bruno Moses Patrick, Nimisha Basarkar, Caroline Chen, Aayush Gauba, Sarika Gauba, Nayana Mogre, Elizabeth White, Rhone-Ann Huang, Charlotte Picardo, Alina Sheikh, Hamsatu Bolori, Buffie Williams, Ming Wei Chong, Chinmay Arvind, Ruzzel Solayao, Jane Wen, Rachel Fay, Jacqueline (Jikki) Taylor, Kristen Congedo, Leah Sedy, Doyoon "Dean" Kim, Fatima Saad, Anagha Sridharan, Michelle Alwin, Diya Sharma, Dannah Altiti, Ashmeet Kaur, Mariam Qudoos, Israa Hammond

5th Annual 2020 Pillar World Awards

Management Diversity of the Year

GOLD WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio USA | 95 volunteers promoting the NHEG mission | Pamela Clark, Marina Klimi, Michael Anderson, Jyoti Aggarwal, Tyler Maxey-Billings, Enjoli Baker, Erika Hanson, Sheila Wright, Padmapriya (Priya) Kedharnath, Allene Yue, Aayush Gauba, Khrista-Cheryl Cendana, Bruno Moses Patrick, Caroline Chen, Aayush Gauba, Sarika Gauba, Nayana Mogre, Rhone-Ann Huang, Charlotte Picardo, Alina Sheikh, Buffie Williams, Ming Wei Chong, Ruzzel Solayao, Jane Wen, Rachel Fay, Jacqueline (Jikki) Taylor, Kristen Congedo

7th Annual 2020 Customer Sales and Service World Awards

Executive Excellence | Creative of the Year

SILVER WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio 43512 | Marina Klimi and NHEG EDGuide | Marina Klimi

Executive Excellence | Leader of the Year

Bronze

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | DEFIANCE, Ohio 43512 | leads a team over 90 volunteers to create real change | Pamela Sue Clark

Executive Excellence | Rising Star of the Year

SILVER WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio 43512 | Young leader making a difference | Caroline Chen

Executive Excellence | Rising Star of the Year

BRONZE WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio 43512 | Allene created three courses for our new music program | Allene Yue

7th Annual 2020 Customer Sales and Service World Awards

Executive Excellence | Team Builder of the Year

SILVER WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio 43512 | Jyoti and HR Department brought on 21 volunteers. | Jyoti Aggarwal

Executive Excellence | Visionary of the Year

GOLD WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio 43512 | Expanded our online courses | Pamela Clark

Business Development Outstanding Performance of the Year

GOLD WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio 43512 | Michael created and has managed our website for 4 years | Michael Anderson

Business Development Outstanding Performance of the Year

SILVER WINNER

New Heights Educational Group, Inc | Defiance, Ohio 43512 | Volunteer team making great impact on many projects | Pamela Clark and her team of volunteers

2020 (Gold Winner) Company of the Year - Diversified Services - Small - International Business Awards

2020 (Silver Winner) Organization of the Year - Non-Profit or Government Organizations - Medium-size category - International Business Awards

3987 Human Resources Executive of the Year Anusha Nemali 2020 Stevie Awards for Great Employers (Main) Bronze Stevie Winner

3988 Learning or Training Professional of the Year 2020 Stevie Awards for Great Employers (Main) Bronze Stevie Winner

3989 Learning Expertise at its Best 2020 Stevie Awards for Great Employers (Main) Gold Stevie Winner

THE GOLDEN BRIDGE AWARDS

SILVER

BEST 2020

BUSINESS WORLD

Customer Service & Support Staffer of the Year (non-executive)

New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA | Michael has been volunteering with us for the last 4 years. | Michael Anderson

New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA | Production Manager of our Magazine, publishing bi-monthly | Marina Klimi

Product Developer of the Year (non-executive)

New Heights Educational Group | Defiance, OH USA | Production Manager of our new comic book | Tyler Maxey-Billings

2020

2020 ABA Gold Award Winner - Product Management/Development Executive of the Year

2020 ABA Silver Award Winner - Product Management Department/Team of the Year

2020 ABA Bronze Award Winner - Product Developer of the Year

Stevie Winner - Silver - Sales & Customer Service

2020

Bronze - Sales & Customer Service

Bronze - Product Management/Development Executive of the Year

Golden Bridge Awards

2020

Company of the Year (Diversified Services)

Gold

Company of the Year (Non-Profit or Government Organizations)

Gold

Company of the Year (Education and Training)

Bronze

2020

Letter from Representative Craig S. Riedel

Letter from Senator Sherrod Brown

Greatnonprofits Top-Rated Award (4 years in a row)

Pamela Clark recipient of a $500 National Society of High School Scholars (NSHS) Educator Grant.

Guidestar Platinum - 3 years in row

Guidestar Gold - 4 years in a row

AWARDS AND ACHIEVEMENTS

Over the years of dedicated service to the children and adults of the state of Ohio, we have received many awards and achievements for the work that we do. These awards and achievements cover various areas, including business and education. Each award and achievement is listed by name, the year we received it and, if appropriate, the category for which we were nominated.

INDIVIDUAL VOLUNTEER SERVICE AWARDS

Pamela Clark - Bronze - 2019 - 2020 - 2021 - 2022 - 2023 - 2024

Bruce Decker - Gold

Khrista-Cheryl Cendana - Bronze - 2019

William Naughton - Bronze - 2019 - 2020 - 2021 - 2022 - 2023 - 2024

Michael Anderson - Bronze - 2019 - 2020 - 2021 - 2022 - 2023 - 2024

Robert Hall - Bronze - 2019 - 2020 - 2021 - 2022 - 2023 - 2024

Supra Shukla - Bronze - 2019

RECOGNITION FROM THE STATE OF OHIO

2020 Letter from Representative Craig S. Riedel

2020 Letter from Representative Craig S. Riedel

2021 Service/Recognition Award

Governor and Lieutenant Governor of Ohio

2021 Certificate of Recognition of Achievement

Governor and Lieutenant Governor of Ohio

Certificate of Recognition of Achievement

Sherrod Brown, United States Senate

Certificate of Recognition of Achievement

Ruth Faber, Ohio Senate

2024 Ohio Secretary of State Ben Ray Lujan listed New Heights as Great Ohio-Based Nonprofit Organizations

Testimonials IV

I had seizures the first 8 years of my life, which caused me to become behind in every subject. Between my family and New Heights they are working to help me get caught up so I will be able to graduate high school in 2 years. I have been receiving tutoring from New Heights for about a year and a half now in Math and Science. My tutor, Vanh, is absolutely amazing!! Last year she helped me advance 3 grade levels in Math alone. She is now helping me also in Science. Thank you so much New Heights!
CelticKat (2016)

I have been blessed to be a part of New Heights. New Heights has given my daughter the opportunity to graduate a year earlier than a regular school and has helped my daughter to learn -- not just have papers or tests thrown at her. This group makes you feel like family. I wish everyone would know about this group. New Heights has helped so many people, and I know it will help so many more in the future. I want to personally thank you for all your help, and I would recommend New Heights to everyone.
Misty Brittig (2015)

Testimonials V

My name is Desiree; I'm a home-schooled senior, and I receive tutoring from New Heights Educational Group. Before I began with NHEG, I lived at home with my mother and step father in Indianapolis, Indiana. I was in the largest public school in the state. My education was going excellently, but my home life was not ideal for a teenage girl. The situation at home was getting to the point where I had to move out. I moved to Defiance, Ohio, to live with my grandparents. I wasn't sure what to do with my education. I knew I couldn't go back to public school because the vocational education I had been receiving before wouldn't lineup with regular public school. I thought I was going to have to drop out completely and get my GED. It wasn't long after I had the dilemma that I discovered NHEG. With the personal help of Director Pamela Clark, and my tutors, I'm on track to graduation in the near future. My education has been a bit crazy over the last few months, NHEG has helped me tremendously.
Desiree (2014)

Testimonials VI

I am being tutored in reading by New Heights three times a week. I like it. It is working. It give me something to look forward to by helping me prepare to learn how to read, so people don't look at me like I am illiterate. I would like to try to attend college and learn to do small engine repair, so I can get a job and provide for my kids and family. I will give my kids a skill of working on small engines. It helps my kids that I get tutored because I do my homework with them and I can help them with theirs. This makes me feel better about myself. Pamela Clark is looking for a volunteer speech teacher for me. I like how New Heights finds volunteers to help people in need. It is also not expensive. It costs me only $45 a month to get tutored three times a week and you can go all year round. My wife also likes all the activities for kids and insights she gets for kids.
Billy S (2014)

Many more testimonials can be seen by visiting:

<http://www.newheights.org/for/New-Heights-Educational-Group-Testimonials>

newheightseducation@yahoo.com
www.newheightseducation.org
www.school.newheightseducation.org
14735 Power Dam Road by appointment
Defiance, Ohio 43512
419-786-0247

Guidestar Transparency

The Fort Wayne, Indiana Journal Gazette Readers' Choice contest had over 200,000 votes cast! The New Heights Educational Group (NHEG) placed 3rd for Best Learning / Tutoring Center!

New Heights Educational Group (NHEG) was named Top Global Business of the Year 2022 in the Skill Development Category by Great Companies.

New Heights Educational Group

QR Codes

for quick access to a world of information

Course Catalog

New Heights Show on Education

NHEG Awards Won

NHEG Online Store

NHEG Brochure
2021NHEG DONATE
NOWNHEG Learning
AnnexNHEG Media
Pack 2021

NHEG Website

Organization Charts - Current Volunteers, Student Leadership
Members and Adult Advisory Group

SCAN ME

staticQR NHEG
Volunteer Opportunities

• NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com • (419) 786-0247 •

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org/NHEG-educational-programs/virtual-reading-program/>

Don't sweat it, donate it!

GIVE TODAY

CALL 911 OR

1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

Madison County Sheriff's Office (Ohio) 1-740-852-1212

MISSING

HELP BRING ME HOME

missingkids.org

NCMEC: 1462587

Aaliyah Jones

Missing Since: Oct 4, 2022

Missing From: Canal Winchester, OH

DOB: Dec 8, 2004

Age Now: 17

Sex: Female

Race: Black

Hair Color: Black

Eye Color: Brown

Height: 5'4"

Weight: 185 lbs

Aaliyah was last seen on October 4, 2022.

DON'T HESITATE!

CALL 911 OR

1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

ANYONE HAVING INFORMATION SHOULD CONTACT

Fairfield County Sheriff's Office (Ohio) 1-740-652-7911

Case handled by

MISSING

HELP BRING ME HOME

missingkids.org

NCMEC: 1462906

Regan Shaw

Missing Since: Oct 10, 2022

Missing From: Mount Vernon, OH

DOB: Nov 6, 2005

Age Now: 16

Sex: Female

Race: White

Hair Color: Brown

Eye Color: Brown

Height: 5'5"

Weight: 110 lbs

Regan may still be in the local area or she may travel to Washington Court House, Greenfield, Mount Sterling or Columbus, Ohio. Her hair may be dyed to blonde and black. Regan has multiple tattoos on her hands along with multiple ear piercings.

DON'T HESITATE!

CALL 911 OR

1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

ANYONE HAVING INFORMATION SHOULD CONTACT

Mount Vernon Police Department (Ohio) 1-740-397-2222

Case handled by

MISSING

HELP BRING ME HOME

missingkids.org

NCMEC: 1462592

Kayden Clark

Missing Since: Oct 5, 2022

Missing From: Cincinnati, OH

DOB: Mar 20, 2006

Age Now: 16

Sex: Male

Race: White

Hair Color: Brown

Eye Color: Hazel

Height: 5'4"

Weight: 117 lbs

Kayden was last seen on October 5, 2022.

DON'T HESITATE!

CALL 911 OR

1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

ANYONE HAVING INFORMATION SHOULD CONTACT

Cincinnati Police Department (Ohio) 1-513-765-1212

Case handled by

MISSING

HELP BRING ME HOME

missingkids.org

NCMEC: 1462808

Kyle Heard

Missing Since: Oct 9, 2022

Missing From: Columbus, OH

DOB: Jan 14, 2007

Age Now: 15

Sex: Male

Race: Black

Hair Color: Black

Eye Color: Brown

Height: 5'6"

Weight: 135 lbs

Both photos shown are of Kyle. He was last seen on October 9, 2022.

Extra Photo

DON'T HESITATE!

CALL 911 OR

1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

ANYONE HAVING INFORMATION SHOULD CONTACT

Columbus Police Department (Ohio) 1-614-645-4545

Case handled by

24

25

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, July 22 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated PG
Inclusive Audience

Order your FREE TICKETS online at fwcivic.org or call
(260) 424 - 5220
USE CODE: NHEG

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, September 9 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated PG-13

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, November 4 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated G

IN THE WING
Thursday, May 12 @ 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - PG-13

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, February 10 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated G

A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum has socially distanced seating available in the last six rows of the theatre.
Masks are recommended but not required.

This season the Fort Wayne Civic Theatre will add a new step for our audiences from Project "Lights Up!" Two out of the six performances will be considered Inclusive Audiences.

Inclusive Audience Performances are designed to create a more traditional performing arts experience that is welcoming to all families with children with disabilities and the audience includes patrons from our IN THE WINGS program.

Accommodations for inclusive performances:

- Use of personal tech gadgets (notebooks, pads, smart phones, etc.) allowed - no photography allowed
- A pre-show announcement will inform patrons of any dramatic lighting or special effects.
- Patrons are free to leave their seats during the performance
- Patrons may bring their own snacks into the theatre
- Designated quiet area
- Venue staff trained to be inviting and accommodating to families' needs
- Noise cancelling headphones available to sign out during performance
- Sensory-friendly kits available to sign out from the venue.

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, March 24 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated PG
Inclusive Audience

Thank you to our sponsors!

Reading Ambassador Rhone-Ann Huang

New Heights Educational Group is now offering a free five-tier Reading Program.
Available for multiple age groups.

VIRTUAL READING PROGRAM FIVE-TIER PROGRAM

Tier One

Is a virtual reading program designed for young children to read books along with 6-year-old Rishaan Gupta on special occasions.
(Pre-school - 1st grade students)

Tier Two

In partnership with 2nd & 7 Foundation and our Reading Ambassador Rhone-Ann Huang, we have implemented a virtual reading program for children. As part of 2nd & 7's "Tackling Illiteracy" program, and with the help of Zoom video conferencing, student-athletes will read with second-grade students and discuss why reading and staying on top of school-work is essential.

Tiers Three - Five

Tier Three: Rhone-Ann Huang is reading 9th- to 12th-grade and young adult books weekly.

Tier Four: Rhone-Ann Huang reading time for students from 2nd to 5th grade.

Tier Five: Rhone-Ann Huang reading time for students from 6th - 8th grade.

<https://NewHeightsEducation.org/NHEG-educational-programs/virtual-reading-program/>

LIMA SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA STORYTIME EPISODES

Serving hundreds of children each year in seven counties, "Symphony Storytime" is a fun and lively program that pairs beloved children's books such as "Where the Wild Things Are" and "The Story of Ferdinand," with classic masterworks performed live by Lima Symphony musicians.

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

419-786-0247

NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com
<http://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>

GREAT COMPANIES.

Certificate

This is to Certify that

New Heights Educational Group

has been awarded as one of the Top Global Business of the Year 2022 in the Skill Development Category

Arwinder Kaur
President

www.GreatCompanies.in Global Business Award

2022

WINNER

Got the need for speed...but your vehicle keeps breaking down?

Why not donate it?

Easy Process | Free Towing | Tax Benefits

Give Today

DONATE
A VEHICLE

New Heights Educational Group Named Best Children ¶ Adults Literacy Group

New Heights Educational Group (NHEG) has been named a U.S. winner in Acquisition International's 2022 Non-Profit Organisation Awards. NHEG was awarded Best Children & Adults Literacy Group – Ohio.

This is the second win for NHEG from Acquisition International, a monthly digital business magazine with global circulation published by AI Global Media Ltd, a publishing house based in the United Kingdom.

Pamela Clark, Founder/Executive Director of NHEG stated, "We extend a warm thank you to Acquisition International for recognizing the work of our organization and its many volunteers. We are thankful for and appreciate your continued support."

More information about the NHEG award and other award winners is available via the links below:

- Directory listing - <https://www.acquisition-international.com/winners-list/?award=98329-2022>
- The official press release - <https://www.acquisition-international.com/acquisition-international-is-proud-to-announce-the-winners-of-the-2022-non-profit-organisation-awards/>
- New Heights Educational Group - New Heights Educational Group 2022 (acquisition-international.com)

HEROES OF LIBERTY

<https://newheightseducation.org/NHEG-news/heroes-of-liberty-partnership/>

WIN THE

$10,000

CARNEGIE DARTLET SCHOLARSHIP

https://www.collegexpress.com/reg/signup?campaign=10k&utm_campaign=NHEG&utm_medium=link&utm_source=NHEG

amazonsmile
You shop. Amazon gives.

amazon smile

Already an AmazonSmile customer? Sign in Experience feel-good shopping

Shop at smile.amazon.com and we'll donate to your favorite charitable organization, at no cost to you.

Get started

Same products, same prices, same service.
Amazon donates 0.5% of the price of eligible purchases.

When you join AmazonSmile you can...

Generate donations

Shop at smile.amazon.com and we'll donate 0.5% of eligible purchases to your favorite charitable organization—no fees, no extra cost.

Donate requested items to charities

Thousands of charities created AmazonSmile Charity Lists of items they need right now. Simply browse, order, and enjoy giving.

Over 1 million charities. See their stories.

CASCADIA PTA

AmazonSmile donations help Cascadia Elementary PTA support our students' growth by contributing to our school fund. This fund supports...

See more

JUSTIN PETS

Justin Pets Alive! thrives on community. Because of community support, our...

HEIFER INTERNATIONAL

For 75 years, Heifer International has equipped poor farming communities with...

Make NHEG your charity of choice when shopping
AmazonSmile

SHOP NOW

<https://smile.amazon.com>

GIVE TODAY

Our Nonprofit Makes Donating Your Vehicle Easy

Give your used vehicle new purpose when you donate it to the cause you care about. Donating is easy, the pick-up is free, and your gift is tax-deductible.

Donate via memberhub
memberhub

HTTPS://NHEG.MEMBERHUB.GIVES/NHEG

<https://nheg.memberhub.gives/nheg/Campaign/Details>

Friends of NHEG,

we need your help. Our operating funds are critically low, and this is having a significant impact on the programs and services we're able to offer.

Please consider a DONATION of any amount to help us continue to support the students and families who benefit from our programs. Here are four ways to donate today:

Ways to Give:

Make NHEG your charity of choice when shopping AmazonSmile: <https://smile.amazon.com>

Donate via the NHEG website: <https://NewHeightsEducation.org/support-NHEG>

Donate via memberhub: <https://NHEG.Memberhub.Gives/NHEG/>

Donate via Kindest: <https://kindest.com/223522-New-Heights-Educational-Group-resource-and-literacy-center>

Join our giveback cause direct link: <https://www.givebacks.com/join/50020cef-142a-4fb6-bcd1-245e30feae15>

Express Mobile Sign Up:

Use this express link when promoting givebacks at an in-person event. New backers will be able to quickly create an account and link their credit card to access local dining offers. This link will only work on a mobile device. We recommend using the QR code.

<https://www.givebacks.com/mobile/web/50020cef-142a-4fb6-bcd1-245e30feae15>

<https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/>
(419) 786-0247 • NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com

Save a little ← of this!

Keeping that extra car running is expensive

Donate your vehicle

<https://careasy.org/nonprofit/NewHeightsEducationalGroup>

<https://nheg.memberhub.gives/nheg/Campaign/Details>

New Heights Educational Group

EDComic MY DREAM

Story, characters & Coloring: Barbara Bullen:

I dreamt I was an astronaut who travelled on a spaceship to Mars. And when I woke up I knew what I wanted to be when I grow up.

So I'm gonna start now, whilst I'm still a boy, and be good at school, and get good grades, so I can one day be an astronaut.

New Heights Educational Group™
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

CAN YOUR TEEN DO THIS IN 30 SECONDS OR LESS?

$$1\frac{5}{6} + 2\frac{7}{9} = \frac{83}{18} = 4\frac{11}{18} = 4.61$$

If not... Get
FRACTIONS MADE EASY
WITH A TI-30XA
SCIENTIFIC CALCULATOR

7 ONLINE TUTORIAL VIDEO LESSONS

30 DAY NO RISK - ONLY $9

LEARN MORE AT:

HTTPS://WWW.TRIADMTHINC.COM/FRACTIONS-MADE-EASY/?AFFILIATE=1996

Attention Homeschool Families:

Stop buying curriculum every year and invest in a long-time plan encompassing all grade levels in one spot!

Our site membership admits two named adults living in the same household, your children and/or grandchildren under the age of 21, or adult students.

The price for membership is $6.00 per month.

Membership provides access to over 1,280 free, discounted and unique courses, along with access to an additional 284 classroom resources for all subject matters.

• <https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/> • (419) 786-0247 • NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com •

Tutorfly

NHEG Award-Winning Tutoring Program is currently accepting students!

Get Started Today!
for $80 for the first month and $45 per month after that!

Core subjects require a three-hour-a-week commitment at one-hour intervals. Other subject matters and Foreign Language Courses require two hours a week at one-hour intervals.

NHEG implements Google Classroom, Tutorfly and Zoom into its tutoring sessions.

The Tutorfly system is used on the NHEG website. Our new tutoring ecosystem includes an all-new look and feel for our award-winning tutoring program. Students can enroll in our tutoring program and are then screened for the best placement. We use Zoom and offer an all-new virtual whiteboard, secure messaging communication and organized resources with student/tutor private linking.

Sign up today:

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org/NHEG-educational-programs/NHEG-tutoring-program/>

Student Advisory Group

Meetings held in person and/or online via Zoom

Sign Up at:

<https://school.NewHeightsEducation.org/about/NHEG-groups/student-advisory-group/>

Student Leadership Council

Meetings held in person and/or online via Zoom

Sign Up at:

<https://school.NewHeightsEducation.org/about/NHEG-groups/student-leadership-council/>

The National and International Student Advisory Group (SAG) and Student Leadership Council (SLC) promote youth leadership, volunteer service, community service, networking, scholarships, service-learning, leadership experience, fundraising, and critical thinking among students of all ages. Student advisors/leaders offer programming suggestions, delegate responsibilities to other students and bring a valuable perspective to New Heights' work. All opinions are important, and all points of view are respected.

New Heights Educational Group™
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

<http://www.NewHeightsEducation.org> • (419) 786-0247

New Heights Educational Group (NHEG)
and
Chamber Theatre Productions
offer a unique virtual education experience

Edgar Allan Poe: The Midnight Collection

A one-hour dramatic educational package based on the works of Poe, offering flexible one-week rental options for classroom or remote learning and enter code: HS5 at checkout - and you will receive 5% off.

To learn more about this unique opportunity, visit

<https://school.chambertheatre.com/>

Chamber Theatre Productions
America's Premiere Educational Theatre Company

New Heights Educational Group™
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>

VOLUNTEER PAGES

NEW VOLUNTEERS

MICHAEL FRANK

VOLUNTEERS OF THE MONTH

MICHAEL ANDERSON

RAMYASREE ARVA

JODY BOWDEN

KATIE BUCHHOP GERKEN M.

LAURA CASANOVA

CAROLINE CHEN

KRISTEN CONGEDO

JAVIER CORTÉS

SARIKA GAUBA

ERIKA HANSON

JACKSON HOCHSTETTLER

RHONE-ANN HUANG

PADMAPRIYA KEDHARNATH

PRIYA

MARINA KLIMI

JULIA LANDY

NINA LE

VICTOR RODRIGUEZ

THE INTERNET RADIO PROGRAM
FROM NEW HEIGHTS EDUCATIONAL GROUP

NEW HEIGHTS

SHOW ON EDUCATION

Internet Radio Show Spots now available

The New Heights Educational Group is now offering the opportunity for the public or businesses that promote education to purchase sponsor advertisement on our internet radio show.

All products, business and service advertisements will need to be reviewed by our research department and must be approved by NHEG home office.

All advertisements must be family friendly.

Those interested in purchasing packages can choose for our host to read the advertisement on their show or supply their own pre-recorded advertisement.

If interested, please visit our website for more details.

<https://Radio.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

The NHEG Radio Show is an internet radio program in which the hosts cover various topics of education for Home, Charter and Public School families in Ohio.

These Communities include Paulding, Defiance, Van Wert, Delphos, Lima, Putnam County, Wauseon and Napoleon.

For an invitation to the live show, visit us on Facebook or Twitter to sign up, or email us at info@NewHeightsEducation.org

If you are looking to listen to past shows, please check out this document

<https://docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d/1oW5gxFB7WNgtREowSsrJqWP9flz8bsulcgoR-QyvURE/edit#gid=529615429>

The New Heights SHOW ON EDUCATION

Join host

Pamela Clark

AIRING WEDNESDAYS
6:00 PM EST

Internet Radio

As she discusses education news and happenings

Interested in Broadcasting?

Attention Students interested in broadcasting or working in radio and television: NHEG offers unique opportunities for students to explore.

Positions are all volunteer based and offer hands on experience working on a syndicated show, "New Heights Show on Education" (currently only online)

The Positions of Interest Include:

Internet Radio Host Assistant, Internet Radio Monitors, Creating of New Media, Editing Audio and Video, Press Secretary, Experience with Spreaker and Zoom, Experience working as a Communications Secretary, Hosting of Round-table discussions. There might also be an opportunity to become a host for our organization.

Contact us:

NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com

419-786-0247

<http://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>

<https://Radio.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

Learning Annex: <https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resume and Literacy Center

The Voices of NHEG Internet Radio

Barbara Bullen

Kathy Woodring

Anna Shi

Charlotte McGuire

Sadia Ejaz

Maria Ortiz

Briana
Dincher

Pamela Clark

Erika Hanson

NEW HEIGHTS
SHOW ON EDUCATION

Victoria Lowery

Priscilena Shearon

Olaniyan Taibat

Shannon Williamson

Freddie Bandola Jr.

Buffie Williams

Kaden Behan

Check out NHEG Free Book Promotions this Holiday season.

Unraveling Reading

- Free Book Promotion

Friday, November 25, 2022, 12:00

AM PST Tuesday, November 29,

2022, 11:59 PM PST

<https://kdp.amazon.com/>

One Nonprofit's Journey to Success

- Free Book Promotion

Wednesday, December 7, 2022, 12:00 AM PST

Sunday, December 11, 2022, 11:59 PM PST

<https://kdp.amazon.com/>

Unpredictable: The walk in and out of darkness

- Free Book Promotion with code eBook: WRZDG2

Get 10% off from from 12/23/2022 - 12/31/2022

at <https://store.bookbaby.com/>

"UNPREDICTABLE: THE WALK IN AND OUT OF DARKNESS AND HONEY KASPER" IS OFFERING A 10% OFF BOOK PROMOTION.

Give yourself
the gift and read this book of survival with 10% of the audio book.
Code: WRZDG2

from 12/23/2022 - 12/31/2022 at <https://store.bookbaby.com/>
and visit
<https://UnpredictableTheWalk.com/>

UNPREDICTABLE:
THE WALK IN AND OUT OF DARKNESS

UnpredictableTheWalk.com

Read the Story

One Nonprofit's Journey to Success - NHEG's New Book

Savneet Singh, MS, M.Ed., M.Sc.

About Our Writer

Savneet discovered the world of freelance writing 9 years back and she is currently exploring the endless possibilities associated with it.

She had the pleasure to work on several projects as a writer, instructional designer and social media specialist.

She has a strong inclination for spirituality, and practices meditation and yoga every morning during the sunrise.

Book Summary

This book will make people believe that there's a natural power dynamic that comes along with personal experience and willingness to serve others. Parents, nonprofit stakeholders or just someone who wants to learn more about educational services and opportunities - everyone will find this book helpful. Many readers will find Ms. Clark's good work, perseverance and Christian faith inspirational.

Order Your Copy on Amazon Today!

UNRAVELING READING

by Daniela Silva

Available on Amazon Now!

Unraveling Reading is a response to the needs and difficulties faced by parents, students and teachers with respect to literacy and education. It presents strategies and alternatives for developing reading and writing in children, youth and adults in a practical and dynamic way.

Through diverse educational lessons, activities address three different learning styles, in respect to how the brain learns and processes information visually, auditorily and kinesthetically.

Unraveling Reading also includes examples of activities to improve reading and writing skills through movement, using the Brain Gym technique.

Daniela Silva is Brazilian, and a college graduate with a degree in Pedagogy (with skills in School Management and Business Education), an MBA in People Management, and a postgraduate degree in Neuroeducation.

Daniela has great motivation to transform lives through knowledge.

The New Heights Educational Group, Inc.
A Public Charity 501(c)(3) Nonprofit Organization
www.NewHeightsEducation.org
419-786-0247

FREE ACCESS TO FIRST MODULE!

ACTIVE LEARNING BOOSTER™

SELF-PACED HANDS-ON ONLINE TEACHER TRAINING PROGRAM FOR EARLY CHILDHOOD & PRIMARY EDUCATORS

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLETION

YOU'LL LEARN:

- HOW to support ALL areas of child development through Active Experiential Learning
- HOW to create Indoor and Outdoor Active Learning Experiences
- HOW to use everyday objects in Active Holistic Learning
- HOW to design and implement Play & Learning Stations
- HOW to use technology to support Active Experiential Learning
- HOW to provide Multi-Sensory support
- And so much more!

Aligned with EYFS Framework & NVQ in CCLD Level 3

The Early Years Foundation Stage

NATURAL BORN LEADERS.ORG

NEW PAYMENT PLANS from $11.99 per person!

PROGRAM DURATION: 3 MONTHS

NHEG November Birthday

- NOV 03 Jon Aitken
- NOV 05 Laura Casanova
- NOV 13 Chase Osborne
- NOV 21 Margaret Spangler
- NOV 26 Piper Sharpe
- NOV 26 Frani Wyner

NHEG December Birthday

- DEC 03 Heather Ruggiero
- DEC 03 Padmapriya (Priya) Kedharnath
- DEC 05 Chetan Muvvala
- DEC 14 Sean Urke
- DEC 19 Roberta Perkins
- DEC 23 Jackson Hochstetler
- DEC 25 Nina Le

NHEG November Anniversaries

NOV 04 Cheska Bagalso

NOV 09 Sean Urke

NOV 20 Bruno Moses Patrick

NOV 24 Laura Casanova

NHEG December Anniversaries

DEC 10 Barbara Bullen

DEC 10 Frani Wyner

DEC 20 Erika Hanson

NHEG Volunteers Reviews

Vlowery

Volunteer 09/24/2022

Rating: 5

I found New Heights to be a group of well-intentioned individuals doing great work.

Ninale

Volunteer 08/04/2022

Rating: 5

I am a volunteer at NHEG and after a year of being part of this amazing group, I have had an awesome experience, not only able to practice my interest, but also help others along the way. NHEG is a place to help or to be helped.

HOW TO EARN

BOX TOPS MAKES IT EASY

All you need is your phone, Download the Box Tops app\shop as you normally would\then use the app to scan your store receipt within 14 days of purchase*The app will identify Box Tops products on your receipt and automatically credit your school's earnings online*

Twice a year\your school will receive a check and can use that cash to buy whatever it needs,

DO YOU NEED TO ENROLL YOUR SCHOOL? FIND OUT HOW HERE.

<https://www.boxtops4education.com/enroll>

PRESS RELEASE

STEVIE WINNER PROVIDES LITERACY AND EDUCATIONAL SUPPORT TO ADULTS AND CHILDREN

THE STEVIE® AWARDS
The World's Premier Business Award Competitions

Their Mission: Stevie Award winner New Heights Educational Group, Inc. promotes literacy for children and adults by offering a range of educational support services. Such services include assisting families in the selection of schools, organization of educational activities, and acquisition of materials. They promote a healthy learning environment and enrichment programs for families of preschool and school-age children, including children with special needs.

Award-winning organization New Heights Educational Group (NHEG) was formed in 2006 by Mrs. Pamela Clark. Mrs. Clark discovered that families needed to cooperate, especially in educating children with learning difficulties such as ADHD, bipolar disorder, autism, and neurological disorders. NHEG has served over 350,000 students via online services and courses. Mrs. Clark leads a team of 92 volunteers who research advancements and provide training to teachers and tutors exploring different learning styles.

NEW HEIGHTS EDUCATIONAL GROUP WINS SILVER AND BRONZE STEVIE® AWARDS IN 2022 STEVIE AWARDS FOR SALES & CUSTOMER SERVICE

Defiance, Ohio – March 2, 2022 – New Heights Educational Group (NHEG) was presented with a Silver Stevie® Award in the Best Use of Thought Leadership in Customer Service category and a Bronze Stevie® Award in the Best Use of Thought Leadership in Business Development category in the 16th annual Stevie Awards for Sales & Customer Service.

The Stevie Awards for Sales & Customer Service are the world's top honors for customer service, contact center, business development and sales professionals. The Stevie Awards organizes eight of the world's leading business awards programs, also including the prestigious American Business Awards® and International Business Awards®.

Winners will be recognized during a virtual awards ceremony on May 11.

More than 2,300 nominations from organizations of all sizes and in virtually every industry, in 51 nations, were considered in this year's competition. Winners were determined by the average scores of more than 150 professionals worldwide on eight specialized judging committees. Entries were considered in more than 90 categories for customer service and contact center achievements, including Contact Center of the Year, Award for Innovation in Customer Service, and Customer Service Department of the Year; more than 60 categories for sales and business development achievements, ranging from Senior Sales Executive of the Year to Sales Training or Business Development Executive of the Year to Sales Department of the Year; and categories to recognize new products and services, solution providers, and organizations' and individuals' response to the COVID-19 pandemic. New categories this year honor excellence in thought leadership in customer service and sales.

Judges' Comments

- Congratulations on an incredible and amazingly profound mission. Well done.
- Awesome to see enablement through education, developing support around kids for a better future
- Interesting method to meet the requirements and needs of the business
- Congratulations on your successful thought leadership focus on family education and those with special needs!
- Excellent initiative taken by the company. The company seems to have benefitted tremendously under Mrs. Pamela Clark's leadership. Well done on promoting literacy through various educational programs. Worthy of acclaim!
- Supporting your clients every step along the way is the key to building trust. And since people do business with people they know, like, and trust, you can see how essential this is. You can also see how it's the opposite of trying to SELL. It's about guiding them to find the best solution for their problem ...based on where they are in their Decision Journey.

--True general leadership growth opportunities in an equitable social application. This will impact and assist in true across the board growth in thought leadership

--Overall a good and innovative solution to a time tested problem.

--Congratulations NHEG on your valuable contributions to children's education during the Covid crisis!

--New Heights Educational Group has a very fulfilling goal, which is to provide education to the children with learning difficulties. The increase in the number of course offerings is commendable. Their partnerships with various online course providers is a clear indication of their interest in the growth of the children.

Pamela Clark, Executive Director of NHEG, stated, “we are proud of our team of volunteers that work so hard to bring opportunities to families in need. We are honored by these awards.”

“The nominations we received for the 2022 competition illustrate that business development, customer service, and sales professionals worldwide, in all sorts of organizations, have continued to innovate, thrive, and meet customer expectations during the COVID-19 pandemic,” said Stevie Awards president Maggie Gallagher Miller. “The judges have recognized and rewarded their achievements, and we join them in applauding this year’s winners for their continued success. We look forward to recognizing them on May 11.”

Details about the Stevie Awards for Sales & Customer Service and the list of Stevie winners in all categories are available at www.StevieAwards.com/Sales.

About NHEG

New Heights Educational Group, Inc., promotes literacy for children and adults by offering a range of educational support services. Such services include the following: assisting families in the selection of schools; organization of educational activities; and acquisition of materials. We promote a healthy learning environment and various enrichment programs for families of preschool and school-age children, including children with special needs.

About The Stevie Awards

Stevie Awards are conferred in eight programs: the Asia-Pacific Stevie Awards, the German Stevie Awards, the Middle East & North Africa Stevie Awards, The American Business Awards®, The International Business Awards®, the Stevie Awards for Great Employers, the Stevie Awards for Women in Business, and the Stevie Awards for Sales & Customer Service. Stevie Awards competitions receive more than 12,000 entries each year from organizations in more than 70 nations. Honoring organizations of all types and sizes and the people behind them, the Stevies recognize outstanding performances in the workplace worldwide. Learn more about the Stevie Awards at <http://www.StevieAwards.com>.

Nelson Mandela

Peace often brings with it joy and pain.

Joy in the relief that there are no longer racist governmental policies and pain in the attempt to overcome historically racist and prejudicial acts towards those whose skin color is different.

Mandela, you helped overthrow Apartheid.

For this, the world thanks you.

Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela known throughout the world as a revolutionary and political leader who aided in the dismantling of Apartheid; Black South Africans whose lives were filled with fear due to the historical racist and prejudicial governmental policies of South Africa found their hero in Mandela. The world craved such a leader, as Black South Africans lives were filled with violence, fear and the struggle to end racism, and they were severely affected by policies enacted and intended to make them feel subservient and inferior to White South Africans.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nelson_Mandela

Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela (/məˈnɛl ˈdɛlə/;[1] Xhosa: [xolĩḻaḻa mandêːla]; 18 July 1918 – 5 December 2013) was a South African anti-apartheid revolutionary and political leader who served as the first president of South Africa from 1994 to 1999. He was the country's first black head of state and the first elected in a fully representative democratic election. His government focused on dismantling the legacy of apartheid by tackling institutionalised racism and fostering racial reconciliation. Ideologically an African nationalist and socialist, he served as the president of the African National Congress (ANC) party from 1991 to 1997. A Xhosa, Mandela was born into the Thembu royal family in Mvezo, Union of South Africa. He studied law at the University of Fort Hare and the University of Witwatersrand before working as a lawyer in Johannesburg. There he became involved in anti-colonial and African nationalist politics, joining the ANC in 1943 and co-founding its Youth League in 1944. After the National Party's white-only government established apartheid, a system of racial segregation that privileged whites, Mandela and the ANC committed themselves to its overthrow. He was appointed president of the ANC's Transvaal branch, rising to prominence for his involvement in the 1952 Defiance Campaign and the 1955 Congress of the People. He was repeatedly arrested for seditious activities and was unsuccessfully prosecuted in the 1956 Treason Trial. Influenced by Marxism, he secretly joined the banned South African Communist Party (SACP). Although initially committed to nonviolent protest, in association with the SACP he co-founded the militant uMkhonto we Sizwe in 1961 and led a sabotage campaign against the government. He was arrested and imprisoned in 1962, and, following the Rivonia Trial, was sentenced to life imprisonment for conspiring to overthrow the state.

Mandela served 27 years in prison, split between Robben Island, Pollsmoor Prison and Victor Verster Prison. Amid growing domestic and international pressure and fears of racial civil war, President F. W. de Klerk released him in 1990. Mandela and de Klerk led efforts to negotiate an end to apartheid, which resulted in the 1994 multiracial general election in which Mandela led the ANC to victory and became president. Leading a broad coalition government which promulgated a new constitution, Mandela emphasised reconciliation between the country's racial groups and created the Truth and Reconciliation Commission to investigate past human rights abuses. Economically, his administration retained its predecessor's liberal framework despite his own socialist beliefs, also introducing measures to encourage land reform, combat poverty and expand healthcare services. Internationally, Mandela acted as mediator in the Pan Am Flight 103 bombing trial and served as secretary-general of the Non-Aligned Movement from 1998 to 1999. He declined a second presidential term and was succeeded by his deputy, Thabo Mbeki. Mandela became an elder statesman and focused on combating poverty and HIV/AIDS through the charitable Nelson Mandela Foundation.

Mandela was a controversial figure for much of his life. Although critics on the right denounced him as a communist terrorist and those on the far-left deemed him too eager to negotiate and reconcile with apartheid's supporters, he gained international acclaim for his activism. Globally regarded as an icon of democracy and social justice, he received more than 250 honours, including the Nobel Peace Prize. He is held in deep respect within South Africa, where he is often referred to by his Thembu clan name, Madiba, and described as the “Father of the Nation”.

<https://www.un.org/en/events/mandeladay/assets/pdf/mandela100-booklet.pdf>

“Our march to freedom is irreversible. We must not allow fear to stand in our way.” Those who are voteless cannot be expected to continue paying taxes to a government which is not responsible to them. People who live in poverty and starvation cannot be expected to pay exorbitant house rents to the government and local authorities. We furnish the sinews of agriculture and industry. We produce the work of the gold mines, the diamonds and the coal, of the farms and industry, in return for miserable wages.

Why should we continue enriching those who steal the products of our sweat and blood? Those who exploit us and refuse us the right to organise trade unions? ...

I am informed that a warrant for my arrest has been issued, and that the police are looking for me. ... Any serious politician will realise that under present-day conditions in this country, to seek for cheap martyrdom by handing myself to the police is naive and criminal. We have an important programme before us and it is important to carry it out very seriously and without delay. I have chosen this latter course, which is more difficult and which entails more risk and hardship than sitting in gaol. I have had to separate myself from my dear wife and children, from my mother and sisters, to live as an outlaw in my own land. I have had to close my business, to abandon my profession, and live in poverty and misery, as many of my people are doing. ... I shall fight the government side by side with you, inch by inch, and mile by mile, until victory is won. What are you going to do? Will you come along with us, or are you going to cooperate with the government in its efforts to suppress the claims and aspirations of your own people? Or are you going to remain silent and neutral in a matter of life and death to my people, to our people? For my own part I have made my choice. I will not leave South Africa, nor will I surrender. Only through hardship, sacrifice and militant action can freedom be won. The struggle is my life. I will continue fighting for freedom until the end of my days.

“THE STRUGGLE IS MY LIFE,” PRESS STATEMENT ISSUED WHILE UNDERGROUND IN SOUTH AFRICA, 26 JUNE 1961”

Endangered: The Mexican Grey Wolf

Written By: Erika Hanson

The word 'wolf' brings up images of a massive grey and white canid, prowling the forests and tundra of such states as Michigan, Wyoming, and Alaska, just to name a few. This subspecies of wolf is well-known. It's the one heard about in fairytales, seen on documentaries and in books. But the grey wolf is only one of many subspecies of wolves which roam the United States.

One such subspecies is the mexican grey wolf, typically seen in the southwestern United States and Mexico. Known as 'el lobo', this wolf can be found primarily in the states of New Mexico, Arizona, and Texas, as well as in parts of Mexico. The mexican grey wolf is smaller than its cousins to the north, standing at only 25-32 inches tall. Its coat is a mixture of grey, buff, rust and black, and they can have very distinctive markings. They have long legs and can run up to 40 miles (65KM) an hour.

As previously mentioned, these wolves reside in the mountainous regions of the southwestern United States, as well as Mexico. They live and hunt in a pack, with a complex social structure consisting of a mated pair of alpha wolves and their offspring. In captivity, mexican grey wolves can live up to fifteen years. It is estimated that they live roughly ten years in the wild.

Biodiversity continues to be an issue, as today's population is decended from only five wolves: four males and one pregnant female. In the years between 1977 and 1980, these wolves were bred as the basis for a new generation. Although this saved the species from extinction, it provided conservationists with a limited gene pool.

Currently, there are 196 mexican grey wolves in the wild. It is estimated that over a thousand mexican wolves roamed the southwest during the 1900's, but the population has since been decimated by human predation. Due to increasingly low numbers of elk, mule deer, and other prey in the wild, wolves have been forced to find food elsewhere, typically on cattle ranches. From the early twentieth century until 1976 (when the mexican wolf was declared to be an endangered species), they were shot or poisoned either by private individuals protecting their cattle or by government agents, in accordance with legislation current at the time.

In the 1970's, the mexican grey wolf was considered extinct in the wild, and a binational conservation effort began. By breeding the wolves in captivity, zoologists were able to release a small population of mexican grey wolves back into their natural habitat. This population continues to grow, but slowly. Conservation efforts continue, with new legislation being introduced as recently as 2022. With the right resources and patience, the number of mexican grey wolves will continue to grow.

In its proper meaning equality before the law means the right to participate in the making of the laws by which one is governed, a constitution which guarantees democratic rights to all sections of the population, the right to approach the court for protection or relief in the case of the violation of rights guaranteed in the constitution, and the right to take part in the administration of justice as judges, magistrates, attorneys-general, law advisers and similar positions. In the absence of these safeguards the phrase “equality before the law,” in so far as it is intended to apply to us, is meaningless and misleading. All the rights and privileges to which I have referred are monopolized by whites, and we enjoy none of them. (I)consider myself neither morally nor legally obliged to obey laws made by a parliament in which I am not represented. That the will of the people is the basis of “I have cherished the ideal of a democratic and free society.... It is an ideal which I hope to live for and to achieve. But if needs be, it is an ideal for which I am prepared to die.” The authority of government is a principle universally acknowledged as sacred throughout the civilised world, and constitutes the basic foundations of freedom and justice. It is understandable why citizens, who have the vote as well as the right to direct representation in the country’s governing bodies, should be morally and legally bound by the laws governing the country.

It should be equally understandable why we, as Africans, should adopt the attitude that we are neither morally nor legally bound to obey laws which we have not made, nor can we be expected to have confidence in courts which enforce such laws. ...

I hate the practice of race discrimination, and in my hatred I am sustained by the fact that the overwhelming majority of mankind hate it equally. I hate the systematic inculcation of children with colour prejudice and I am sustained in that hatred by the fact that the overwhelming majority of mankind, here and abroad, are with me in that. I hate the racial arrogance which decrees that the good things of life shall be retained as the exclusive right of a minority of the population, and which reduces the majority of the population to a position of subservience and inferiority, and maintains them as voteless chattels to work where they are told and behave as they are told by the ruling minority. I am sustained in that hatred by the fact that the overwhelming majority of mankind both in this country and abroad are with me.

Nothing that this court can do to me will change in any way that hatred in me, which can only be removed by the removal of the injustice and the inhumanity which I have sought to remove from the political and social life of this country.

COURT STATEMENT, PRETORIA, SOUTH AFRICA, 15 OCTOBER–7 NOVEMBER 1962

Mandela, we love you for what you stood for

The right for equality

The right to end racism

The right to be human

The right for governmental policies to be just, and

The right to be free.

Thurgood Marshall

Written By: Barbara Bullen

https://www.oyez.org/justices/thurgood_marshall

Thurgood Marshall had a fresh, passionate voice and became a champion of civil rights, both on the bench and through almost 30 Supreme Court victories before his appointment, during times of severe racial strains. Marshall was born in Baltimore, Maryland, on July 2, 1908, to Norma Arica and William Canfield Marshall. Marshall’s mother was a kindergarten teacher and his father was an amateur writer who worked as a dining-car waiter on a railroad, later becoming a chief steward at a ritzy club. When Marshall’s father had a day off, he would occasionally take his sons to court so they could watch the legal procedure and arguments presented. Afterwards, the three would debate legal issues and current events together. Marshall’s father would challenge his sons on the points they made, constantly encouraging them to prove their case. Growing up in Baltimore, Marshall experienced the racial discrimination that shaped his passion for civil rights early on. The city had a death rate for African-Americans that was twice that of Caucasians, and due to school segregation, Marshall was forced to go to an all-black grade school. Once, he was unable to use the bathroom because all public restrooms were reserved for whites. Despite the times, Marshall’s parents tried to shelter him from the reality of racism. They earned enough money to live in a nice area, and he was able to attend a first-rate high school. He was often mischievous and sent out of class to read the Constitution for misbehavior.

When Marshall graduated high school in 1925, he knew the Constitution backwards and forwards. Marshall was accepted to Lincoln University in Oxford, Pennsylvania, from where his brother had just graduated. It was known as the black counterpart to Princeton, and one of his classmates was the famous writer Langston Hughes. Marshall chose to focus more on the social life of college. Because of his intelligence, he was able to get through with little effort, but after getting suspended for hazing with his fraternity, he began to focus on academics. Marshall joined the debate club, which helped him realize his passion for becoming a lawyer. He also became more involved with civil rights and helped desegregate a movie theater, which he later described as one of the happiest moments in his life. Marshall met his wife, Vivian Burey, while taking a weekend trip with his friends to Philadelphia.

They soon married on September 4, 1929, before Marshall started his last semester. He graduated college in 1930 as a top-notch student. After being denied by his first choice, the University of Maryland Law School, due to the color of his skin, Marshall decided to go to Howard University. He and his wife moved in with his parents, and his mother sold her wedding ring to help pay for his law school. There he learned about civil rights law and began to think of the Constitution as a living document. His mentors introduced him to the world of the NAACP, often bringing him to attend meetings and watch lawyers discuss key issues. One of the mentors who made the biggest impression upon Marshall was Charles Houston, who taught him to defeat racial discrimination through the use of existing laws. Marshall graduated as valedictorian of his class in 1933 and moved back to Baltimore.

Marshall denied a postgraduate scholarship to Harvard in order to start his own practice and opened an office in east Baltimore. A few people did come to him for help, though unable to pay. Marshall turned none of them away. He began to develop his style as he took cases dealing with police brutality, evictions and harsh landlords. Marshall was respectful but forceful in presenting his case. As his name began to gain notice, he earned big clients such as labor organizations, building associations, and corporations. Marshall started to volunteer with the NAACP and eventually became one of their attorneys, joining his mentor Houston to argue cases together. He won his first case arguing that the University of Maryland Law School should allow an African-American admission. In 1935, Houston got Marshall appointed as Assistant Special Counsel for New York in the organization.

From then on, the two began planning on how to have the Supreme Court overrule the separate but equal doctrine. After Houston resigned and Marshall took over as Special Counsel in 1938, he traveled to dangerous areas in the South in order to investigate lynching, the denial of voting rights, jury service, and fair trials to African-Americans. The face of the NAACP had soon become that of Marshall's.

In 1940, the NAACP set up a legal activist organization known as Fund, Inc., of which Marshall was hired to be special counsel. He was able to work toward his goal of challenging segregation in education. He won his first Supreme Court case dealing with forced confession; and after President Truman rejected the separate but equal doctrine in relation to the G.I. Bill, Marshall was ready to bring the education issue into full light. Marshall finally got the case he had been hoping for, and in 1952 argued Brown v. Board of Education. The case was reargued in 1953, and after five months of waiting, the Supreme Court delivered its opinion that invalidated the separate but equal doctrine. In 1961, President Kennedy appointed Marshall as federal judge to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in New York City. Marshall spent four years on the court, and none of his opinions were reversed on appeal to the Supreme Court. In 1965, President Johnson called upon Marshall to be the country's next Solicitor General. Marshall was sworn into office, but only spent two years in the position. In 1967, the President appointed him as the first African-American to be an Associate Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court. Marshall's voice was a liberal one that held great influence early on in his term. As a proponent of judicial activism, he believed that the United States had a moral imperative to move progressively forward. He staunchly supported upholding individual rights, expanding civil rights, and limiting the scope of criminal punishment. Justice William Brennan shared many of Marshall's opinions and they usually voted in the same bloc. In Furman v. Georgia, these justices argued the death penalty was unconstitutional in all circumstances, and dissented from the subsequent overruling opinion, Gregg v. Georgia, a few years later. He also made separate contributions to labor law (Teamsters v. Terry), securities law (TSC Industries, Inc. v. Northway, Inc.), and tax law (Cottage Savings Ass'n v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue). He had strong views on affirmative action and contributed greatly to opinions on constitutional law. Marshall maintained a down-to-earth style and would often joke with Chief Justice Burger as they passed in the hallways by asking "What's shakin', Chief baby?"

As the court made a shift towards conservatism, however, Marshall became frustrated and his influence weakened. Despite the change of currents, Marshall's voice remained strong until his retirement, when he was succeeded by Associate Justice Clarence Thomas. Marshall died on January 24, 1993 of heart failure in Bethesda, Maryland.

"Thurgood Marshall." Oyez, www.oyez.org/justices/thurgood_marshall. Accessed 2 Jun. 2022.

<https://usa.usembassy.de/etexts/gov/marshall.pdf>

Justice for All: The Legacy of Thurgood Marshall

<https://www.archives.gov/milestone-documents/brown-v-board-ofeducation#:~:text=On%20May%2017%2C%201954%2C%20>

U.S.,amendment%20and%20

was%20therefore%20unconstitutional.

Brown v. Board of Education (1954)

In this milestone decision, the Supreme Court ruled that separating children in public schools on the basis of race was unconstitutional. It signaled the end of legalized racial segregation in the schools of the United States, overruling the "separate but equal" principle set forth in the 1896 Plessy v. Ferguson case.

On May 17, 1954, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Earl Warren delivered the unanimous ruling in the landmark civil rights case Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, Kansas. Statesanctioned segregation of public schools was a violation of the 14th amendment and was therefore unconstitutional. This historic decision marked the end of the "separate but equal" precedent set by the Supreme Court nearly 60 years earlier in Plessy v. Ferguson and served as a catalyst for the expanding civil rights movement during the decade of the 1950s.

Thurgood Marshall

Thurgood is famous for the Brown v. Board of Education case where "separate but equal" was held to be unconstitutional in public schools.

He is a hero for the Civil Rights Era and for the future where his determination, strength, and courage enabled him to stop racism and inequality in schools by taking action.

Thurgood Marshall, Happy Birthday.

CLAUDETTE COLVIN

Written By: Barbara Bullen

When racism rears its ugly head against you should you take action to stop the pain you feel of being discriminated against the laws that aren't right
the laws to protect only whites!

When one hears about the Civil Rights era, it immediately brings to mind activists; Martin Luther King, Jr., Rosa Parks and organizations like the NAACP and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. There are also many other leaders and activists that are in history books throughout the United States and the World. In 1955, a teenager stood up for her rights and was arrested even before the infamous Rosa Parks stand. Rosa Parks, who worked for the NAACP as the secretary for the Montgomery Chapter, was arrested for not getting up from her seat for a White man on a bus. Claudette Colvin, a Black teenager attended Booker T. Washington High School, only 15 at the time, didn't want her constitutional rights violated even though segregation on public transit was the law. Whites were to be seated in the front of the bus, and if there were no seats left for Whites than Blacks had to get up from their seats at the back for Whites to be seated.

Colvin lived in troubled times; times when segregation divided the nation so that Blacks took a back seat to the lives of Whites. Segregation was the norm and the daily lives of all who traveled the public transit until Colvin took a stand.

In Montgomery, Alabama, Colvin is said to be a pioneer, one who led the way and helped end segregation on public transit. When she was forcibly removed from the bus and arrested on March 2, 1955, her attorney, Fred Gray, along with four other plaintiffs filed a federal case, in Federal District Court, February 1, 1956, Browder vs. Gayle, to challenge segregation on public transit. A three-judge panel found the law unconstitutional which was appealed to the Supreme Court where it upheld the state court ruling, finding the law unconstitutional.

When one hears about the Civil Rights era, it immediately brings to mind activists; Martin Luther King, Jr., Rosa Parks and organizations like the NAACP and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. There are also many other leaders and activists that are in history books throughout the United States and the World. In 1955, a teenager stood up for her rights and was arrested even before the infamous Rosa Parks stand. Rosa Parks, who worked for the NAACP as the secretary for the Montgomery Chapter, was arrested for not getting up from her seat for a White man on a bus. Claudette Colvin, a Black teenager attended Booker T. Washington High School, only 15 at the time, didn't want her constitutional rights violated even though segregation on public transit was the law. Whites were to be seated in the front of the bus, and if there were no seats left for Whites than Blacks had to get up from their seats at the back for Whites to be seated.

Colvin lived in troubled times; times when segregation divided the nation so that Blacks took a back seat to the lives of Whites. Segregation was the norm and the daily lives of all who traveled the public transit until Colvin took a stand.

In Montgomery, Alabama, Colvin is said to be a pioneer, one who led the way and helped end segregation on public transit. When she was forcibly removed from the bus and arrested on March 2, 1955, her attorney, Fred Gray, along with four other plaintiffs filed a federal case, in Federal District Court, February 1, 1956, Browder vs. Gayle, to challenge segregation on public transit. A three-judge panel found the law unconstitutional which was appealed to the Supreme Court where it upheld the state court ruling, finding the law unconstitutional.

"Browder v. Gayle 142 F. Supp. 707 (M.D. Ala. 1956) Decided Jun 5, 1956 709 *709 RIVES, Circuit Judge. Statement of the Case. The purpose of this action is to test the constitutionality of both the statutes of the State of Alabama and the ordinances of the City of Montgomery which require the segregation of the white and colored races on the motor buses of the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., *711 a common carrier of passengers in said City and its police jurisdiction.

1 2 711 1 Title 48, § 301(31a, b, c), Code of Alabama of 1940, as amended, which provide: "§301(31a).

Separate accommodations for white and colored races. — All passenger stations in this state operated by any motor transportation company shall have separate waiting rooms or space and separate ticket windows for the white and colored races, but such accommodations for the races shall be equal. All motor transportation companies or operators of vehicles carrying passengers for hire in this state, whether intrastate or interstate passengers, shall at all times provide equal but separate accommodations on each vehicle for the white and colored races. The conductor or agent of the motor transportation company in charge of any vehicle is authorize and required to assign each passenger to the division of the vehicle designated for the race to which the passenger belongs; and, if the passenger refuses to occupy the division to which he is assigned, the conductor or agent may refuse to carry the passenger on the vehicle; and, for such refusal, neither the conductor or agent of the motor transportation company nor the motor transportation company shall be liable in damages. Any motor transportation company or person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars for each offense; and each day's violation of this section shall constitute a separate offense. The provisions of this section shall be administered and enforced by the Alabama public service commission in the manner in which provisions of the Alabama Motor Carrier Act of 1939 are administered and enforced. (1945, p. 731, appvd. July 6, 1945.)"

For the complete case see below:

<https://www.freedomforuminstitute.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/07/Browder-v.-Gayle.pdf>

According to Jonathan Gold in his article, "The Browder in Browder v. Gayle. On April 29, 1955, Aurelia Browder, like so many other black residents of Montgomery, was mistreated on a city bus. According to her testimony in the civil case, she was forced by the bus driver "to get up and stand to let a white man and a white lady sit down." Three other plaintiffs, Mary Louise Smith, Claudette Colvin and Susie McDonald, had reported similar mistreatment. The cumulative effect of these "demeaning, wretched, intolerable impositions and conditions," as boycott organizer Jo Ann Robinson referred to them, inspired Montgomery's black community to begin developing plans for a boycott that eventually began after the arrest of Rosa Park.

For further reading:

<https://www.learningforjustice.org/sites/default/files/general/TT53%20Browder%20v.%20Gayle.pdf>

“Nine months after Claudette Colvin’s arrest, local activist Rosa Parks took similar action. She refused to give up her bus seat to a white rider and got arrested. Colvin’s actions raised awareness, but Parks’s actions set off a boycott of the Montgomery bus lines. Thousands of Black residents rode the bus to work, often for white employers. After Parks’s arrest, though, they refused to ride for an entire year (National Youth Summit 2020).”

<https://americanhistory.si.edu/sites/default/files/file-uploader/NYS%20Case%20Study%E2%80%9393Student%20Kit%20FINAL4.pdf>

Colvin’s case unlike Rosa Parks’s “was dropped by civil rights campaigners because Colvin was unmarried and pregnant during the proceedings.[6][7] It is now widely accepted that Colvin was not accredited by civil rights campaigners at the time due to her circumstances. Rosa Parks stated: “If the white press got ahold of that information, they would have [had] a field day.

The record of her arrest and adjudication of delinquency was expunged by the district court in 2021, with the support of the district attorney for the county in which the charges were brought more than 66 years before.”

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Claudette_Colvin

When people, no matter their race, color or creed cannot take any more discriminatory and racist acts towards them, their only recourse is to take action. Humanity needs people like Colvin and the others who took a stand for their rights despite the consequences.

Martin Luther King Jr. Day

Written by: Barbara Bullen

Martin Luther King Jr., (Michael King Jr., 1929-1968) known internationally throughout the world as one of the greatest mediators of all time, is honored yearly. Brought up as a Christian, he followed in his father's footsteps (Martin Luther King, Sr.) by becoming a Baptist Minister. A man who took it upon himself to eradicate discrimination against blacks along with his wife, Coretta Scott King, his leaders and activists, helped dismantle the barriers that for so long held blacks from having equal rights. The civil rights movement which began in 1955 led to the enactment of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of which Martin Luther King Jr. was the President. Martin's mission was to do what ever was necessary in a non-violent way to dismantle discrimination, violence and oppression against blacks which included the use of civil disobedience.

For too long, the laws protected whites in order for blacks to be subservient. He was tired and so were blacks in the South, throughout the United States and around the world, so King participated in and led marches for their civil rights including the right to vote, desegregation and labor rights. King was also instrumental in the 1955 Montgomery Bus Boycott which was a protest against the segregation policies of public transit. December 5, 1955, the Monday after Rosa Parks sat in the white area of the bus and refused to give her seat to a white person, she was arrested due to the segregation laws on public transit, only permitting her to sit in the back of the bus. King led many nonviolent protest marches and was the key figure helping organize the 1963 March on Washington, where he delivered a speech that electrified the nation with his "I have a Dream speech" on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. Part of his speech is listed below because the reinforcement of what King did for the world to change the discriminatory practices and laws need to be remembered by all.

I HAVE A DREAM SPEECH

Martin Luther King Jr

I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal."

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.

I have a dream today!

And when this happens, when we allow freedom ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual:

Free at last! Free at last!

Thank God Almighty, we are free at last!

1964 saw the award of the Nobel Peace Prize to King for dismantling racial inequality through nonviolence. In 1965, Martin was instrumental in organizing two marches from Selma to Montgomery in the fight for the right to vote with activists of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. In 1968, Martin was assassinated in Memphis, Tennessee when he planned a national occupation of Washington, D.C.

Martin Luther King Jr. Day is King's birthday which is a federal holiday signed into bill on November 3, 1983 by President Ronald Reagan for the third Monday of each January.

Martin Luther King Day In Ohio

MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR. HOLIDAY COMMISSION

"The Ohio Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Holiday Commission (Commission) was established in 1985 by Executive Order. Today, the DAS Administrative Support Division provides support to the commission.

The Commission is a statewide advocate of Dr. King's principles of nonviolence and annually honors Ohio's citizens who work to promote diversity and eliminate discrimination through nonviolent methods. Each year, the Commission presents awards to Ohioans to celebrate the life of Dr. King, whose teachings encourage nonviolent actions to secure equal rights for all Americans. The commemorative celebration is held each January in downtown Columbus.

The Commission strives to carry out Dr. King's dream of service to others throughout the entire year through various events (Ohio, Department of Administrative Services)."

For further information on the 37th Annual MLK Awards please go their website:

<https://das.ohio.gov/Divisions/Equal-Opportunity/Martin-Luther-King-Jr-Holiday-Commission>

"Awards are presented in the following categories.

•Governor's Humanitarian Award

•Individual Award

•Organization Award

•Collaborative Effort Award

•Youth: Capturing the Vision of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr."

King's legacy continues throughout generations, never to be forgotten for what he did for mankind

Harriet Tubman

Written by: Barbara Bullen

Harriet Tubman an abolitionist renown.

We thank God for her spirit, her strength and her love for her fellow men.

We'll remember her birthday this March to tell her story of the love for mankind, despite the cruelty that she, the slaves and the fugitives received by the merciless slave masters bent on slavery.

March 10 is the day on which it is said that Harriet Tubman (Araminta Ross) famously known as an abolitionist was born. As most Blacks who were born into slavery in the 1800s, Harriet was like them but became a hero when she escaped from slavery and helped other enslaved people escape from their masters or bondage.

Harriet was born in Dorchester County, Maryland where she lived a horrific life like most slaves being beaten and whipped by her slave masters and even experiencing a life-threatening head injury that induced visions and dreams she attributed to the works of God. She became deeply religious because of her Methodist upbringing and these visions and dreams.

“She often fought illness in her childhood, but as she grew older, the “sickly” young household girl grew stronger and even became a fieldhand. On a secluded plantation during her adolescence, Tubman attempted to warn an escaping slave that his master was nearby. She was caught between the slave and his master when the two confronted each other. The master slung a lead weight at the escapee, but hit Tubman in the head. The force of the blow “broke her skull and drove a piece of her bandana” into her head. The head injury would cause her to have headaches, fainting spells, and visions for the rest of her life. In 1844, she married a free black man named John Tubman. Around this time, she hired a lawyer to investigate her family’s slave contracts. The lawyer found her mother should have been freed at the age of 45, meaning that some of her siblings should have been born free.”

<https://www.crf-usa.org/images/pdf/gates/Harriet-Tubman-End-of-Slavey.pdf>

In the mid-1800s she escaped to Philadelphia to return to help those she left behind; she helped her family to escape and led many others to their freedom.

“The Fugitive Slave Law of 1850 was part of the Compromise of 1850. This law required the United States government to actively assist slave holders in recapturing freedom seekers. Under the United States Constitution, slave holders had the right to reclaim slaves who ran away to free states. With the Fugitive Slave Law of 1850, the federal government had to assist the slave holders. No such requirement had existed previously.” https://ohiohistorycentral.org/w/Fugitive_Slave_Law_of_1850

Harriet tried to find and help slaves in captivity escape and this included John Tubman who she later found out had remarried to a woman named Caroline thereby ending her quest to find him.

Frederick Douglass an abolitionist was also said to have worked with Tubman in helping fugitives.

“There is evidence to suggest that Tubman and her group stopped at the home of abolitionist and former slave Frederick Douglass.[63] In his third autobiography, Douglass wrote: “On one occasion I had eleven fugitives at the same time under my roof, and it was necessary for them to remain with me until I could collect sufficient money to get them on to Canada. It was the largest number I ever had at any one time, and I had some difficulty in providing so many with food and shelter. ... “[64] The number of travelers and the time of the visit make it likely that this was Tubman’s group.[63]

Douglass and Tubman admired one another greatly as they both struggled against slavery. When an early biography of Tubman was being prepared in 1868, Douglass wrote a letter to honor her. He compared his own efforts with hers, writing:

The difference between us is very marked. Most that I have done and suffered in the service of our cause has been in public, and I have received much encouragement at every step of the way. You, on the other hand, have labored in a private way. I have wrought in the day – you in the night. ... The midnight sky and the silent stars have been the witnesses of your devotion to freedom and of your heroism. Excepting John Brown – of sacred memory – I know of no one who has willingly encountered more perils and hardships to serve our enslaved people than you have.[65]” https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Harriet_Tubman
In 11 years, Tubman helped rescue 70 slaves in what was said to have taken 13 trips that included family members. Tubman was called “Moses” because of her efforts to free and rescue the slaves from their slave masters and to help fugitives to escape to the north.

She was devout and dedicated to God aided by visions, premonitions and the voice of God which is said to sometimes be attributed to her head injury. Although a religious woman she would not hesitate to use a gun which she carried for her protection and the protection of the slaves, even to the point of using it on them if they ever turned back to their plantation. “Despite the efforts of the slaveholders, Tubman and the fugitives she assisted were never captured. Years later, she told an audience: “I was conductor of the Underground Railroad for eight years, and I can say what most conductors can’t say – I never ran my train off the track and I never lost a passenger.”[3]...

Scouting and the Combahee River Raid

“When Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation, Tubman considered it an important step toward the goal of liberating all Black people from slavery.[107] She renewed her support for a defeat of the Confederacy, and in early 1863 she led a band of scouts through the land around Port Royal.[108] The marshes and rivers in South Carolina were similar to those of the Eastern Shore of Maryland; thus, her knowledge of covert travel and subterfuge among potential enemies was put to good use.[108] Her group, working under the orders of Secretary of War Edwin Stanton, mapped the unfamiliar terrain and reconnoitered its inhabitants. She later worked alongside Colonel James Montgomery, and provided him with key intelligence that aided in the capture of Jacksonville, Florida.[109]

Later that year, Tubman became the first woman to lead an armed assault during the Civil War.[110] When Montgomery and his troops conducted an assault on a collection of plantations along the Combahee River, Tubman served as a key adviser and accompanied the raid.

On the morning of June 2, 1863, Tubman guided three steamboats around Confederate mines in the waters leading to the shore. [111] Once ashore, the Union troops set fire to the plantations, destroying infrastructure and seizing thousands of dollars worth of food and supplies.[112]

When the steamboats sounded their whistles, slaves throughout the area understood that they were being liberated. Tubman watched as slaves stampeded toward the boats. “I never saw such a sight”, she said later,[113] describing a scene of chaos with women carrying still-steaming pots of rice, pigs squealing in bags slung over shoulders, and babies hanging around their parents’ necks.

Although their owners, armed with handguns and whips, tried to stop the mass escape, their efforts were nearly useless in the tumult.[112] As Confederate troops raced to the scene, steamboats packed full of slaves took off toward Beaufort.[114]

More than 750 slaves were rescued in the Combahee River Raid.[115][113] Newspapers heralded Tubman’s “patriotism, sagacity, energy, [and] ability”,[116] and she was praised for her recruiting efforts – most of the newly liberated men went on to join the Union army.[116] Tubman later worked with Colonel Robert Gould Shaw at the assault on Fort Wagner, reportedly serving him his last meal.[117] She described the battle by saying: “And then we saw the lightning, and that was the guns; and then we heard the thunder, and that was the big guns; and then we heard the rain falling, and that was the drops of blood falling; and when we came to get the crops, it was dead men that we reaped.”[118]

For two more years, Tubman worked for the Union forces, tending to newly liberated slaves, scouting into Confederate territory, and nursing wounded soldiers in Virginia.[119] She also made periodic trips back to Auburn to visit her family and care for her parents.[120] The Confederacy surrendered in April 1865; after donating several more months of service, Tubman headed home to Auburn.[121]

During a train ride to New York in 1869, the conductor told her to move from a half-price section into the baggage car. She refused, showing the government-issued papers that entitled her to ride there. He cursed at her and grabbed her, but she resisted and he summoned two other passengers for help. While she clutched at the railing, they muscled her away, breaking her arm in the process. They threw her into the baggage car, causing more injuries. As these events transpired, other white passengers cursed Tubman and shouted for the conductor to kick her off the train.[122] Her act of defiance became a historical symbol, later cited when Rosa Parks refused to move from a bus seat in 1955.[123][124]”

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Harriet_Tubman

*Harriet Tubman,
your legacy and dream continues,
until the day when slavery,
is abolished throughout the world.*

The Ghost of the Mountains

Written by: Erika S. Hanson

The snow leopard is one of nature’s most beautiful creatures. As of 2021, the snow leopard is no longer considered an endangered species. However, the population is still at risk due to illegal poaching and the encroachment of society into the cats’ habitat. So, although it has been moved from “endangered” to “vulnerable” on the Endangered Species list, the snow leopard is still at risk. According to the International Union for Conservation of Nature, the snow leopard is still on track to lose over ten percent of its wild population over the next three generations.

The natural habitat of the snow leopard is primarily in the mountainous areas of Central Asia, Kyrgyzstan, and Pakistan. Their defining features include a white pelt, with a pattern of dark rosettes and spots. Additionally, the leopard has a tail that is longer than most other cats, in order to assist with balance on steep mounds of snow. Unfortunately, the snow leopard’s distinctive coat makes it a prize for poachers. The bones and other body parts are also used in traditional Asian medicine.

Snow leopards are known to be extremely elusive. Their territory spans over twelve countries, and they live in snowy, mountainous terrain. This makes gathering data on the cat difficult. For this reason, the wild snow leopard population is believed to be between 4,000 and 6,500 in number, and researchers are unable to narrow down that number to a more specific figure.

In addition to poachers, snow leopards face a variety of other threats, including human encroachment on territory and “retaliatory killings”--the leopards are killed by farmers in the area to protect their livestock. Due to humans pushing further into their territory, snow leopards find it increasingly difficult to find food, not only due to industrialization, but because a snow leopard’s prey is also hunted by the surrounding humans.

Snow leopards are capable of bringing down prey that is up to three times their own weight. A typical diet would include blue sheep, Argali wild sheep, ibex, marmots, deer and other, smaller, animals. Because these animals are also consumed by humans, the number of prey in these mountainous areas is dwindling, leading the snow leopards to attack local livestock instead and the aforementioned retaliatory killings by farmers.

According to the Snow Leopard Trust, there has never been a verified instance of a snow leopard attacking a human. The Trust focuses its efforts on protecting the snow leopard by partnering with local communities and creating incentives for those communities to preserve snow leopards.

A snow leopard can live between ten and twelve years in the wild. In captivity, their level of survival sharply increases to twice that, at 22 years. Snow leopards mature quickly. Initially, they are totally reliant on their mother, and their eyes do not open until they are seven days old. At two months old, cubs are able to eat solid food. At three months, they are able to learn basic hunting skills. Between 18 and 22 months, the cubs are ready to leave their mother. It is estimated that male snow leopards reach maturity by age four. Females maturation is harder to pin down, due to scant information.

However, it is estimated that a female snow leopard is ready to have her first litter by age three.

Mating season is the only time you will see more than one of these solitary cats. From January to mid-March, males and females travel together for a few days. Once that time is done, and the female leopard is pregnant, she retreats to a secluded den site.

Pregnancy typically lasts between 93 and 110 days. Her cubs are usually born that June or July, and she becomes their sole caretaker, providing food and warmth, and teaching them how to survive in the wild. Once the cubs are ready, they separate from their mother and strike out on their own.

We continue to gather details about this “Ghost of the Mountains,” but information remains scarce. Their spotted white coats are unique, and unlike other big cats, they cannot roar, but can make other sounds such as a mew, purr, growl or hiss. They also make a low puffing sound called a “pusten” or “chuff.” This is a non-aggressive sound, and can indicate contentment, or be used to communicate with other snow leopards in the area. It is often used as a greeting.

There is still much to learn about these beautiful animals. Researchers continue their work with the people of Central Asia and the Himalayas to preserve and protect the snow leopard. Yet, the snow leopard remains elusive, which only adds to its mystique. Although sometimes misunderstood, this great cat is harmless to humans and is a key part in the planet’s continuing ecology.

Malcolm X Written by: Barbara Bullen

“No, I’m not an American. I’m one of the 22 million Black people who are the victims of Americanism. One of the 22 million Black people who are the victims of democracy, nothing but disguised hypocrisy. So, I’m not standing here speaking to you as an American, or a patriot or a flag saluter, or a flag-waver-no not I. I’m speaking as a victim of this American System. And I see America through the eyes of the victim. I don’t see any American dream; I see an American nightmare.”
“And why was he our ‘Shining Black Prince’?
Selected Quotes from Malcolm X: Nation Time: Spring 1997
https://freedomarchives.org/Documents/Finder/DOC513_scans/Malcolm_X/513.Malcolm.X.Selected.Quotes.pdf

One of the most influential figures of the Civil Rights Movement was Malcolm X. Unlike Dr. Martin Luther King Jr’s non-violent mission for equality and the end of discrimination not only for Blacks but for all races, Malcolm X commanded attention throughout the world.

“Malcolm X (born Malcolm Little, later Malik el-Shabazz; May 19, 1925 – February 21, 1965) was an African-American Muslim minister and human rights activist who was a prominent figure during the civil rights movement. A spokesman for the Nation of Islam until 1964, he was a vocal advocate for black empowerment and the promotion of Islam within the black community.

Malcolm spent his adolescence living in a series of foster homes or with relatives after his father’s death and his mother’s hospitalization. He engaged in several illicit activities, eventually being sentenced to 10 years in prison in 1946 for larceny and breaking and entering.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Malcolm_X

Malcolm’s childhood was fraught with misfortune yet he never stopped looking forward to another day in which to excel even to the extent of educating himself while in prison.

“... Malcolm X was one of the most articulate and powerful leaders of black America during the 1960s. A street hustler convicted of robbery in 1946, he spent seven years in prison, where he educated himself and became a disciple of Elijah Muhammad, founder of the Nation of Islam. In the days of the civil rights movement, Malcolm X emerged as the leading spokesman for black separatism, a philosophy that urged black Americans to cut political, social, and economic ties with the white community. After a pilgrimage to Mecca, the capital of the Muslim world, in 1964, he became an orthodox Muslim, adopted the Muslim name El Hajj Malik El-Shabazz, and distanced himself from the teachings of the black Muslims. He was assassinated in 1965. In the following excerpt from his autobiography (1965), coauthored with Alex Haley and published the year of his death, Malcolm X describes his self-education ...

It was because of my letters that I happened to stumble upon starting to acquire some kind of a homemade education.

I became increasingly frustrated. at not being able to express what I wanted to convey in letters that I wrote, especially those to Mr. Elijah Muhammad. In the street, I had been the most articulate hustler out there - I had commanded attention when I said something. But now, trying to write simple English, I not only wasn’t articulate, I wasn’t even functional. How would I sound writing in slang, the way I would say it, something such as, “Look, daddy, let me pull your coat about a cat, Elijah Muhammad-“

Many who today hear me somewhere in person, or on television, or those who read something I’ve said, will think I went to school far beyond the eighth grade. This impression is due entirely to my prison studies.

It had really begun back in the Charlestown Prison, when Bimbi first made me feel envy of his stock of knowledge.

Bimbi had always taken charge of any conversations he was in, and I had tried to emulate him. But every book I picked up had few sentences which didn’t contain anywhere from one to nearly all of the words that might as well have been in Chinese. When I just skipped those words, of course, I really ended up with little idea of what the book said. So I had come to the Norfolk Prison Colony still going through only book-reading motions. Pretty soon, I would have quit even these motions, unless I had received the motivation that I did. I saw that the best thing I could do was get hold of a dictionary - to study, to learn some words. I was lucky enough to reason also that I should try to improve my penmanship. It was sad. I couldn’t even write in a straight line. It was both ideas together that moved me to request a dictionary along with some tablets and pencils from the Norfolk Prison Colony school.

I spent two days just riffling uncertainly through the dictionary’s pages. I’d never realized so many words existed! I didn’t know which words I needed to learn. Finally, just to start some kind of action, I began copying.

In my slow, painstaking, ragged handwriting, I copied into my tablet everything printed on that first page, down to the punctuation marks.

I believe it took me a day. Then, aloud, I read back, to myself, everything I’d written on the tablet. Over and over, aloud, to myself, I read my own handwriting I woke up the next morning, thinking about those words - immensely proud to realize that not only had I written so much at one time, but I’d written words that I never knew were in the world. Moreover, with a little effort, I also could remember what many of these words meant. I reviewed the words whose meanings I didn’t remember. Funny thing, from the dictionary first page right now, that “aardvark” springs to my mind. The dictionary had a picture of it, a longtailed, long-eared, burrowing African mammal, which lives off termites caught by sticking out its tongue as an anteater does for ants.

I was so fascinated that I went on - I copied the dictionary’s next page. And the same experience came when I studied that. With every succeeding page, I also learned of people and places and events from history. Actually the dictionary is like a miniature encyclopedia. Finally the dictionary’s A section had filled a whole tablet-and I went on into the B’s. That was the way I started copying what eventually became the entire dictionary. It went a lot faster after so much practice helped me to pick up handwriting speed. Between what I wrote in my tablet, and writing letters, during the rest of my time in prison I would guess I wrote a million words.

I suppose it was inevitable that as my word-base broadened, I could for the first time pick up a book and read and now begin to understand what the book was saying. Anyone who has read a great deal can imagine the new world that opened. Let me tell you something: from then until I left that prison, in every free moment I had, if I was not reading in the library, I was reading on my bunk. You couldn’t have gotten me out of books with a wedge. Between Mr. Muhammad’s teachings, my correspondence, my visitors,... and my reading of books, months passed without my even thinking about being imprisoned. In fact, up to then, I never had been so truly free in my life.”

http://www.lattc.edu/Lattc/media/lattc_media/PDFs/Learning-to-Read-by-MalcolmX-PDF.pdf

The Autobiography of Malcolm X

New York, June 1965

CHAPTER ONE NIGHTMARE

“When my mother was pregnant with me, she told me later, a party of hooded Ku Klux Klan riders galloped up to our home in Omaha, Nebraska, one night. Surrounding the house, brandishing their shotguns and rifles, they shouted for my father to come out. My mother went to the front door and opened it. Standing where they could see her pregnant condition, she told them that she was alone with her three small children, and that my father was away, preaching, in Milwaukee. The Klansmen shouted threats and warnings at her that we had better get out of town because “the good Christian white people” were not going to stand for my father’s “spreading trouble” among the “good” Negroes of Omaha with the “back to Africa” preachings of Marcus Garvey.

My father, the Reverend Earl Little, was a Baptist minister, a dedicated organizer for Marcus Aurelius Garvey’s U.N.I.A. (Universal Negro Improvement Association). With the help of such disciples as my father, Garvey, from his headquarters in New York City’s Harlem, was raising the banner of black-race purity and exhorting the Negro masses to return to their ancestral African homeland—a cause which had made Garvey the most controversial black man on earth. Still shouting threats, the Klansmen finally spurred their horses and galloped around the house, shattering every window pane with their gun butts. Then they rode off into the night, their torches flaring, as suddenly as they had come.”

<https://antilogicalism.com/wp-content/uploads/2018/04/malcom-x.pdf>

Advocacy and teachings while with Nation

“From his adoption of the Nation of Islam in 1952 until he broke with it in 1964, Malcolm X promoted the Nation’s teachings. These included beliefs:

- that black people are the original people of the world[99]
- that white people are “devils”[2] and
- that the demise of the white race is imminent.[3]

Louis E. Lomax said that “those who don’t understand biblical prophecy wrongly label him as a racist and as a hate teacher, or as being anti-white or as teaching Black Supremacy”.[100] He was accused[of being antisemitic.[101] In 1961, Malcolm X spoke at a NOI rally alongside George Lincoln Rockwell, the head of the American Nazi Party; Rockwell claimed that there was overlap between black nationalism and white supremacy.[102]

Many who today hear me somewhere in person, or on television, or those who read something I’ve said, will think I went to school far beyond the eighth grade. This impression is due entirely to my prison studies.

It had really begun back in the Charlestown Prison, when Bimbi first made me feel envy of his stock of knowledge.

Bimbi had always taken charge of any conversations he was in, and I had tried to emulate him. But every book I picked up had few sentences which didn’t contain anywhere from one to nearly all of the words that might as well have been in Chinese. When I just skipped those words, of course, I really ended up with little idea of what the book said. So I had come to the Norfolk Prison Colony still going through only book-reading motions. Pretty soon, I would have quit even these motions, unless I had received the motivation that I did. I saw that the best thing I could do was get hold of a dictionary - to study, to learn some words. I was lucky enough to reason also that I should try to improve my penmanship. It was sad. I couldn’t even write in a straight line. It was both ideas together that moved me to request a dictionary along with some tablets and pencils from the Norfolk Prison Colony school.

I spent two days just riffling uncertainly through the dictionary’s pages. I’d never realized so many words existed! I didn’t know which words I needed to learn. Finally, just to start some kind of action, I began copying.

In my slow, painstaking, ragged handwriting, I copied into my tablet everything printed on that first page, down to the punctuation marks.

I believe it took me a day. Then, aloud, I read back, to myself, everything I’d written on the tablet. Over and over, aloud, to myself, I read my own handwriting I woke up the next morning, thinking about those words - immensely proud to realize that not only had I written so much at one time, but I’d written words that I never knew were in the world. Moreover, with a little effort, I also could remember what many of these words meant. I reviewed the words whose meanings I didn’t remember. Funny thing, from the dictionary first page right now, that “aardvark” springs to my mind. The dictionary had a picture of it, a longtailed, long-eared, burrowing African mammal, which lives off termites caught by sticking out its tongue as an anteater does for ants.

I was so fascinated that I went on - I copied the dictionary’s next page. And the same experience came when I studied that. With every succeeding page, I also learned of people and places and events from history. Actually the dictionary is like a miniature encyclopedia. Finally the dictionary’s A section had filled a whole tablet-and I went on into the B’s. That was the way I started copying what eventually became the entire dictionary. It went a lot faster after so much practice helped me to pick up handwriting speed. Between what I wrote in my tablet, and writing letters, during the rest of my time in prison I would guess I wrote a million words.

I suppose it was inevitable that as my word-base broadened, I could for the first time pick up a book and read and now begin to understand what the book was saying. Anyone who has read a great deal can imagine the new world that opened. Let me tell you something: from then until I left that prison, in every free moment I had, if I was not reading in the library, I was reading on my bunk. You couldn’t have gotten me out of books with a wedge. Between Mr. Muhammad’s teachings, my correspondence, my visitors,... and my reading of books, months passed without my even thinking about being imprisoned. In fact, up to then, I never had been so truly free in my life.”

http://www.lattc.edu/Lattc/media/lattc_media/PDFs/Learning-to-Read-by-MalcolmX-PDF.pdf

One of the goals of the civil rights movement was to end disenfranchisement of African Americans, but the Nation of Islam forbade its members from participating in voting and other aspects of the political process.[103] The NAACP and other civil rights organizations denounced him and the Nation of Islam as irresponsible extremists whose views did not represent the common interests of African Americans.[104][105]

Malcolm X was equally critical of the civil rights movement.[106] He called Martin Luther King Jr. a “chump”, and said other civil rights leaders were “stooges” of the white establishment.[107][G] He called the 1963 March on Washington “the farce on Washington”,[109] and said he did not know why so many black people were excited about a demonstration “run by whites

in front of a statue of a president who has been dead for a hundred years and who didn’t like us when he was alive”.^[110]

While the civil rights movement fought against racial segregation, Malcolm X advocated the complete separation of African Americans from whites. He proposed that African Americans should return to Africa and that, in the interim, a separate country for black people in America should be created.^{[111][112]} He rejected the civil rights movement’s strategy of nonviolence, arguing that black people should defend and advance themselves “by any means necessary”.^[113] His speeches had a powerful effect on his audiences, who were generally African Americans in northern and western cities. Many of them—tired of being told to wait for freedom, justice, equality and respect^[114]—felt that he articulated their complaints better than did the civil rights movement.^{[115][116]}”

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Malcolm_X

Malcolm X a great but controversial leader is remembered by memorials and tributes that include the first home he was brought up in which is now a historical monument. Malcolm X is also portrayed in the movies, TV and on stage.

Malcolm X was a great leader known for his beliefs that not everyone liked. But he proved to everyone that despite being incarcerated for seven years he put his time to good use through selfeducation turning out to be the most prolific, educated speaker that there was in the United States. We welcome the holiday that celebrates Malcolm X for we live in a democracy where both sides must be heard; the good, the bad and the ugly that rears its head because of the suffering, racial discrimination and fear and torture of Blacks. Let us look forward to another day for great leaders to appear to lead us to justice for the benefit of all races in the United States

FRIDAY, JULY 8, 2022
KERRY MCDONALD

School choice policies aren't the only ways to expand education options and access.

Why Government Is the Biggest Obstacle to Educational Freedom

Iaround $23,000. For secular private schools, the cost is typically much higher, with Boston-area private school tuition often exceeding $40,000. This price tag is way too high for most families to afford, but emerging microschools are typically a fraction of the cost of other private education options.

For example, the Wilder School is a new Acton Academy-affiliated microschool that costs about $12,000 a year, while Life Rediscovered, a new homeschool resource center offering up to five days a week of full-day, drop-off learning, costs about $10,000. Even established local microschools, such as Bay State Learning Center that was founded in 2014 and that I wrote about in Unschooled, have similar tuition costs and frequently offer financial aid or sliding scale tuition.

These tuition costs are still too high for many families to afford, but they are more accessible than many other existing private options. Supporting the creation and growth of more microschool programs through deregulation and by removing entrepreneurial barriers would reduce costs even further.

Today's education reformers who are interested in expanding education options typically focus on school choice policies that redistribute existing taxpayer funding of education to families to use toward approved education-related expenses, including tuition. These efforts succeed in weakening government control of education and providing more learning options to more families, as the recent introduction of universal school choice in Arizona demonstrates. They should be commended and replicated. But school choice policies aren't the only ways to expand education options and access.

Encouraging the proliferation of private, low-cost microschools, hybrid schools, and learning pods is an important, and often overlooked, opportunity to offer more low- and middle-income families more education options without taxpayer money. This is the key emphasis in James Tooley's excellent book, The Beautiful Tree, where he describes a vast network of small, low-cost, unregulated private schools that he discovered in some of the poorest slums and most remote rural villages in India, China, and throughout the African continent.

In these places, where parents were astonishingly poor and government-run schools were often readily available and conveniently located, the parents instead chose these unregistered private schools for their children.

Tooley himself was surprised by this, given that his consulting work brought him first to the Indian city of Hyderabad to assess the status of elite private schools. Reflecting on his journey in a 2020 article republished by FEE, Tooley wrote:

"So, on a day off from consultancy, I went into Hyderabad's slums, down an alleyway and found a small school in a residential building. It wasn't a state school, but a low-cost private one, charging in those days about $1 a month. Then I found another, and another, and soon I was connected to a federation of 500 of these low-cost private schools, serving poor and low-income communities across the region."

The microschools, hybrid schools, and learning pods that are sprouting across the US represent a patchwork of low-cost, private education options similar to the schools discovered by Tooley. These microschool models are very often low-cost, unregistered, private education options that serve a local community eager to abandon government-run schooling. Scattered throughout urban, suburban, and rural areas, these pods and microschools are formed by parents or teachers, or both, who are showing that they can offer low-cost, private education options that parents want and where children thrive.

A main barrier to the continued proliferation of these learning models is the fear of encroaching government oversight and regulation. Tooley expressed the same concern about the low-cost private schools that he discovered around the world.

"Sometimes governments try to close these schools altogether," he wrote. "More commonly they pass regulations that impose impossible conditions, such as the need for very large playgrounds in areas of urban overcrowding, or the insistence that all teachers must achieve the same level of certification and pay as their government counterparts, even though this would make it impossible for the schools to charge low fees."

Preventing government involvement in the free-market of education choices is crucial to the creation, expansion, and accessibility of these emerging learning models.

Some states are trying to enact policies to protect learning pods and microschools. West Virginia, for example, recently passed legislation recognizing learning pods and microschools and loosening state compulsory school attendance laws for the students attending such programs.

In addition to preventing regulation of these emerging, innovative private learning models, state and local policymakers can reduce the many barriers to entry and operation that education entrepreneurs encounter. For example, local zoning restrictions often limit where and how microschools, hybrid schools, and learning pods can operate, often pushing these programs into undesirable locations on busy streets or without access to outdoor space for children's play.

Deregulation, along with removing common barriers to education entrepreneurship, can help to unleash education innovation and encourage a vibrant, affordable marketplace of learning possibilities.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE)

<https://fee.org/>

WEDN, NOVEMBER 17, 2021

BY KERRY MCDONALD

Homeschooled children fared better than children who attended public schools in many categories.

New Harvard Study: Homeschoolers Turn Out Happy, Well-Adjusted, and Engaged

Researchers at Harvard University just released findings from their new study showing positive outcomes for homeschooled students. Writing in The Wall Street Journal last week, Brendan Case and Ying Chen of the Harvard Human Flourishing Program concluded that public school students “were less forgiving and less apt to volunteer or attend religious services than their homeschooled peers.”

The scholars analyzed data of over 12,000 children of nurses who participated in surveys between 1999 and 2010 and found that homeschooled children were about one-third more likely to engage in volunteerism and have higher levels of forgiveness in early adulthood than those children who attended public schools. Homeschooled children were also more likely to attend religious services in adulthood than children educated in public schools, which the researchers noted is correlated with “lower risks of alcohol and drug abuse, depression and suicide.” The new findings offer a stark contrast to the portrayal of homeschoolers by Harvard Law School professor Elizabeth Bartholet, who notoriously called for a “presumptive ban” on homeschooling last year—just before the US homeschool population ballooned to more than 11 percent of the overall school-age population, or more than five million students, in the wake of the coronavirus response.

In their Journal Op-Ed, Case and Chen challenged their colleague.

“The picture of the home-schooled student that emerges from the data doesn’t resemble the socially awkward and ignorant stereotype to which Ms. Bartholet and others appeal. Rather, home-schooled children generally develop into well-adjusted, responsible and socially engaged young adults,” they wrote.

The Harvard researchers also discovered that homeschooled students were less likely to attend college than their public school peers. Some media outlets latched onto this finding in their headlines, while ignoring the Harvard scholars’ speculation that this could be due to a variety of factors. Homeschoolers could be choosing alternatives to college as a pathway to adulthood, and college admissions practices may create barriers for homeschooled students.

I reached out to Case and Chen for additional comments on their study’s findings, including how they think the homeschooling data and outcomes might have changed since 2010, when their data set ended.

“We are also glad to see that some colleges, including some top-tier colleges, have become more flexible in their admission policies for homeschoolers over the past years,” Chen responded.

Indeed, more colleges and universities have implemented clearer guidelines and policies for homeschooled students in recent years, and many are now eager to attract homeschooled applicants. In 2015, Business Insider noted that homeschooling is the “new path to Harvard,” and in 2018 the university profiled several of its homeschooled students.

The researchers also suspect that the well-being gap between homeschoolers and public school students has widened over the past decade, with homeschoolers faring even better.

“For instance, social media apps have come to smartphones over the past few years, leading to their widespread adoption by teenagers and even younger children,” Chen told me this week. “Some prior studies suggested that such increasing smartphone use may have contributed to the recent huge spikes in adolescent depression, anxiety, and school loneliness. Cyberbullying, sexting and ‘phubbing’ have also become more common in children’s daily lives, especially in school settings. We might expect that these issues may be less common among homeschoolers than their public school peers.”

As more families experimented with homeschooling last year, and many of them decided to continue this fall, the new Harvard data should help them to feel confident about their education choice. In terms of human flourishing, homeschoolers are doing well—perhaps even better than their schooled peers.

“Many parents opted to try homeschooling during the COVID pandemic,” said Chen. “Hopefully, the public awareness about homeschooling and the related practices and support for homeschoolers will be improved in the long run.”

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE)

<https://fee.org/>

THURSDAY, JULY 22, 2021

BY BRETT COOPER

When university administrations refused to step in and support censored students, alarmed alumni began to take action.

Alumni Organizations Are Pushing Back on Woke Campuses in Battle for Free Speech

When Davidson College senior Maya Pillai was asked about her greatest college memory, the first-generation immigrant answered, "I don't have one."

In an August 2020 interview with the Charlotte Observer, Pillai, the president of Davidson's chapter of College Republicans, described her alienating college experience.

"Because of my political affiliation, it led to not having friends," said Pillai, who received a full, merit scholarship to the highly-respected North Carolina institution. "And because it led to not having friends, it led to not having a fair reputation on campus. So I've been essentially outcast due to my political views."

Pillai's work with national Republican leaders earned her a spot as an alternate delegate for the Republican National Convention in 2020. In addition, during the COVID-19 lockdowns, Pillai organized a significant and well-attended rally in Charlotte, North Carolina to urge politicians to re-open the state. Though she was proud of her work, Pillai's efforts were met with hostility from students and professors on Davidson's campus.

Multiple hit pieces were written about Pillai, published in the school's widely respected newspaper, The Davidsonian.

One classmate wrote that "Pillai and other Reopen protesters believe that individual lives, particularly those who are Black, Brown, disabled, fat, or low-income, are expendable for the sake of America's oppressive capitalist machine," an ironic statement, considering that Pillai herself is a first-generation minority.

Though the campus re-opened to in-person classes in fall of 2020, Pillai chose to finish her degree online because the threats she received were so severe.

"The main reason I decided to attend virtually is not entirely because of the COVID-19 outbreak, but because I am afraid of being targeted. ... If students have written these articles about me in the few months of being off campus," said Pillai, "imagine what they will do to me on campus, when they see my face and see me walking around."

Pillai is not the only free-thinking student who has faced harsh discrimination at the nationally-ranked liberal arts college, and when the Davidson administration refused to step in and actively support the students, concerned members of Davidson's alumni community began to take note.

Illiberal Track Record

Though the small, prestigious college has produced a United States president (Woodrow Wilson), multiple senators, a North Carolina governor, and 23 Rhodes Scholars, Davidson College has recently garnered a dismal rating for free speech.

FIRE, the Foundation for Individual Rights in Education, has labeled the school a "red light" institution, indicating that its campus policies and practices substantially inhibit free speech. The organization has given the school the lowest ranking in its measurement system for failing to institute safeguards for openness and inclusivity.

In response to FIRE's negative rating — and to the experiences of outspoken students like Pillai — a small group of Davidson College alumni formed the Davidsonians for Freedom of Thought and Discourse. Upon their creation, this alumni group began using their resources and sway to bring intellectual diversity back to campus. They are not alone in this cause.

A Grassroots Movement

Across the country, alumni at some of the nation's most prestigious universities have similarly come together to take a stand against the recent trend of blatant censorship and assaults on free speech in higher education.

At Princeton University, alumni have formed the non-profit, Princetonians for Free Speech, which aims to rally behind students and faculty members who have been "isolated, outnumbered, and exposed" for their beliefs, while simultaneously promoting academic freedom on campus. The group publishes articles on free speech at Princeton, and they have organized and sponsored events and debates on campus to further their mission.

The University of Virginia has taken a similar approach with their creation of The Jefferson Council, which hopes to preserve the type of intellectual freedom that one would expect from a university founded by Thomas Jefferson.

Though organizations such as these have taken higher education administrations by surprise, this movement started organically. As their alma maters became increasingly radical-leaning and drifted away from a focus on free inquiry, alarmed alums began to pull their financial donations, ending years of major giving. Slowly, communities were formed over these shared concerns and values, and the grassroots campaigns took flight.

The Guiding Principles

The mission of these alumni organizations is largely guided by the Chicago Principles, a declaration on free expression in academia originally developed by the University of Chicago.

After a series of incidents that "tested institutional commitments to free and open discourse," the University of Chicago established the Committee on Freedom of Expression in 2014 to write a statement articulating the school's dedication to ideological diversity.

To sum up the principles and push back against ideological censorship, the committee asserted that, "debate or deliberation may not be suppressed [on campus] because the ideas put forth are thought by some or even by most members of the University community to be offensive, unwise, immoral, or wrong-headed."

Supporting the free market of ideas, the Chicago Principles stated that, "It is for the individual members of the University community, not for the University as an institution, to make those judgments for themselves, and to act on those judgments not by seeking to suppress speech, but by openly and vigorously contesting the ideas that they oppose."

Following the creation of the Chicago Principles, a campaign arose to get them adopted on other college campuses. However, it wasn't until a few years ago that their implementation became a trend. Prestigious institutions like Columbia University, Claremont McKenna College, Vanderbilt University, and most recently, the University of Virginia have all endorsed Chicago's statement, and this was accomplished with significant help from concerned alumni.

This commitment to fostering debate and deliberation is an essential part of any university's educational mission, because it challenges students to become articulate, independent-minded, critical thinkers. Traditionally, this has been the goal of higher education. However, in today's culture, that objective has been superseded by political agendas.

In the case of Davidson College, the Davidsonians for Freedom of Thought and Discourse have been pushing for the school's adoption of the Chicago Principles since 2018. As recently as last week, the administration continued to strike down the request. However, the alumni group offers no indication of backing down.

The Davidson alums, along with so many others, are watching as their alma maters become environments that are hostile toward free inquiry and antithetical to genuine intellectual exploration. The quality education they themselves received as students is being eroded in front of them, so it's not surprising that they're using their sway as donors, leaders, and trustees to counter this deterioration.

"This whole effort is really about freedom of expression and discourse," said John E. Craig, Jr, a founding member of Davidson's alumni group. "We regard the Chicago Principles as the definitive effort."

Engaged, independent students such as Davidson's Maya Pillai deserve environments that help them explore and grow as free thinkers, and this alumni movement might have the power to restore free inquiry and discourse in American higher education.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE)

<https://fee.org/>

SATURDAY, JANUARY 22, 2022 When university administrations refused to step in and support censored students, alarmed alumni began to take action.
BY ISAAC M. MOREHOUSE

The Last Leg Universities Stand On Is Collapsing

Universities are dying. They have long ceased being the best way to gain knowledge.

More recently, the degrees they confer have ceased being the best way to signal employability; the only exception being jobs that legally require them. (Such jobs are increasingly stodgy, unattractive, bureaucratic, backwards, and subservient to tyrannical governments). The final leg universities stand on is the mythology of social status. That's it. That's what gives them what waning power they have.

I can't count the number of parents I've talked with who recognize that college is one of the worst places to learn and degrees are one of the weakest ways to try to get hired, but who still needlessly bite the bullet and send their kid anyway.

Often, they shackle themselves or their children to tens of thousands in debt along the way. They despise the infantilizing policies on campus and bitter ideas in the classroom. They see the waste, corruption, stupidity, warped worldview, and bad habits cultivated and rewarded by the system. But they still send their kids. Why?

Because they value the decaying social status indicator of a degree. They want a shortcut to communicate to the world that they are good parents and their kids are better than most.

Even when they know the college experience is not good for their kids, many go through with it because they panic. They don't know how to face other parents who ask what their kids are doing. They don't know how to deal with the social expectation among the masses that college is somehow respectable.

I can think of few things less respectable than unthinkingly going into debt to spend half a decade drinking and begrudgingly completing meaningless assignments for professors detached from the world all so you can emerge with a piece of paper that does nothing to help you start a career and mindsets that make success harder.

This doesn't mean it's not possible for the college experience to be good or valuable or any of those things. The point is, almost no one seriously analyzes it. Almost no one sets out specific goals, examines the various ways to achieve them, and compares college to the relevant alternatives. Because only college confers the social praise of the self-appointed "important people".

The priests of our cultural religion teach that you are not important without a degree. It's the equivalent of a blue checkmark on Twitter. A self-serious symbol that turns out to be a better indicator of who is a fool or apologist for tyrants than who's a serious person.

As easy as it is to see the foolishness of university degrees as a status symbol from a distance, the spell the priests have cast over the past half century remains powerful. Even for those who should know better.

A college degree does not make you serious, important, or special in any way. It only proves that you were willing to follow the crowd. A dangerous prospect, especially lately.

Now, universities are extending their absurdities to the bodily autonomy of their students. They are forcing students to cover their faces, swab their noses, present medical papers, or get injected with crony corporate concoctions they know little about. They are belittled and harassed in the process. The few social joys of campus life are reduced, while tuition is increased.

Now is the time to pull the last leg out from under the zombie corpse of college.

Now is the time to break the spell cast by its priests and reject the idea that degrees make you matter.

Now is the time to courageously unleash human creativity and imagination and engage in alternative educational, social, and career experiences.

There is a war for the mind. A war of information. A war for control of human societies and cultures. This war requires you to believe the priests and accept the idea that The Ivory Tower is more important than you, and those they slap a stamp of approval on more important than those who bypass the madness.

The tyrannical individuals, policies, and beliefs crippling the world today emanate from universities and the sphere of influence they enjoy. They continue to take your money and weaken young minds all while using their undue influence to make your life worse.

Don't accept it. Don't allow it.

You can overcome the pernicious influence of "experts" by simply ignoring them and refusing to give them your money, attention, and children.

Institutional paper doesn't matter. The life, ideas, and actions of individuals humans do.

You are free to pursue life, learning, and career any way you choose, investing your time, money, and energy anywhere you wish. Do you want to empower the system that wishes to enslave you, or do you want to blaze a trail of freedom and show the world a better way?

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE)

<https://fee.org/>

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 2017
BY BRITTANY HUNTER

Over-enforcement has become all too common when it comes to youthful attempts at entrepreneurship.

Without the State, Who Will Handcuff Teens for Selling Water Bottles?

ourists taking a stroll around the national monuments this past weekend might have wondered what horrible crime was committed by a group of black teenagers sitting handcuffed and detained on the sidewalk. But while imaginations may run wild, the truth of the matter is extremely tame; the only offense these teens were guilty of was selling bottled water without first asking the government for permission.

If this seems like an overreaction on the part of law enforcement, that is because it absolutely is. However, this over-enforcement has become all too common when it comes to youthful attempts at entrepreneurship. During the hot summer months when school-aged children are liberated from their oppressive classrooms, many have discovered the wonders of capitalism only to be shut down by local authorities.

Just a week prior to this appalling scene, a similar instance occurred in the neighboring city of Baltimore, Maryland. A group of young black children, still donning their school uniforms from earlier in the day, were selling snow cones in their community, until police shut them down for not obtaining the proper permits. While these young children were fortunate enough to not have been placed in handcuffs, this national crackdown on child-run businesses is having a far worse impact on the communities where the self-sustaining entrepreneurial spirit is needed the most.

Breaking the Cycle

In the District of Columbia, 26 percent of its black residents are below the national poverty line. Equally dismal,

for those black residents living in Baltimore, Maryland, 27.6 percent are considered to be living below the poverty line. And yet, rather than encouraging these communities to become self-sufficient, the state is penalizing those who have the most to gain from entrepreneurial endeavors.

Whether it's selling lemonade on a neighborhood street corner or, like the young men detained in DC this weekend, selling cold bottles of water to overheated tourists, local law enforcement has cracked down and penalized minors who would dare start a business without first obtaining a government license. However, in other areas, specifically more affluent communities where the level of those living below the poverty line are not quite as high as Baltimore and Washington, DC, you will rarely find young entrepreneurs placed in handcuffs for making a few extra dollars.

Perhaps, this is what makes the scene on the national mall this weekend so horrific. Officers on the scene claimed that this extreme measure taken against these teens was done in order to ensure police safety, exemplifying yet again how members of lower socioeconomic communities are constantly facing state obstacles. Just a week prior to this appalling scene, a similar instance occurred in the neighboring city of Baltimore, Maryland.

A group of young black children, still donning their school uniforms from earlier in the day, were selling snow cones in their community, until police shut them down for not obtaining the proper permits.

While these young children were fortunate enough to not have been placed in handcuffs, this national crackdown on child-run businesses is having a far worse impact on the communities where the self-sustaining entrepreneurial spirit is needed the most.

Breaking the Cycle

In the District of Columbia, 26 percent of its black residents are below the national poverty line. Equally dismal, for those black residents living in Baltimore, Maryland, 27.6 percent are considered to be living below the poverty line. And yet, rather than encouraging these communities to become self-sufficient, the state is penalizing those who have the most to gain from entrepreneurial endeavors.

Whether it's selling lemonade on a neighborhood street corner or, like the young men detained in DC this weekend, selling cold bottles of water to overheated tourists, local law enforcement has cracked down and penalized minors who would dare start a business without first obtaining a government license. However, in other areas, specifically more affluent communities where the level of those living below the poverty line are not quite as high as Baltimore and Washington, DC, you will rarely find young entrepreneurs placed in handcuffs for making a few extra dollars. Perhaps, this is what makes the scene on the national mall this weekend so horrific. Officers on the scene claimed that this extreme measure taken against these teens was done in order to ensure police safety, exemplifying yet again how members of lower socioeconomic communities are constantly facing state obstacles.

Not only are these licensing laws not doing anything substantial to actually protect consumers, they are disproportionately impacting the most economically vulnerable communities in negative ways. And as a result, the vicious cycle of poverty becomes incredibly difficult to escape.

For most of these young entrepreneurs, it never once occurred to them that they would even need such a thing before engaging in the economy. And who can blame them? In addition to these permit requirements being absolutely meaningless, the public school system has done nothing to foster an environment where young Americans are encouraged to go out and be active participants in the economy.

Imprisoned by Compulsory Education

Compulsory education has mandated that adolescents must sit in a desk for six to eight hours a day, caged away from the rest of society and isolated from critical thought or practical life skills. Instead of teaching students precepts of the free market and allowing them to actually experience capitalism in action, they are kept in a state of dependency until the day they turn 18. Then, after this magical government-sanctioned rite of passage has occurred, we throw them out into the real world and expect them to know how to find a job and make money.

Truthfully, it is amazing that these young people even want to get a job and make money after the system has crushed their spirits for 13 years. But in cities with higher levels of poverty, this becomes an even greater problem, especially when college is not a desirable or feasible option. The ability to create a business or learn a practical skill that can be used to cater to market demand is profitable for those of all socioeconomic backgrounds, but especially those eager to break the cycle of poverty.

But for those in more economically vulnerable communities, the system disproportionately impacts their ability to succeed as independent adults. Instead of encouraging their entrepreneurial spirit, we teach them useless skills and prevent them from opting out of school in favor of apprenticeships or other specialized courses of learning. In fact, the system not only prohibits these students from looking for alternatives to K-12 education, it criminalizes those who stop attending just as it criminalizes those who do not ask the government for permission before starting a business.

This was unfortunately exemplified this weekend in Washington DC. the boys were detained were merely trying to be entrepreneurial. Understanding that tourist season and the summer heat create an enormous demand for cold water, these teens spent their weekend creating value. They weren't out getting into trouble or committing offenses, they were trying to be financially self-sufficient and instead found themselves handcuffed like common criminals.

The Market Provides

The market is a liberator of all people, regardless of their circumstances. It exists to help all those who are willing to utilize it well. When individuals of all ages are allowed to take full advantage of everything free market capitalism has to offer, they are able to better their circumstances, innovate their lives, and rise out of their situations.

When the state is continually building and reinforcing barriers that are put in the way of those who are already facing poverty and other unfortunate circumstances, it keeps them from achieving their full potential and becoming successful individuals. If the state is serious about trying to help those from the most vulnerable communities, the simple solution would be to stay out of the way.

Fortunately for the DC teens, the media they garnered as a result of being handcuffed caught the attention of Raymond Bell. Several years, Bell started the H.O.P.E (Helping Other People Excel) Project whose mission is “an information technology (“I.T.”) training program dedicated to providing technical training and development for young adults.”

After reaching out to two of the four young men in the picture, Bell was able to get them involved in his organization and they will soon be starting their new summer jobs in the tech industry. “I’m an entrepreneur myself,” Bell said, “and I love seeing young people having an interest in working for themselves.” Bell says he plans on reaching out to the other boys as well, but already, his organization has done more to help than the government ever could.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE)

<https://fee.org/>

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 2, 2017
BY JON MILTMORE

These kinds of regulations impede entrepreneurship and teach the wrong lessons to our kids.

5-Year-Old Fined $200 for Selling Lemonade

On summer evenings when I drive home from work, I often see small children selling lemonade in my neighborhood. Most of the time I honk my horn and wave, but occasionally I'll pull up and purchase a cup, usually for 25 cents.

I happen to like lemonade, but that's usually not my primary motivation for stopping to purchase a glass. Rather, it's to offer a bit of encouragement to the budding entrepreneurs who've put in the work and taken the time to set up shop in the hopes of making a small profit for themselves (and to just have some fun).

Industry, free exchange, and entrepreneurship seem like virtues an aspiring society would wish to foster in their young. Alas, this is often not the case.

Shaking Down a 5-Year-Old

In a Thursday article for The Telegraph, a man named Andre Spicer wrote about the experience of his five-year-old daughter who tried to open a small lemonade stand in the family's East London neighborhood.

After about 30 minutes, four local council enforcement officers stormed up to her little table," he wrote. "Excuse me," one of-ficer said as he switched on a portable camera attached to his vest. He then read a lengthy legal statement – the gist of which was that because my daughter didn't have a trading permit, she would be fined [$195]. 'But don't worry, it is only [$117] if it's paid quickly,' the officer added."

Spicer later wrote: "My daughter burst into tears, repeating again and again 'have I done a bad thing?'"

I can't imagine a worse introduction to entrepreneurship than that experienced by Andre Spicer's little girl, in which four uniformed men arrive, shut you down, and fine you an amount of money larger than you can comprehend.

Before one becomes tempted to think such things only happen in Europe, I'll point out that this sort of thing also happens routinely in the U.S.

Mowing the lawn for a neighbor, watching a friend's pet, helping a deaf person communicate, and many other simple tasks can result in sharp fines in many states if one accepts monetary compensation without the appropriate permit (which is often quite expensive).

Who Are These Laws For?

These consumer protection laws usually help special interest groups and governments much more than consumers. As Adam Smith wrote in The Wealth of Nations, The interest of the dealers, however, in any particular branch of trade or manufactures, is always in some respects different from, and even opposite to, that of the public. To widen the market and to narrow the competition, is always the interest of the dealers."

Worse yet, such regulations impede entrepreneurship and teach the wrong lessons to people seeking to make their way in life.

Ronald Reagan once observed that, "Entrepreneurs and their small enterprises are responsible for almost all the economic growth in the United States."

Considering that the U.S. economy has not eclipsed 3 percent annual growth since 2005, might it be time to consider creating a climate that fosters entrepreneurship and free exchange instead of stifling it?

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 2022
BY JACK ELBAUM

Union leaders claim that “extremists” politicized US schools. This is blatant revisionism.

Teachers Unions Politicized US Schools, Not Parents

When voters were asked by Pew Research, prior to the 2020 election, what issues were most important to them, education wasn’t even among the top dozen.

But things have changed dramatically since then. Outlets ranging from The Washington Post, to ABC News, have identified education as a potentially significant factor in the 2022 midterms. Additionally, after education emerged as a defining issue in Virginia’s gubernatorial election last year — ranking as a top two or three issue — school choice became a litmus test issue for Republicans.

This is quite the swing in just two years.

Theoretically, education should not really be a political issue; but, as we have seen, it clearly has become one. Therefore, we must ask why exactly this has happened. There are many possible answers to this question. One of them came from Randi Weingarten, president of the American Federation of Teachers — the second largest teachers union in the country. In a recent tweet, she blamed “extremists” who are “attacking teachers” and focusing on a culture war that is “intended to undermine teaching and learning.”

“The culture wars are intended to undermine teaching and learning,” Weingarten wrote. “Extremists are politicizing schools and attacking teachers. Attacking teachers doesn’t help kids, it undermines everything.”

If that was not clear enough, she also linked to a news article where she gets a bit more specific about the kinds of people she is talking about: “the anti-public schools crowd, the anti-union crowd, the privatizers, the haters.” In other words, she is referring to the conservatives, libertarians, liberals who believe in school choice, and even parents themselves.

But are these groups really the ones politicizing education? Or, alternatively, are they simply responding to the overtly political forces that have controlled education for a long time?

Why Education Has Become so Politicized

The 2020-2021 school year should be seen as critical when considering the politicization of education. Two events occurred in the months preceding that school year that led to the extreme stances that eventually launched schools into the political limelight: the Covid-19 pandemic and the police murder of George Floyd. The former was taken advantage of by teachers’ unions with backward incentives, while the latter led to a nationwide racial reckoning that some took so far as to actually begin promoting regressive racial ideologies in the name of progress.

First, when the Covid-19 pandemic began, there was understandably a lot of uncertainty. But one of the first things that was known about the virus was that kids were the least vulnerable to severe infection.

We also soon found out that schools were not a hotspot of Covid transmission. Yet, many K-12 schools started the 2020-2021 school year online — largely due to cynical activism by teachers’ unions. Prior to the school year, Weingarten threatened a strike, stating that “nothing is off the table” if school districts decided to reopen, and the Chicago Teachers Union tweeted later that the push to reopen school was “rooted in sexism, racism and misogyny.” It is reasonable to point out that this is just rhetoric — not necessarily representative of what actual power the unions have to shape policy — but studies demonstrated that the strength of a district’s union, not the prevalence of Covid-19 in the community, was the best predictor of prolonged school closures.

More recently, the effects of these closures — caused by the exploitation of a crisis by public sector unions — have become clear. A study released by McKinsey & Company found that “by the end of the 2020-21 school year, students were on average five months behind in math and four months behind in reading.” The learning loss was even more severe among low-income students, as well as black and Hispanic students. Numerous studies — including the CDC’s own research — also show that the closures damaged students’ mental health, with rates of anxiety and depression rising.

Second, following our nation’s racial reckoning beginning in the summer of 2020, some schools began to include radical — regressive, even — teachings on race in their curriculum. Activist Chris Rufo has done deep reporting on this issue for City Journal, exposing example after example of racial essentialist messages surrounding race making their way into K-12 classrooms. Moreover, looking to spread this kind of instruction further, the National Education Association, which is the largest teachers union in the country, passed a resolution that explicitly endorsed the teaching of critical race theory in the classroom as a tool to understand America. And the American Federation of Teachers, which is the second largest teachers union in the country, announced a campaign to bring the writings of Ibram X. Kendi — a scholar who has written that “The only remedy to past discrimination is present discrimination. The only remedy to present discrimination is future discrimination.” — into every single classroom.

In response to perpetual school closures driven by union power, as well as racially divisive curricula making its way into K-12 schools, a coalition of conservatives, libertarians, and liberals mobilized against such policies.

Parents showed up to school board meetings, politicians passed legislation, and heterodox news outlets reported on what was happening. So many people have left the traditional public school system recently that it is being referred to by some as an “exodus” of sorts. This is the response that Weingarten is blaming for the politicization of schools. However, it should be noted that all of this came after both radical and unprecedented policies were implemented. So, while one may criticize aspects of the response — after all, I do not agree with every law passed or with every speech given by a parent at a school board meeting — it stretches credulity to claim that parents politicized schools when in fact it was the schools themselves, in tandem with the unions, who introduced these radical political elements.

The End of Government’s Monopoly?

Data show that more and more people are looking for alternatives to the traditional public school system. Earlier this year, PBS published a piece exploring the surge in homeschooling across the country.

“In 18 states that shared data through the current school year, the number of homeschooling students increased by 63% in the 2020-2021 school year, then fell by only 17% in the 2021-2022 school year,” wrote the Associated Press’ Carolyn Thompson.

The article tells the stories of multiple parents who started to homeschool their children over the past year, and they find that a common reason is that they were simply unimpressed by the quality of the instruction during school closures. Apart from homeschooling, the National Alliance for Public Charter Schools reported that enrollment went up by seven percent during the pandemic.

The reason is clear: the traditional public school system has been riddled with failures for a long time, but events over the past few years made people more aware of them. And these failures do not just exist in the heads of parents, conservative ideologues or school choice activists, as Weingarten suggests. They are very real. Parents want their kids to attend school in person, and they generally don’t want their kids to be indoctrinated into a particular ideological system by strangers who work for the government. According to the American Federation of Teachers’ own poll, 60 percent of likely voters in battleground states are dissatisfied with the way traditional public schools are teaching about race and 58 percent are dissatisfied with how they are teaching about issues related to gender identity.

When the state is continually building and reinforcing barriers that are put in the way of those who are already facing poverty and other unfortunate circumstances, it keeps them from achieving their full potential and becoming successful individuals. If the state is serious about trying to help those from the most vulnerable communities, the simple solution would be to stay out of the way.

Fortunately for the DC teens, the media they garnered as a result of being handcuffed caught the attention of Raymond Bell. Several years, Bell started the H.O.P.E (Helping Other People Excel) Project whose mission is “an information technology (“I.T.”) training program dedicated to providing technical training and development for young adults.” After reaching out to two of the four young men in the picture, Bell was able to get them involved in his organization and they will soon be starting their new summer jobs in the tech industry. “I’m an entrepreneur myself,” Bell said, “and I love seeing young people having an interest in working for themselves.” Bell says he plans on reaching out to the other boys as well, but already, his organization has done more to help than the government ever could. People vote with their feet; so, as more and more people leave the traditional public school system, it will become more and more clear that something fundamental needs to change in the way the U.S. handles education policy. The reason something fundamental must change is that the failures we are seeing do not just happen by chance; rather, they are the natural byproduct of a government monopoly on education coupled with power in the hands of a public sector union. Therefore, any real reform to the education system must address these two things.

First, it is generally understood that monopolies are bad for consumers. They lead to higher prices, along with lower quality and quantity. Figuring out why this happens isn’t difficult: firms have no incentive to innovate, nor provide a high-quality product, when consumers have no other options. The economist Thomas Sowell was correct when he observed that education is truly an outlier when it comes to how it is treated, as traditional public schools — as opposed to a grocery store or a summer camp — do not have to convince anyone that attending them is in their best interest. People are simply forced to attend. However, moving to a model that is characterized by choice will 1) empower families to choose a school that best fits the needs of their individual children and 2) incentivize every school, including traditional public schools, to prioritize the quality of the education they are providing and to continually improve. After all, if they do not, then people will simply decide to attend elsewhere.

Second, the job of a union is to protect, and accrue benefits for, its members. This can clearly be a worthwhile goal; but, when it comes to public sector teachers’ unions, the problems arise when advocating for the interests of teachers means advocating against the interests of students. The truth is that what is best for students is not always best for teachers, and vice versa.

For example, when Covid-19 school closures were being considered, it was clearly in the interest of students to learn in an in-person environment; however, teachers’ unions advocated against opening schools because their job is to look out for the comfort and safety of members. Another example is when a teacher’s job performance is egregiously sub-par. In such a scenario, it is clearly in the interest of students for that teacher to be removed, while it is in the interest of the teacher and the union to retain the teacher’s job. This is why in New York City it takes an average of 830 days and $313,000 to fire a single incompetent teacher.

A successful educational system cannot include cornerstones that, due to their very nature, work to the detriment of children. The good news is that by enacting policies that advance school choice, the power of teachers’ unions to advocate backward policy will weaken for two reasons. First, if that policy is detrimental enough, it may encourage students to leave for a school that puts students’ needs first; this could certainly cause the unions to begin to tread a bit lighter in their advocacy. Second, most charter schools and private schools are not unionized, which means that more students will be learning in schools that are not unionized after there is school choice if unionized schools fail to provide the education consumers want.

Steven Levitt, who co-authored the bestselling book, Freakonomics, explained the current problem with schools aptly. He wrote that “the problem (...) is not too many incentives but too few.” Right now, the schools and the teachers can really just “do whatever they want” in the classroom, regardless of what is best for students, because political forces are protecting the government’s education monopoly and the power of the unions to influence policy. In other words, because there is no competition, there can be no accountability.

This is clearly correct. And so the only solution is greater educational freedom. More people recognize this than ever before, but the work is only just getting started.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE)

<https://fee.org/>

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 5, 2018
BY KERRY MCDONALD

Eliminating compulsory schooling laws would break the century-and-a-half stranglehold of schooling on education.

Compulsory Schooling Laws: What if We Didn’t Have Them?

We should always be leery of laws passed “for our own good,” as if the state knows better. The history of compulsory schooling statutes is rife with paternalism, triggered by anti-immigrant sentiments in the mid-nineteenth century and fueled by a desire to shape people into a standard mold.

History books detailing the “common school movement” and the push for universal, compulsory schooling perpetuate the myths that Americans were illiterate prior to mass schooling, that there were limited education options available, and that mandating school attendance under a legal threat of force was the surest way toward equality.

In truth, literacy rates were quite high, particularly in Massachusetts, where the first compulsory schooling statute was passed in 1852. Historians Boles and Gintis report that approximately three-quarters of the total U.S. population, including slaves, was literate¹. There was a panoply of education options prior to mass compulsory schooling, including an array of public and private schooling options, charity schools for the poor, robust apprenticeship models, and homeschooling—this latter approach being the preferred method of Massachusetts education reformer Horace Mann, who homeschooled his own three children while mandating common school attendance for others.

The primary catalyst for compulsory schooling was a wave of massive immigration in the early to mid-1800s that made lawmakers fearful. Many of these immigrants were Irish Catholics escaping the deadly potato famine, and they threatened the predominantly Anglo-Saxon Protestant social order of the time. In 1851, the editor of The Massachusetts Teacher, William Swan, wrote:

“In too many instances the parents are unfit guardians of their own children. If left to their direction the young will be brought up in idle, dissolute, vagrant habits, which will make them worse members of society than their parents are; instead of filling our public schools, they will find their way into our prisons, houses of correction and almshouses. Nothing can operate effectually here but stringent legislation, thoroughly carried out by an efficient police; the children must be gathered up and forced into school, and those who resist or impede this plan, whether parents or priests, must be held accountable and punished.”

This is the true history of compulsory schooling that rarely emerges behind the veil of social magnanimity. So what would happen if these inherently flawed compulsory schooling laws were eliminated?

A Power Shift

First, power would tilt away from the state and toward the family. Without legal force compelling school attendance, parents would have the freedom and flexibility to assume full responsibility for their child’s education.

They would not need government permission to homeschool, as is currently required in the majority of U.S. states. Private schools would not need to submit their attendance records to the state to show compliance. Public schools could still be available to those who wanted them, as they were prior to the 1852 law; but government schooling would no longer be the default education option.

More Choices

Because the state would no longer need to bless the creation of various private schools and ratify their curriculum and attendance protocols, an assortment of education options would emerge. Entrepreneurial educators would seize the opportunity to create new and varied products and services, and parents would be the ones responsible for determining quality and effectiveness—not the state. With less government red tape, current trends in education would gain more momentum. Virtual schooling, part-time school options, hybrid homeschooling models, and an array of private schools with diverse education approaches would emerge. As more education choices sprouted, competition would lower prices, making access to these new choices more widespread.

A Broader Definition of Education

In his biography of Horace Mann, historian Jonathan Messerli explains how compulsory schooling contracted a once expansive definition of education into the singular definition of schooling. Indeed, today education is almost universally associated with schooling. Messerli writes: “That in enlarging the European concept of schooling, [Mann] might narrow the real parameters of education by enclosing it within the four walls of the public school classroom.”² Eliminating compulsory schooling laws would break the century-and-a-half stranglehold of schooling on education. It would help to disentangle education from schooling and reveal many other ways to be educated, such as through non-coercive, self-directed education, or “unschooling.”

Even the most adamant education reformers often stop short of advocating for abolishing compulsory schooling statutes, arguing that it wouldn’t make much difference. But stripping the state of its power to define, control, and monitor something as beautifully broad as education would have a large and lasting impact on re-empowering families, encouraging educational entrepreneurs, and creating more choice and opportunity for all learners.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE) <https://fee.org/>

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 2017 “It is not difficult to deprive the great majority of independent thought.”
BY BRITTANY HUNTER

Education Is the State’s Greatest Tool for Propaganda

In chapter 10 of The Road to Serfdom, Hayek describes how some of the worst people always end up rising to the top of the political heap. Continuing to touch on this theme in the eleventh chapter, Hayek digs even deeper and discusses the control of information and the very basis of truth in a planned society. In a society where totalitarianism reigns, truth is found not in objective principles, but in a government’s desired ends. Once these ends have been established, all other forms of information are tailored to reinforce that “truth.” Reason is henceforth thrown out the window and the state’s version of truth is beyond contestation. As George Orwell wrote:

Nazi theory indeed specifically denies that such a thing as “the truth” exists. ... The implied objective of this line of thought is a nightmare world in which the Leader, or some ruling clique, controls not only the future but the past. If the Leader says of such and such an event, “It never happened”—well, it never happened. If he says that two and two are five—well, two and two are five. This prospect frightens me much more than bombs.

But this on its own is not enough to sway entire nations. Instead of the people merely accepting these “truths,” it is important that the state convince them that these truths are their own. When individuals begin to tie their interests to the state’s interests, a terrifying unity occurs, the likes of which can be seen in almost every deceptive dictatorship throughout history.

As Hayek says:

The most effective way of making everybody serve the single system of ends toward which the social plan is directed is to make everybody believe in those ends. To make a totalitarian system function efficiently, it is not enough that everybody should be forced to work for the same ends. It is essential that the people should come to regard them as their own ends.

In order to do this, all propaganda is orchestrated to reinforce these ends in order to push individuals in the desired direction. Common themes and slogans are repeated over and over again in order to beat these goals into the minds of the people. Anything contrary to the end goal must be squashed immediately. Anyone speaking out against them must also be destroyed in the name of national security. As Hayek says, “But the minority who will retain an inclination to criticize must also be silenced.” And while most people associate propaganda with political posters and multimedia, there is no greater tool for propaganda than a nation’s education system.

State-Controlled Education

No matter how intelligent an individual may be, almost every person is susceptible to propaganda. This is because, in many instances, most are unaware that they are falling prey to it. It seeps into our lives through all forms of entertainment but most especially through state-sponsored education.

In Nazi Germany, indoctrinating the youth was one of the easiest ways to ensure the fervent support of future generations. Adolf Hitler himself said, “He alone, who owns the youth, gains the future.” Children were forced into youth groups where their role in the Third Reich was reinforced continually. Germany even tailored toys, games, and books towards the desired ends of the Reich, ensuring that children would believe whatever they wanted them to believe. Hayek writes:

If all the sources of current information are effectively under one single control, it is no longer a question of merely persuading the people of this or that. The skillful propagandist then has power to mold their minds in any direction he chooses, and even the most intelligent and independent people cannot entirely escape that influence if they are long isolated from all other sources of information.”

And this was the aim of the Third Reich. If the German people were to not only accept but condone the acts of their government, there was no better way to do it than to teach them young, and lead them to believe that this has always been the case. Touching on this, Hayek says:

The most effective way of making people accept the validity of the values they are to serve is to persuade them that they are really the same as those which they, or at least the best among them, have always held, but which were not properly understood or recognized before.”

Or, to pull from Orwellian speak, the goal is to make these children believe that “we have always been at war with Eastasia.” But this deliberate molding of minds does not only occur in young students. In fact, once these children’s minds have been sufficiently indoctrinated, they are passed off to institutions of higher education where a belief in intellectual elitism is then instilled.

The Educated Elite

Trained to learn by rote methods rather than critical thinking, young adults, eager to assert their independence, were thrown into colleges and universities and told that they are now part of the intellectual elite. But from this comes the dangerous tendency to stop questioning the information that is presented to you. After all, your professors are highly regarded for their intellect. Why would they steer you in the wrong direction? But when these professors begin to present state opinion as unquestioned truth, this is where the real problems arise. The field of eugenics, for example, was once taught as if it were doctrinal truth. If racial superiority could be “scientifically” proven, or, rather, if the state could assert that this was fact, then questioning this doctrine became heresy. As Hayek says:

The need for such official doctrines as an instrument of directing and rallying the efforts of the people has been clearly foreseen by the various theoreticians of the totalitarian system. Plato’s “noble lies” and Sorel’s “myths” serve the same purpose as the racial doctrine of the Nazis or the theory of the corporative state of Mussolini. They are all necessarily based on particular views about facts which are then elaborated into scientific theories in order to justify a preconceived opinion.”

And, as has been seen throughout history, once a theory becomes part of the scientific narrative, it contributes to the direction of all societal ends. Hayek comments on this saying, “Thus a pseudoscientific theory becomes part of the official creed which to a greater or lesser degree directs everybody’s action.” While the eugenics example may seem rather extreme, it was very applicable to the time that Hayek was writing. And while it is not easy in hindsight to understand how an entire population could fall for theories this callous, Hayek reminds us, “It is not difficult to deprive the great majority of independent thought.” It may be easy to cast blame on the media and the entertainment industry for being natural propaganda machines, but history tells a different story. As we have now seen, state-controlled education is one of the worst and most effective propaganda tools that has ever existed.

FRIDAY, JUNE 24, 2022
BY KERRY MCDONALD Even though Friedman home-unschooled his own children, he believes “unschooling schools” are preferable.

One Prominent Libertarian Explains Why Unschooling Is the Best Way to Educate Kids

It seems obvious to me from my own education that one learns things mostly when you’re interested in learning them and not mostly when somebody sits you down and makes you learn them,” said David D. Friedman in our conversation on unschooling in the latest episode of the LiberatED Podcast. Friedman, a physicist, economist, and law professor who is the son of the Nobel Prize-winning economist, Milton Friedman, is a staunch supporter of unschooling, or the idea of self-directed, non-coercive learning that occurs either as an approach to homeschooling or in “unschooling schools,” such as those schools modeled after the Sudbury Valley School in Massachusetts that was founded in 1968.

I wrote extensively about unschooling, the Sudbury model, and other “unschooling schools” in my 2019 Unschooled book, and was delighted to discover that the most recent edition of Friedman’s well-known book, Machinery of Freedom: Guide to A Radical Capitalism, first published in 1973, includes a chapter on unschooling entitled: “Unschooling: A Libertarian Approach to Children.”

Friedman unschooled his own children, writing in Machinery of Freedom and on his blog: “Judged by our experience, unschooling not only saved our children from having to spend a substantial part of every week sitting in class being bored, it also gave them a better education.” Friedman continues:

“Unschooling worked for us, but two very bright children brought up by highly educated parents are not exactly a random sample of the relevant population. There is evidence that it works for quite a lot of other people; interested readers may want to look at the literature on Sudbury Valley School, the model that the school where our children started their unschooling experience was built on. There may be some children who would learn more in a conventional school, even children who would enjoy the process more. But, judging by our experience, unschooling, home unschooling if no suitable school is available, is an option well worth considering.”

The research on the Sudbury Valley School that Friedman references includes several academic and informal studies of alumni. A 1986 study of Sudbury Valley alumni by Peter Gray and David Chanoff published in the American Journal of Education concludes: “Although these individuals educated themselves in ways that are enormously different from what occurs at traditional schools, they have had no apparent difficulty being admitted to or adjusting to the demands of traditional higher education and have been successful in a wide variety of careers.”

Gray, a psychology professor at Boston College, elaborates on this research in his 2013 book, Free To Learn.

He and his colleagues Gina Riley and Kevin Currie-Knight published similar findings in a 2021 paper on the outcomes of alumni of the Hudson Valley Sudbury School that was modeled after Sudbury Valley. Even though Friedman home-unschooled his two children after briefly sending them to a small Sudbury-style school in California that closed shortly after they left, he believes that children learning in “unschooling schools” is preferable to them learning at home. He would like to see a robust free market of unschooling schools with different organizational structures from which families could choose.

“My ideal system, which doesn’t exist, would be to have multiple, competing unschooling private schools in which the unschooling school is run by whoever owns it just like an ordinary school, but is constrained to treat the students properly by the fact that if not they’ll leave for another school, which is the way we handle most things in the free market,” said Friedman in this week’s podcast.

The flurry of education entrepreneurship over the past two years, including the proliferation of microschools, learning pods, and homeschooling and unschooling collaboratives, may be edging us closer to Friedman’s vision and toward a robust free market of education options.

Listen to the weekly LiberatedED Podcast on Apple, Spotify, Google, and Stitcher, or watch on YouTube, and sign up for Kerry’s weekly LiberatedED email newsletter to stay up-to-date on educational news and trends from a free-market perspective.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE) <https://fee.org/>

MONDAY, MAY 15, 2017 When it comes to higher ed, this question inevitably surrounds the messy topic of “accreditation.”
BY JAMIN HÜBNER

The Ugly Truth about College Accreditation

The appointment of Betsy DeVos to Secretary of Education has spurred renewed interest in federal regulation in education. Just how much is needed, if any? When it comes to higher ed, this question inevitably surrounds the messy topic of “accreditation”—which has more negative impact on institutions than is often perceived.

What’s Accreditation Again?

Like many of the government’s tentacles, accreditation is simply a process of colonization and control. The Department of Education (DOE) approves of certain accrediting agencies, which then approve of certain educational institutions.

Specifically, the DOE sets standards (educational, financial, logistical, organizational, strategic, economic, etc.) for the accreditors, and the accreditors set standards for its member institutions—which they must follow or lose “accredited” status.

Schools (public or private) desire and choose “accredited” status for its benefits. This includes access to Title IV federal funding (e.g. student loans), certain state and federal programs of academics/sports, research data (e.g., IPEDS), and easier transferability of student credit between institutions. published similar findings in a 2021 paper on the outcomes of alumni of the Hudson Valley Sudbury School that was modeled after Sudbury Valley.

Note what’s missing from this list: improving quality in the classroom. No institution seeks accreditation to improve the education it provides. If any improvement results, it’s a byproduct, not a goal. (Talk about an elephant in the lecture hall!)

Encouraging Education—or Crushing It?

If we’re honest, we’d say that institutions seek accreditation because they’ll be punished if they don’t.

Avoiding prison is quite literally the most pressing reason to be accredited. Each state in the U.S. has a different policy regarding post-secondary institutions, and in many or most states, it is illegal to “offer degrees” as such without being accredited “by an accreditor recognized by the DOE.” All of this means starting new schools is particularly difficult. Impossible, actually. For example, in my home state (SD), the laws on this matter (between 1965 and 2009) were written so strictly that it was effectively illegal for anyone to start a degree-granting college at all (exempting only religious education).

Why? Because the law required that new institutions were accredited from the start—but legislators failed to realize that this is prohibited by the DOE. (Accreditation takes around 5-15 years start to finish; no new institution can be “accredited.”) Accrediting standards require that states approve of the new institution before accreditors grant accreditation.

It's a catch-22: the accreditors don't approve without state approval, but the state doesn't approve without accreditors' approval. (Fortunately, SD's law changed in 2009 to make things less absurd.)

And this is just one policy from one state.

Red Tape Around the Campus

Aside from just "getting permission," accrediting standards are downright burdensome. Some rules do fine in at least delineating what constitutes financial and academic fraud. But most are anything but easy.

Generic standards across accreditors typically require full financial audits (annually, which cost $10-15,000 each), staff and systems for comprehensive self-assessment, full-time fixed-salaried professors for each major, "adequate" facilities and resources, on-site inspections, etc. Metrics (e.g., student-to-faculty ratios, graduation and retention rates, etc.) distract institutions from authentic classroom experience in hopes of achieving "empirical" goals that are often irrelevant. As I wrote elsewhere:

By collecting data and committing epistemological hegemonicide (i.e., one privileges the numerically measurable and mathematical), has one thereby perceived the true state of affairs with regard to an institution's health and mission, or merely capitulated to a modern world(view) that is virtually blind to those very things... ? By obtaining "full compliance" and the coveted blessing of Caesar, has an organization truly proven itself sustainable and functional, or simply become masters of public projection, mechanical obedience, and academic magniloquence?

Oh, and then there is the cost of being accredited. Yes, member institutions are required to pay accreditors for their accredited status in the form of annual fees (determined by enrollment size)—and for any other related expenses (on-site team visits, travels to commission meetings, etc.).

And then there's the fact that accreditors compete with one another to attract member institutions (and thus increase revenues)—often by adopting more "rigorous standards." Since accreditors know institutions are compelled to be accredited, regulations accumulate and schools simply have to "deal with it." (Any accreditor that advertised "easy" standards to schools would be flagged by the DOE—and the DOE has killed accreditors.)

In the end, bureaucracy gives birth to more bureaucracy. The economic environment of a school (e.g., costs, value, budgetary planning, etc.) is completely altered for reasons that have little to do with academic supply and demand.

Red Tape Around the Neck

High tuition is one indicator of what this regulation costs. But there are more explicit signs of having reached critical mass.

In March 2017, Richard Eckman aptly titled an essay published by the Council for Higher Education Accreditation (CHEA) as "Burdensome Accreditation System Needs Overhaul." He says:

The cumulative effects of these changes are chipping away at the voluntary, nongovernmental character of the American approach. What's more, the pressures from the federal government have led to a more uniform, nationwide set of standards and judgment criteria... If accreditors continue to require colleges to do more work as part of the accreditation process, the accreditors must take steps to streamline the process. Failure to do so could lead to a devastating collapse of the entire accreditation system.

CHEA's President said the following seven years earlier:

Accreditation is being transformed from a valued private-sector process—over which the federal government historically has exercised limited control—to a process that is subject to more and more federal involvement. The implications of this shift... can include the erosion of academic freedom and the loss of appropriate authority and responsibility...

Another important, but lesser-known trend, is regional (U.S. has six big ones) accreditation dominance. National and regional accreditation used to have relatively equal value and differed mainly in geographical scope. But now regional accreditors have dominated the accreditation "market." Why?

Largely because all state schools are regionally accredited, and they only recognize educational credits from regionally accredited schools. But whatever the case, it is now common

For universities to require potential faculty hires to have a doctorate from a "regionally accredited" institution.

For graduate schools to demand that incoming students have an undergraduate degree from a "regionally accredited" institution.

Accreditors that work primarily with private institutions (national) are being pushed out. This means private education is treated more and more as inferior to public university education.

For academics, the result is devastating: faculty and potential grad students with fully-accredited DOE-recognized degrees are nullified simply because their education was "nationally" instead of "regionally" accredited.

Reform or Exit?

None of this mess existed before the 1950s. In fact, we should be reminded that Harvard, Yale, Duke, and Princeton had been in operation for over a century before the DOE and its accreditation processes even came into existence. It cannot be argued that without accreditation or the DOE, America wouldn't have reputable universities.

In fact, the standards themselves were largely composed by imitating such institutions in the first place!

This is how standards are changed: institutions evolve and accreditors modify their standards in response. Such changes are rare and take decades, but the process is entirely backwards.

Private institutions, not accreditors, educate and develop effective methods of education. But because this process takes place only within defined boundaries, innovation is naturally suppressed. Only when the need for change comes so overwhelming "on the ground" do accreditors begin to think about acting.

It is no wonder that entrepreneurs are trying to bypass this sluggish process entirely by inventing their own—whether through private "unrecognized" agencies, or competency-based tests, or "open badges." It's a situation similar to Bitcoin circumventing monopolized currency.

How successful any of this will be is yet to be seen. And the accreditation mess is just one part of the larger education cartel. But the cat is out of the bag. Modern education is deconstructing. Degree burning is now a thing. Employers are becoming less and less interested in employees with "traditional degrees."

Course curricula are saturated with links to Khan Academy on YouTube instead of textbook readings. And this is not just because of cost and debt (which is a problem); it's because of an underlying system that keeps otherwise great universities and professors tied to the ground.

How long will the morass of federal educational regulation last in the face of market-based innovators? Hopefully not long.

Dave Dentel

August 31, 2022

HOMESCHOOLING HELPS HISPANIC FAMILIES BRIDGE LANGUAGES AND CULTURES

https://hslda.org/post/homeschooling-helps-hispanic-families-bridge-languages-and-cultures?utm_source=hslda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=8-31-2022&utm_id=WU

Thomas J. Schmidt, Esq.

August 31, 2022

DISTRICT DOES 180, SCHOOL ATTORNEYS APOLOGIZE TO FAMILY

https://hslda.org/post/district-does-180-school-attorneys-apologize-to-family?utm_source=hslda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=8-31-2022&utm_id=WU

OTHER ARTICLES

MAINE’S RELIGIOUS SCHOOLS’ ‘HANDS ARE TIED’ EVEN AFTER SUPREME COURT RULING OPENING DOOR TO STATE TUITION FUNDING

The Lion - Perspectives and News for the American Family, Educators, and Leaders (readlion.com)

N.Y. UPS AGE LIMIT FOR SPECIAL-EDUCATION SERVICES

As schools gear up to help students bridge learning gaps that resulted from pandemic-related education interruptions, lawmakers in New York have passed state legislation to help students with disabilities access much-needed services. Under the measure, students who would have aged out of services at 21 can now access those services until age 23. Full Story: WRGB-TV \(Albany, N.Y.\) \(9/10\)

STATE AND LOCAL EDUCATION NEWS

School report cards out Thursday; change from letter grade to star system

DAYTON DAILY NEWS

For the first time in two years, school districts will receive a rating when state report cards are released Thursday, but it will look different than years past — the Ohio legislature changed the school report card rating system from A-F grades to a 1-5 stars system. The last time schools were given a grade was the 2018-2019 school year. The state said it would be unfair to schools to grade them in the 2019-2020 and 2020-2021 school years amid COVID disruptions. Schools still will be evaluated on how well their students are doing on state tests, reading proficiency in kindergarten through third grade, graduation rates, how students are progressing year over year, how well schools are able to close gaps for underprivileged students such as English language learners or disabled students, and how ready a student is to enter the workforce, college or the military after graduation.

HURRICANE IAN CAUSES 2.5M STUDENTS TO MISS SCHOOL

About 2.5 million students across Florida have missed at least one day of school due to Hurricane Ian, with 1.7 million missing three days or more. Officials say they are concerned about lost instructional time and ask for patience as they prepare to reopen as soon as possible. Full Story: Tampa Bay Times \(St. Petersburg, Fla.\) \(tiered subscription model\) \(9/29\), National Public Radio \(9/29\)

NEW STYLE OF COLLEGE ENVISIONED BY MIT PROFESSORS

Five professors at Massachusetts Institute of Technology are proposing a new style of college that incorporates the new technology used during the pandemic with an emphasis on work skills. The new model also would rely less on a big campus and make use of curriculum from other schools.

EPA DOUBLES MONEY FOR ELECTRIC SCHOOL BUSES AS DEMAND SOARS

By Carl Weinschenk

<https://apnews.com/article/business-education-pollution-air-quality-climate-and-environment-ad9dc72b1ad662dfb618fc-c317728f27>

97 MILLION TIKTOK VIEWS = 1 YEAR OF PAY FROM YOUR DAY JOB

By Carl Weinschenk

https://www.digitalcameraworld.com/news/97-million-tiktok-views-1-year-of-pay-from-your-day-job?utm_term=61627431-9B44-4420-8791-699678DD7F98&utm_campaign=AC59823B-4C3C-4F57-8D2A-7EDD2B31AA42&utm_medium=email&utm_content=A482D203-3A35-4433-8A2B-31F83D79A148&utm_source=SmartBrief

MIT PROFESSORS PROPOSE A NEW KIND OF UNIVERSITY FOR POST-COVID ERA

By Jeffrey R. Young Sep 28, 2022

<https://www.edsurge.com/news/2022-09-28-mit-professors-propose-a-new-kind-of-university-for-post-covid-era>
<https://www.dea.gov/stories/2022/2022-02/2022-02-16/fentanyl-deaths-climbing-dea-washington-continues-fight>

PAMELA CLARK, FOUNDER/EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AT NEW HEIGHTS EDUCATIONAL GROUP

GREAT COMPANIES: HOW DID YOU GET YOUR IDEA OR CONCEPT FOR THE BUSINESS? CONCEPT FOR THE BUSINESS?

Pamela Clark: Originally, I was a home school mom and other moms would come to me for advice. Then after homeschooling for about four years, I learned about charter schools. I became a parent leader for a charter school for some time. During that time, I helped many families from all school backgrounds. I advocated for families to receive a fair education. Once I discovered that families needed to cooperate, especially in educating children with learning difficulties such as ADHD, bipolar disorder, autism, and neurological disorders. When I left the charter school I had a meeting with a few moms I had served. One of the first things I told them was that I wanted to create a group that helps all families. I had served so many families from multiple school backgrounds at this time, I didn't understand the strict lines drawn by those in the education system. Everyone pays taxes whether they have children in public school, yet there was minimal, or no support offered to the homeschoolers asking for access to the art, music, and other programs. Charter school students receive help only from the charter they belong too, and traditional schools only care about the students in their classrooms. I didn't want to combine them into one school but truly believe that everyone willing to work for it deserves a fair and equal education. NHEG wants families to reach their dreams and goals. When a family and student reach their full potential, we all benefit as a society.

GREAT COMPANIES: WHAT ARE THE VARIOUS SERVICES PROVIDED BY NEW HEIGHTS EDUCATIONAL GROUP?

Pamela Clark: New Heights Educational Group is the first one-stop-shop in education.

NHEG has served over 550,000 students via online services and courses via its site and affiliate and partner sites. I lead a team of 73 volunteers who research advancements, provide training to teachers and tutors, create courses and tutor students. The organization has many internal departments including education, research, graphics, photography, HR, social media and marketing, proofreading/editing, authors/writers/script writers, comic book, production management for magazine, content builders, internet radio show/podcast, accounting and more.

NHEG provides fill-in-the-gap tutoring to reach students who have been left behind by traditional schools. It offers classes, an educational magazine called the NHEG EDGuide and the E.A.S.YToons comic books that has over 100,540 Views.

The organization has published two books: Unraveling Reading and Unraveling Science. Both books are part of the Unraveling series, which provides strategies to parents, teachers and tutors to help them support children's learning processes. The series will include a book for each subject. One Nonprofit's Journey to Success, written by an NHEG volunteer, was released worldwide in March 2015 and tells the organization's story. NHEG's internet radio show, New Heights Show on Education, has had over 357,841 listens and is on 29 networks and became a syndicated show in 2019.

NHEG and its partners/affiliates offer over 1,200 low-cost and high-quality courses on its website, and it makes national and international leadership opportunities available to its students.

In 2020, NHEG grew its reach by over 90,000 people. In 2021, through new partnerships with Stack Social, Skillwise, National CSI Camp, Citizen Goods and The Hip Hop Healthy Heart Program for Children and Natural Born Leaders, it has more than tripled its previous course offerings with the over 1,280 free and discounted unique courses mentioned above and another 284 classroom resources for all subject matters. The in-person reading program switched to an online reading program with the help of one of NHEG's partners (The 2nd & 7 Foundation), and it went from a 2-tier to a 5-tier reading program within the last year.

GREAT COMPANIES: WHAT MAKES NEW HEIGHTS EDUCATIONAL GROUP DIFFERENT FROM HUNDREDS OF OTHER SIMILAR SERVICE PROVIDERS?

Pamela Clark: NHEG is the only organization that offers a range of educational services and resources under one business. We excel at it; we are the best in the world at it. This is proven by the many awards and recognition the organization has won since its creation and the many families that have benefited from this dream.

GREAT COMPANIES: WHAT ARE THE STRUGGLES AND CHALLENGES YOU FACE?

Pamela Clark: Every step of the way there has been struggles and challenges. It is a struggle to reach those in the educational system that see us as a threat instead of what the organization can do for the community. Many in power have biased thinking and keep us a secret from the families in need of our services. Instead, they send families to for-profit businesses that they can't afford and, in turn, cause more difficulties for these very families; it's a vicious cycle.

Funding is our biggest roadblock; everything NHEG has built, all the work it has done is yet to be fully funded. It would cost $457,567.00 to fund the first year of the organization's entire dream. That amount is less than is spent on two school drop-outs over a lifetime of receiving public assistance, and yet NHEG struggles to receive funding. It is very frustrating.

Great Companies: How do you plan to grow in the future? What do 5 years down the line look like for New Heights Educational Group?

Pamela Clark: NHEG envisions building a computer lab and learning center

Purpose: The lab and learning center will provide a space for academic research, academic studies, school assignments, educational planning, testing and tutoring services and other educational options. The lab can be used by families with students enrolled in any type of school or afterschool programs, for homeschool resources and as a teaching space for themed co-op/enrichment classes. The facilities will enable NHEG to teach, assist and provide technology resources to families for self-learning.

Genealogy program - NHEG is looking to create a genealogy program with the goal of building students' self-esteem and further connecting them to their community and country.

NHEG GED Program / Testing Site and implementing a sensory room for those with disabilities and creating a daycare for young mothers and fathers.

Creation of a sensory room in the hopes of reaching students with disabilities/special needs. This is very important for those with special needs and can open a new world for these students and their families.

Support for Teenage Parents

NHEG works with many teen parents that are struggling with the traditional education settings. Those that have children while still in high school or college, can still have a successful life if they have access to a support system. They are encouraged and treated with fairness and respect. NHEG recognizes the value of self-esteem and works towards building theirs by listening to their dreams and helping them achieve them. The organization provides a support system with affordable child-care, fun activities and learning opportunities, promotes student leadership, and teaches them to value themselves, so they can continue their educational endeavors. NHEG excels at providing this support that helps them reach their goals and this must be done if we want to effect change in society.

GREAT COMPANIES: IF YOU HAD ONE PIECE OF ADVICE TO SOMEONE JUST STARTING OUT, WHAT WOULD IT BE?

Pamela Clark: Don't just start a business, start a passion. If starting a charity, find someone in your community doing something similar and volunteer for a while. Never think of any job as beneath you; do everything and learn everything, so you can mentor others.

ROAST TURKEY - HIGH HEAT METHOD - FROM SAFEWAY.COM RECIPE

Ingredients

- Turkey, thawed (Recipe calls for 10-24 lb Manor House/Safeway turkey, but I PRESUME any turkey of the same weight will do -- ???)
- 1-2 tbsp. O Organics® Extra Virgin Olive Oil
- Kosher Salt
- Pepper

Directions

1. Remove and discard truss that holds turkey legs together (Tip A). Pull or trim off and discard any excess fat in neck or body cavity. Remove giblets and neck.
2. Rinse turkey inside and out with warm water. Pat dry with paper towels.
3. Place the adjustable V-shaped rack in a 13 x 16 x 3-inch roasting pan (set rack sides so the bird is a minimum of 2 inches from pan bottom).
4. . Rub turkey skin generously all over with olive oil and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Set bird breast-side-up on rack.. Pull wings away from body, then firmly twist them to push the wing tips under the bird.
5. Using aluminum foil, form caps over the tips of the end of each drumstick. If any parts of the turkey extend beyond pan rim, fashion a foil collar underneath to make sure drippings flow back into pan. Do not tie legs together, add stuffing, or close body cavity.
6. Insert an oven-safe meat thermometer near the center of the breast through thickest part until the tip touches bone, which is most accurate spot to check doneness (Tip B).
7. Verify oven temperature and set pan on the lowest rack in a 475° oven. Roast according to time chart at right, checking as directed during cooking, until thermometer reaches 160°. Halfway through roasting time, rotate pan in oven to assure even cooking and browning (Tip C). If areas on turkey breast start to get browner than you like, lay a piece of foil over the dark areas.
8. Remove pan from oven, set in a warm spot, and loosely cover pan with foil to keep it warm. Rearrange oven racks to accommodate potatoes and dressing. Decrease oven temperature to 400°. Let turkey rest 30 to 60 minutes. The resting period will allow the internal temperature to reach 165°, the USDA safe cooking temperature for poultry.
9. Drain juices from body cavity (often plentiful in unstuffed birds) into roasting pan. Transfer turkey to a platter or rimmed cutting board. Set aside juices for gravy.
10. Cut off turkey legs at thigh joint (Tip D). If joint is red or pink, return legs to the oven for 3 to 5 minutes (at 300° to 475°) or heat in a microwave oven for 3 to 4 minutes. Carve the rest of the turkey. Carving juices may be clear to pink or rosy; both are fine. Save juices to pour into gravy if desired.

DAING NA BANGUS RECIPE

Ingredients

- 2 pcs. Boneless Bangus (Milkfish), Butterflied with skin-on
- 2/3 cup vinegar
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. freshly ground black pepper
- 4 cloves crushed garlic.
- 4 tbsps. of cooking oil

Directions

1. Marinating Instructions:
2. Flatten Bangus with skin on top and place in baking pan (or any flat surface like baking pan)
3. Sprinkle the crushed garlic on all the Bangus surface
4. Now pour in vinegar, then season with pepper and salt.
5. Safely cover and nariate Bangus in the refrigerator overnight to get full flavor.
6. To Cook:
7. In a hot frying pan, add the 4 tbsps. of cooking oil and heat till it just starts to smoke over medium-high heat.
8. Place the Bangus fillet, skinside down.
9. Lower heat to medium and cook uncovered about 4 minutes each side.
10. Brown the marinade garlic and place it on top of the bangus.
11. Serve Daing na Bangus with rice, and atchara.

MOLTEN CHOCOLATE LAVA CAKE- PAMPERED CHEF RECIPE

Ingredients

- 1 Box of Chocolate Cake mix
- eggs
- oil
- water
- Can of chocolate frosting (NOT the whipped)

Directions

1. Mix the cake according to the box directions. Pour into the Pampered Chef Deep Dish covered baker. Scoop out spoonfuls of frosting and drop on batter, spacing as you go, and using about half of the container of frosting. Cook covered approx. 10 minutes. When done cooking, frost cake warm with remaining frosting.

PIONEER WOMAN'S CHICKEN STREET TACOS RECIPE (GLUTEN FREE)

Ingredients

- 6 boneless skinless chicken breasts, cut into pieces
- 2 Tbs. olive oil
- 3 garlic cloves, minced
- 1 onion, chopped
- 2 Tbs. chili powder
- 2 tsp. paprika
- 1 Tbs. cumin powder
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- 1 Tbs. taco seasoning
- 14 oz. can tomato sauce
- 1/2 cup water (or more)
- 1 pkg. corn tortillas
- 1-2 cups shredded cheese
- Tomatoes, diced (or salsa)
- Fresh cilantro, chopped
- Sour cream or salsa ranch

Directions

1. Cut the chicken breasts into small pieces and set aside. Dice the onion into small pieces. Heat a large saute pan to high heat. Add the olive oil to the pan. Add the chicken pieces to the pan. Let the chicken pieces heat in the oil, until it's golden brown. Toss the chicken and continue to cook on the other side. Add the onions and seasonings and continue to saute. Turn the heat down to medium heat and then add the tomato sauce and water to the mixture. Simmer the chicken until it thickens and the chicken is cooked through.
2. For the tacos, heat a griddle to medium heat. Place several corn tortillas onto the griddle. Add some shredded cheese on to the tortillas. Add some chicken onto the tortilla. Once the cheese is melted, remove the tacos from the griddle. Serve with chopped cilantro, tomatoes, salsa, etc. If you like a creamy aspect to your tacos, mix together ranch and salsa and serve the tacos with this sauce.

CREOLE RICE PUDDING RECIPE (GLUTEN FREE)

Ingredients

- 3 C day-old rice (or one cup of uncooked rice - OK, so you finished the Chinese... just be sure the fresh rice is COLD... (the 'from scratch' is in the (parentheses) following)
- 1 C whipping cream (or 3 C milk + 1 C whipping cream)
- 1 stick sweet butter
- 3/4 C granulated sugar
- 1 tsp pure vanilla extract
- 1/2 C black raisins
- 3 whole eggs, beaten
- 6 egg yolks, beaten
- 1/2 tsp cinnamon
- 1/2 tsp grated nutmeg

Directions

1. Set the oven to 350 degrees.
2. Butter a 2 qt casserole dish
3. Bring the day-old rice and the cream to a boil (or bring the uncooked rice, milk and cream to a boil)
4. Cook until the cream is absorbed (or cover and cook until most of the milk and cream is absorbed and the rice is tender)
5. Add all the other ingredients except the egg yolks and whole eggs
6. Temper the eggs by stirring some of the rice mixture into the eggs and stir - you do not want to cook the eggs - then pour the egg mixture into the rice and stir to incorporate all ingredients
7. Pour the mixture into the casserole and bake for 30 minutes. You want to give it a stir to distribute and suspend the raisins throughout the pudding as they will have settled to the bottom of the cassarole. You want it browned on top, but check now to see if you need to lay a sheet of foil on top so it doesn't get too brown. You need to have the pudding dry in the middle - add 15 minutes
8. You can serve it cold from the refrigerator, or warmed from the oven

<https://cookeatshare.com>

Partners & Affiliates

New Heights Educational Group Inc.

14735 Power Dam Road, Defiance, Ohio 43512

+1.419.786.0247

NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>