

NEW HEIGHTS EDUCATIONAL GROUP

EDGuide

ISSUE 7-8

2022 JULY - AUGUST

NHEG EDGUIDE

EDITORIAL TEAM

EDITOR IN CHIEF ● Pamela Clark
NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com

PRODUCTION MANAGER ● Marina Klimi
MarinaKlimi@NewHeightsEducation.org

PROOFREADERS/EDITORS ● Laura Casanova

PHOTOGRAPHERS IN THIS ISSUE ● Frani Wyner
Pamela Clark

Contents

2
EDITORIAL TEAM

4
THOUGHT OF THE MONTH
8-17

NHEG MEDIA PACK
18-19

MISSING CHILDREN
22-23
NHEG GROUP NAMED
BEST CHILDREN & ADULTS
LITERACY GROUP

30-32
NEW COMIC STRIPS CREATED BY BARBARA BULLEN

40-41
VOLUNTEERS PAGES

42-46
NHEG INTERNET RADIO PROGRAM

50-51
THE WALK IN AND OUT OF DARKNESS

56-59
VOLUNTEER PAGES
62-63

EARN BOX TOPS

68-90
NHEG Writers ARTICLES

92-106
FEE ARTICLES

110
HSLDA ARTICLES

111 NATIONAL NEWS REPORTS IN EDUCATION

112-117
RECIPES

118-119
NHEG PARTNERS & AFFILIATES

Thought for the Month

This month we reflect on the achievements of the last school year and the many blessings that NHEG receives and provides to the public, thanks to volunteers from all around the world.

Pamela Clark
Founder/ Executive Director of The New Heights Educational Group, Inc.
Resource and Literacy Center
NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com
<http://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>

Learning Annex
<https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

A Public Charity 501(c)(3)
Nonprofit Organization
New Heights Educational Group
Inc.
14735 Power Dam Road, Defiance, Ohio
43512
+1.419.786.0247

Welcome to the official
New Heights Educational Group store.

THE CURRENT STORE IS UNDER CONSTRUCTION, PLEASE BE PATIENT

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org/NHEG-store/>

amazonsmile

Shop school essentials at smile.amazon.com and Amazon donates.

NHEG Media

NEW HEIGHTS

SHOW ON EDUCATION

<https://Radio.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

<https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

<https://NewHeightsEducation.org/Who-We-Are/NHEG-EdGuide/>

Donate Today!

Paypal.Me/NHEG

Happy 16th Birthday

To New Heights Educational Group

New Heights Educational Group™

Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals

Resource and Literacy Center

<https://NewHeightsEducation.org/> • (419) 786-0247 • NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com

NHEG MEDIA PACK

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

Pamela Clark
Founder/Executive Director
NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com
www.NewHeightsEducation.org
www.VirtualSchool.NewHeightsEducation.org
Radio.NewHeightsEducation.org
14735 Power Dam Road by appointment only
Defiance, Ohio 43512
419-796-0247

Mission Statement

The New Heights Educational Group, Inc. promotes literacy for children and adults by offering a range of educational support services. Such services include: assisting families in the selection of schools; organization of educational activities; and acquisition of materials.

We promote a healthy learning environment and enrichment programs for families of preschool and school-age children, including children with special needs.

Student Services

New Heights Educational Group promotes a healthy learning environment and enrichment programs for families of preschool and school-age children, including children with special needs.

Student	Parents and Teachers
• Tutoring	• Classroom Resources
• Academic Growth Assessment	• Education Technology
• Support for Children with Special Needs	• Teacher Resources and Training
• Computer and Internet Resources	• Tutoring Resources
• Scholarship Searches and College Exam and Prep
• Private Library (in progress)
• Leadership Opportunities
• Online Courses
• NHEG Baton Corp. and NHEG Color Guard

Discounted and Free Online Classes

NHEG is providing students discounted and free online classes that they can take in their free time or incorporate into their current studies. This includes students who are homeschooled or attending a charter, private or public school.

NHEG has partnered with HSLDA Academy, Touch Type Read and Spell, Reading Success Labs, Classic Learning Test and we have partnered with a number of talented instructors who offer unique learning opportunities. This includes an Animation and Drawing Course, and Generation Self-Employed Course. Students can receive a discount by using our code when registering in most of these classes. We also partnered with others who provides free courses through our site.

These free courses are from Hilldale College, Virtual Home School Group, FEE online courses and Roots and Shoots.

The NHEG Online Learning Annex provides its own online courses, free and for a fee to children and adults who wish to learn more and are looking for something affordable. Our online classes are either self-enrolled or pre-recorded, meaning you can learn at your own pace or by attending standard online weekly courses taught by one of our volunteer teachers or tutors.

More Student Services

In order to promote leadership, we offer a Student Advisory Group for students ages 7 to 13 and a Student Leadership Council for students ages 14 to 23 with at least a 3.0 GPA. These internships give them opportunities to serve in our organization and earn relevant experience. It also empowers them to make a difference.

Additionally, NHEG offers an Adult Advisory Group for parents and provides an outlet for adults to have a voice in improving education.

NHEG Travel Programs offer students and teachers the opportunity to experience travel and understand new cultures around the world for the first time.

More Student Services

The NHEG Parents Information & Resources Portal is a dedicated page of information and resources for parents of home, public and charter school students.

NHEG Support Groups provide various support to not only our board members, but also to students, parents and teachers in Ohio. Each group provides a pivotal function in our organization to strengthen our programs and services; moreover, it helps support and educate children and adults, so they can build a much stronger educational background.

More Services

The New Heights Show on Education is an internet radio program in which the hosts cover various topics of education for home, charter and public school families in Ohio and beyond.

We publish a Bi-Monthly Magazine, titled NHEG EDGuide to our subscribers, and they can get the latest news and information about our organization, teachers and students. It has a reach of more than 25,000 views.

Comic book

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals

EASYTOONS

EDUCATIONAL ANECDOTES FOR STRUGGLING YOUTH

E.A.S.Y. Toons
(Educational Anecdotes for Struggling Youth)
"Mr Rogers" mentality comic book to help reach students with great kindness and understanding.

NHEG team of graphic designers have created the cartoons, and educational cartoonists create scripts for the comics. An NHEG radio host will be chosen to read the comics and take calls from students.

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org/easytoons> teen line helping teens

THIS Life THIS Voice

The NHEG Books

UNUSUAL READING
FOUNDED BY
NHEG is providing an online platform for developing reading and writing in children, youth and adults in a private and dynamic way. Through our educational resources, students receive their own reading plans, with support from the NHEG team and a group of volunteer educators, mentors, and teachers.

READ
AND REAP THE FRUITS OF READING
IT'S A JOYFUL WAY TO LEARN

An inspiring story of a woman who has stepped out of her comfort zone to help her son who was struggling in school. She has been able to help her son in a way that is not only educational but also fun. She has been able to help her son in a way that is not only educational but also fun. She has been able to help her son in a way that is not only educational but also fun.

BUY IT NOW!
AVAILABLE AT THESE LOCATIONS

AMAZON.COM
Walmart
BARNES & NOBLE

WWW.NewHeightsEducation.org

Testimonials V

My name is Desiree; I'm a home-schooled senior, and I receive tutoring from New Heights Educational Group. Before I began with NHEG, I lived at home with my mother and step father in Indianapolis, Indiana. I was in the largest public school in the state. My education was going excellently, but my home life was not ideal for a teenage girl. The situation at home was getting to the point where I had to move out. I moved to Defiance, Ohio, to live with my grandparents. I wasn't sure what to do with my education. I knew I couldn't go back to public school because the vocational education I had been receiving before wouldn't lineup with regular public school. I thought I was going to have to drop out completely and get my GED. It wasn't long after I had the dilemma that I discovered NHEG. With the personal help of Director Pamela Clark, and my tutors, I'm on track to graduation in the near future. My education has been a bit crazy over the last few months, NHEG has helped me tremendously.

Desiree (2014)

Testimonials VI

I am being tutored in reading by New Heights three times a week. I like it. It is working. It give me something to look forward to by helping me prepare to learn how to read, so people don't look at me like I am illiterate. I would like to try to attend college and learn to do small engine repair, so I can get a job and provide for my kids and family. I will give my kids a skill of working on small engines. It helps my kids that I get tutored because I do my homework with them and I can help them with theirs. This makes me feel better about myself. Pamela Clark is looking for a volunteer speech teacher for me. I like how New Heights finds volunteers to help people in need. It is also not expensive. It costs me only $45 a month to get tutored three times a week and you can go all year round. My wife also likes all the activities for kids and insights she gets for kids.

Billy S (2014)

Many more testimonials can be seen by visiting:
<https://www.newheightseducation.org/new-heights-educational-group/testimonials>

NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com
www.NewHeightsEducation.org
www.facebook.com/newheightseducation
 14735 Power Dam Road by appointment
 Defiance, Ohio 43512
 419-786-0247

New Heights Educational Group

QR Codes

for quick access to a world of information

Course Catalog

New Heights Show on Education

NHEG Awards Won

NHEG Online Store

NHEG Brochure
2021

NHEG DONATE
NOW

NHEG Learning
Annex

NHEG Media
Pack 2021

NHEG Website

Organization Charts - Current Volunteers, Student Leadership
Members and Adult Advisory Group

SCAN ME
staticQR NHEG
Volunteer Opportunities

• NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com • (419) 786-0247 •

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org/NHEG-educational-programs/virtual-reading-program/>

CALL 911 OR

1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

Madison County Sheriff's Office (Ohio) 1-740-852-1212

missingkids.org

MISSING

HELP BRING ME HOME

NCMEC: 1453332

Saunja Atkins

Missing Since: Jun 13, 2022

Missing From: Akron, OH

DOB: Oct 5, 2005

Age Now: 16

Sex: Female

Race: Black

Hair Color: Brown

Eye Color: Brown

Height: 5'6"

Weight: 215 lbs

Saunja was last seen June 13, 2022.

DON'T HESITATE! ANYONE HAVING INFORMATION SHOULD CONTACT

CALL 911 OR
1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

Case handled by

Akron Police Department (Ohio) 1-330-375-2552

missingkids.org

MISSING

HELP BRING ME HOME

NCMEC: 1452759

Liam Hastings

Missing Since: Jun 8, 2022

Missing From: Lima, OH

DOB: Apr 5, 2006

Age Now: 16

Sex: Male

Race: White

Hair Color: Brown

Eye Color: Hazel

Height: 6'1"

Weight: 161 lbs

Liam was last seen on June 8, 2022.

DON'T HESITATE! ANYONE HAVING INFORMATION SHOULD CONTACT

CALL 911 OR
1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

Case handled by

Lima Police Department (Ohio) 1-419-227-4444

missingkids.org

MISSING

HELP BRING ME HOME

NCMEC: 1451337

Areonna Suttles

Missing Since: May 23, 2022

Missing From: Columbus, OH

DOB: Aug 17, 2004

Age Now: 17

Sex: Female

Race: White

Hair Color: Brown

Eye Color: Brown

Height: 5'5"

Weight: 170 lbs

Areonna was last seen May 23, 2022.

DON'T HESITATE! ANYONE HAVING INFORMATION SHOULD CONTACT

CALL 911 OR
1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

Case handled by

Franklin County Sheriff's Office (Ohio) 1-614-525-3333

missingkids.org

MISSING

HELP BRING ME HOME

NCMEC: 1453059

Jacob Boykin

Missing Since: Jun 9, 2022

Missing From: Dayton, OH

DOB: Jan 19, 2005

Age Now: 17

Sex: Male

Race: Black

Hair Color: Black

Eye Color: Brown

Height: 5'9"

Weight: 160 lbs

Jacob was last seen on June 9, 2022.

DON'T HESITATE! ANYONE HAVING INFORMATION SHOULD CONTACT

CALL 911 OR
1-800-843-5678 (1-800-THE-LOST®)

Case handled by

Dayton Police Department (Ohio) 1-937-333-2677

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, July 22 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated PG
Inclusive Audience

Order your FREE TICKETS online at fwcivic.org or call
(260) 424 - 5220
USE CODE: NHEG

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, September 9 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated PG-13

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, November 4 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated G

IN THE WING
Thursday, May 12 @ 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - PG-13

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, February 10 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated G

A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum has socially distanced seating available in the last six rows of the theatre.
Masks are recommended but not required.

This season the Fort Wayne Civic Theatre will add a new step for our audiences from Project "Lights Up!" Two out of the six performances will be considered Inclusive Audiences.

Inclusive Audience Performances are designed to create a more traditional performing arts experience that is welcoming to all families with children with disabilities and the audience includes patrons from our IN THE WINGS program.

Accommodations for inclusive performances:

- Use of personal tech gadgets (notebooks, pads, smart phones, etc.) allowed - no photography allowed
- A pre-show announcement will inform patrons of any dramatic lighting or special effects.
- Patrons are free to leave their seats during the performance
- Patrons may bring their own snacks into the theatre
- Designated quiet area
- Venue staff trained to be inviting and accommodating to families' needs
- Noise cancelling headphones available to sign out during performance
- Sensory-friendly kits available to sign out from the venue.

IN THE WINGS
Thursday, March 24 at 7:30 pm
Arts United Center - Rated PG
Inclusive Audience

Thank you to our sponsors!

Reading Ambassador Rhone-Ann Huang

New Heights Educational Group is now offering a free five-tier Reading Program.
Available for multiple age groups.

VIRTUAL READING PROGRAM FIVE-TIER PROGRAM

Tier One

Is a virtual reading program designed for young children to read books along with 6-year-old Rishaan Gupta on special occasions.
(Pre-school - 1st grade students)

Tier Two

In partnership with 2nd & 7 Foundation and our Reading Ambassador Rhone-Ann Huang, we have implemented a virtual reading program for children. As part of 2nd & 7's "Tackling Illiteracy" program, and with the help of Zoom video conferencing, student-athletes will read with second-grade students and discuss why reading and staying on top of school-work is essential.

Tiers Three - Five

Tier Three: Rhone-Ann Huang is reading 9th- to 12th-grade and young adult books weekly.

Tier Four: Rhone-Ann Huang reading time for students from 2nd to 5th grade.

Tier Five: Rhone-Ann Huang reading time for students from 6th - 8th grade.

<https://NewHeightsEducation.org/NHEG-educational-programs/virtual-reading-program/>

LIMA SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA STORYTIME EPISODES

Serving hundreds of children each year in seven counties, "Symphony Storytime" is a fun and lively program that pairs beloved children's books such as "Where the Wild Things Are" and "The Story of Ferdinand," with classic masterworks performed live by Lima Symphony musicians.

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

419-786-0247

NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com
<http://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>

New Heights Educational Group Named Best Children & Adults Literacy Group

New Heights Educational Group (NHEG) has been named a U.S. winner in Acquisition International's 2022 Non-Profit Organisation Awards. NHEG was awarded Best Children & Adults Literacy Group – Ohio.

This is the second win for NHEG from Acquisition International, a monthly digital business magazine with global circulation published by AI Global Media Ltd, a publishing house based in the United Kingdom.

Pamela Clark, Founder/Executive Director of NHEG stated, "We extend a warm thank you to Acquisition International for recognizing the work of our organization and its many volunteers. We are thankful for and appreciate your continued support."

More information about the NHEG award and other award winners is available via the links below:

- Directory listing - <https://www.acquisition-international.com/winners-list/?award=98329-2022>
- The official press release - <https://www.acquisition-international.com/acquisition-international-is-proud-to-announce-the-winners-of-the-2022-non-profit-organisation-awards/>
- New Heights Educational Group - New Heights Educational Group 2022 (acquisition-international.com)

<https://newheightseducation.org/NHEG-news/heroes-of-liberty-partnership/>

The advertisement features a close-up of a young Black man with glasses and a mustache, looking upwards with a wide-eyed, open-mouthed expression of surprise or excitement. The background is a collage of US dollar bills. Overlaid on the bottom right of the image is a white rectangular box containing the text "WIN THE" in blue, followed by "$10,000" in a large, bold blue font, and "CARNEGIE DARTLET SCHOLARSHIP" in a smaller blue font below it.

WIN THE

$10,000

CARNEGIE DARTLET SCHOLARSHIP

https://www.collegexpress.com/reg/signup?campaign=10k&utm_campaign=NHEG&utm_medium=link&utm_source=NHEG

amazonsmile
You shop. Amazon gives.

amazon smile

Already an AmazonSmile customer? Sign in Experience feel-good shopping

Shop at smile.amazon.com and we'll donate to your favorite charitable organization, at no cost to you.

Get started

Same products, same prices, same service.
Amazon donates 0.5% of the price of eligible purchases.

When you join AmazonSmile you can...

Generate donations

Shop at smile.amazon.com and we'll donate 0.5% of eligible purchases to your favorite charitable organization—no fees, no extra cost.

Donate requested items to charities

Thousands of charities created AmazonSmile Charity Lists of items they need right now. Simply browse, order, and enjoy giving.

Over 1 million charities. See their stories.

CASCADIA PTA

AmazonSmile donations help Cascadia Elementary PTA support our students' growth by contributing to our school's fund. This fund supports...

See more

ADULT PETS

Adult Pets Alive! thrives on community. Because of community support, our...

HEIFER INTERNATIONAL

For 75 years, Heifer International has equipped poor farming communities with... they need to lift... and poverty. We...

Make NHEG your charity of choice when shopping AmazonSmile

SHOP NOW

<https://smile.amazon.com>

GIVE TODAY

Our Nonprofit Makes Donating Your Vehicle Easy

Give your used vehicle new purpose when you donate it to the cause you care about. Donating is easy, the pick-up is free, and your gift is tax-deductible.

Donate via memberhub
memberhub

HTTPS://NHEG.MEMBERHUB.GIVES/NHEG

<https://nheg.memberhub.gives/nheg/Campaign/Details>

Friends of NHEG,

we need your help. Our operating funds are critically low, and this is having a significant impact on the programs and services we're able to offer.

Please consider a DONATION of any amount to help us continue to support the students and families who benefit from our programs. Here are four ways to donate today:

Make NHEG your charity of choice when shopping AmazonSmile:

<https://smile.amazon.com>

Donate via the NHEG website:

<https://NewHeightsEducation.org/support-NHEG>

Donate via memberhub:

<https://NHEG.Memberhub.Gives/NHEG/>

Donate via Kindest:

<https://kindest.com/223522-New-Heights-Educational-Group-resource-and-literacy-center>

<https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/>
(419) 786-0247 • NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com

New Heights Educational Group

EDCOMIC

Meet Skye

SKYE'S FIRST DAY AT SCHOOL

Mr. Dawson hands out assignments to the students.

Prepare a speech of your choice for the class. The assignment is due by Friday.

SKYE AT HOME WITH HER MOTHER

I just started school and don't have a lot of friends.

Skye, what's wrong?

My homework assignment is to prepare a speech for the class.

And!

I'm afraid, Mother.

You've always received A's.

Skye, you can do it. I'll help you.

How?

Write your speech then memorize it and when you think you're ready you can practice your speech in front of me.

Thank you Mother.

FRIDAY AT SCHOOL

Students, I hope you're ready to recite your speech.

Carter would you come up and recite your speech?

Yes Mr. Dawson.

Story, Characters & Coloring: Barbara Bullen

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

CAN YOUR TEEN DO THIS IN 30 SECONDS OR LESS?

$$1\frac{5}{6} + 2\frac{7}{9} = \frac{83}{18} = 4\frac{11}{18} = 4.61$$

If not... Get
FRACTIONS MADE EASY
WITH A TI-30XA
SCIENTIFIC CALCULATOR

7 ONLINE TUTORIAL VIDEO LESSONS

30 DAY NO RISK - ONLY $9

LEARN MORE AT:

HTTPS://WWW.TRIADMATHINC.COM/FRACTIONS-MADE-EASY/?AFFILIATE=1996

Attention Homeschool Families:

Stop buying curriculum every year and invest in a long-time plan encompassing all grade levels in one spot!

Our site membership admits two named adults living in the same household, your children and/or grandchildren under the age of 21, or adult students.

The price for membership is $6.00 per month.

Membership provides access to over 1,280 free, discounted and unique courses, along with access to an additional 284 classroom resources for all subject matters.

• <https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/> • (419) 786-0247 • NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com •

Tutorfly

NHEG Award-Winning Tutoring Program is currently accepting students!

Get Started Today!
for $80 for the first month and $45 per month after that!

Core subjects require a three-hour-a-week commitment at one-hour intervals. Other subject matters and Foreign Language Courses require two hours a week at one-hour intervals.

NHEG implements Google Classroom, Tutorfly and Zoom into its tutoring sessions.

The Tutorfly system is used on the NHEG website. Our new tutoring ecosystem includes an all-new look and feel for our award-winning tutoring program. Students can enroll in our tutoring program and are then screened for the best placement. We use Zoom and offer an all-new virtual whiteboard, secure messaging communication and organized resources with student/tutor private linking.

Sign up today:

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org/NHEG-educational-programs/NHEG-tutoring-program/>

Student Advisory Group

Meetings held in person and/or online via Zoom

Sign Up at:

<https://school.NewHeightsEducation.org/about/NHEG-groups/student-advisory-group/>

Student Leadership Council

Meetings held in person and/or online via Zoom

Sign Up at:

<https://school.NewHeightsEducation.org/about/NHEG-groups/student-leadership-council/>

The National and International Student Advisory Group (SAG) and Student Leadership Council (SLC) promote youth leadership, volunteer service, community service, networking, scholarships, service-learning, leadership experience, fundraising, and critical thinking among students of all ages. Student advisors/leaders offer programming suggestions, delegate responsibilities to other students and bring a valuable perspective to New Heights' work. All opinions are important, and all points of view are respected.

New Heights Educational Group™
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

<http://www.NewHeightsEducation.org> • (419) 786-0247

New Heights Educational Group (NHEG)
and
Chamber Theatre Productions
offer a unique virtual education experience

Edgar Allan Poe: The Midnight Collection

A one-hour dramatic educational package based on the works of Poe, offering flexible one-week rental options for classroom or remote learning and enter code: HS5 at checkout - and you will receive 5% off.

To learn more about this unique opportunity, visit

<https://school.chambertheatre.com/>

Chamber Theatre Productions
America's Premiere Educational Theatre Company

New Heights Educational Group™
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resource and Literacy Center

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>

VOLUNTEER PAGES

NEW VOLUNTEERS

RAMYASREE ARVA (RAMYA)
DATE OF HIRE: 4/21/2022
DOCUMENT BUILDER/EDITOR
DATA COMPILATION TEAM
GOOGLE CLASSROOM ASSISTANT

VOLUNTEERS OF THE MONTH

MICHAEL ANDERSON	VIVIEN DINH	NINA LE
RAMYASREE ARVA (RAMYA)	JACKSON HOCHSTETLER	VICTOR RODRIGUEZ
ANGELICA BARBOSA	RHONE-ANN HUANG	STEPHANIE SONG
BARBARA BULLEN	PADMAPRIYA KEDHARNATH	EMILY STAGG
LAURA CASANOVA	PRIYA	CARMEN TACHIE-MENSON
CAROLINE CHEN	MEGHNA KILAPARTHI	SEAN URKE
KRISTEN CONGEDO	MARINA KLIMI
JAVIER CORTÉS	JULIA LANDY

Sad Goodbyes and Best Wishes
Olaniyan Taibat and Meghna Kilaparthi, we wish you all the best.
Thank you for everything
you have done for us.

THE INTERNET RADIO PROGRAM FROM
NEW HEIGHTS EDUCATIONAL GROUP

NEW HEIGHTS

SHOW ON EDUCATION

Internet Radio Show Spots now available

The New Heights Educational Group is now offering the opportunity for the public or businesses that promote education to purchase sponsor advertisement on our internet radio show.

All products, business and service advertisements will need to be reviewed by our research department and must be approved by NHEG home office.

All advertisements must be family friendly.

Those interested in purchasing packages can choose for our host to read the advertisement on their show or supply their own pre-recorded advertisement.

If interested, please visit our website for more details.

<https://Radio.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

The NHEG Radio Show is an internet radio program in which the hosts cover various topics of education for Home, Charter and Public School families in Ohio.

These Communities include Paulding, Defiance, Van Wert, Delphos, Lima, Putnam County, Wauseon and Napoleon.

For an invitation to the live show, visit us on Facebook or Twitter to sign up, or email us at info@NewHeightsEducation.org

If you are looking to listen to past shows, please check out this document

<https://docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d/1oW5gxFB7WNgtREowSsrJqWP9flz8bsulcgoR-QyvURE/edit#gid=529615429>

The New Heights SHOW ON EDUCATION

Join host

Pamela Clark

AIRING WEDNESDAYS
6:00 PM EST

Internet Radio

As she discusses education news and happenings

Interested in Broadcasting?

Attention Students interested in broadcasting or working in radio and television: NHEG offers unique opportunities for students to explore.

Positions are all volunteer based and offer hands on experience working on a syndicated show, "New Heights Show on Education" (currently only online)

The Positions of Interest Include:

Internet Radio Host Assistant, Internet Radio Monitors, Creating of New Media, Editing Audio and Video, Press Secretary, Experience with Spreaker and Zoom, Experience working as a Communications Secretary, Hosting of Round-table discussions. There might also be an opportunity to become a host for our organization.

Contact us:

NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com

419-786-0247

<http://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>

<https://Radio.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

Learning Annex: <https://School.NewHeightsEducation.org/>

New Heights Educational Group
Educational Resources to Help Reach Your Goals
Resume and Literacy Center

The New Heights SHOW ON EDUCATION

Join host

Olaniyan Taibat

New Heights

AIRING FRIDAYS
4:00PM MST / 3:00PM PST / 6:00PM EST

Internet Radio

As she discusses issues affecting youth

The New Heights SHOW ON EDUCATION

Join host

Barbara Bullen

New Heights

SUNDAYS
3:00PM MST / 2:00PM PST / 5:00PM EST

Internet Radio

As she discusses civil rights issues

The Voices of NHEG Internet Radio

The Voices of NHEG Internet Radio

An Award-Winning Book that will inspire you!

Take the difficult and uplifting journey of surviving through every type of abuse and learning to live a fulfilling life.

The author is using a pen-name.

She has overcome and survived much hardship. Through uplifting insights gained from overcoming her struggles, with grace and faith in God, she shows that anyone can overcome and better their lives.

Copyright © 2018 Honey Kasper
All rights reserved.

Unpredictable: The walk in and out of darkness

Unpredictable:

The walk in and out of darkness

A true story by Honey Kasper

Unpredictable:
The walk in and out of darkness
A True Story by Honey Kasper

Reviewer Comments:
"I read this book in one day! I couldn't put it down! I recommended this to my daughter! I gave it 5 stars because I kept me interested. And the fact that it's a true story made it all the better. I am saddened that all this happened to these children but so glad life turned out good for her!"

Order book now for $12.99 or pay $5.99 for the Kindle E-book

Website:

<https://UnpredictableTheWalk.weebly.com/the-story.html>

Contact:

UnpredictableTheWalk@yahoo.com

Commercials:

<https://youtu.be/eoKrTDdGuR4>
<https://youtu.be/FSIEnl1RB-o?t=13>

One Nonprofit's Journey to Success - NHEG's New Book

Savneet Singh, MS, M.Ed., M.Sc.

About Our Writer

Savneet discovered the world of freelance writing 9 years back and she is currently exploring the endless possibilities associated with it.

She had the pleasure to work on several projects as a writer, instructional designer and social media specialist.

She has a strong inclination for spirituality, and practices meditation and yoga every morning during the sunrise.

Book Summary

This book will make people believe that there's a natural power dynamic that comes along with personal experience and willingness to serve others. Parents, nonprofit stakeholders or just someone who wants to learn more about educational services and opportunities - everyone will find this book helpful. Many readers will find Ms. Clark's good work, perseverance and Christian faith inspirational.

Order Your Copy on Amazon Today!

UNRAVELING READING

by Daniela Silva

Available on Amazon Now!

Unraveling Reading is a response to the needs and difficulties faced by parents, students and teachers with respect to literacy and education. It presents strategies and alternatives for developing reading and writing in children, youth and adults in a practical and dynamic way.

Through diverse educational lessons, activities address three different learning styles, in respect to how the brain learns and processes information visually, auditorily and kinesthetically.

Unraveling Reading also includes examples of activities to improve reading and writing skills through movement, using the Brain Gym technique.

Daniela Silva is Brazilian, and a college graduate with a degree in Pedagogy (with skills in School Management and Business Education), an MBA in People Management, and a postgraduate degree in Neuroeducation.

Daniela has great motivation to transform lives through knowledge.

The New Heights Educational Group, Inc.
A Public Charity 501(c)(3) Nonprofit Organization
www.NewHeightsEducation.org
419-786-0247

ACTIVE LEARNING BOOSTER
Hands-on Online Teacher Training

FREE ACCESS TO FIRST MODULE!

ACTIVE LEARNING BOOSTER™

SELF-PACED HANDS-ON ONLINE TEACHER TRAINING PROGRAM FOR EARLY CHILDHOOD & PRIMARY EDUCATORS

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLETION

YOU'LL LEARN:

- HOW to support ALL areas of child development through Active Experiential Learning
- HOW to create Indoor and Outdoor Active Learning Experiences
- HOW to use everyday objects in Active Holistic Learning
- HOW to design and implement Play & Learning Stations
- HOW to use technology to support Active Experiential Learning
- HOW to provide Multi-Sensory support
- And so much more!

Aligned with EYFS Framework & NVQ in CCLD Level 3

The Early Years Foundation Stage

NEW PAYMENT PLANS from $11.99 per person!

PROGRAM DURATION: 3 MONTHS

NHEG July Birthday

- JUL 02 Victoria Lowery
- JUL 06 Cuyler Spangler
- JUL 07 Elias Bucchop
- JUL 09 Zachary Clark
- JUL 14 Jody Bowden
- JUL 15 Oliver Clark
- JUL 20 Jeff Ermoian
- JUL 25 Buffie Williams
- JUL 29 Olaniyan Taibat
- JUL 30 Victor Rodriguez

NHEG August Birthday

- AUG 10 Rachel Marie Flowers
- AUG 11 Sheila Wright
- AUG 20 Bruno Moses Patrick

NHEG July Anniversaries

JUL 13 Lakshmi Padmanabhan

JUL 14 Nina Le

JUL 22 Sheila Wright

NHEG August Anniversaries

AUG 13 Greg and Pamela Clark 34th Wedding

HAPPY

TH
4 JULY

★ DAY ★

INDEPENDENCE DAY

HOW TO EARN

BOX TOPS MAKES IT EASY

All you need is your phone! Download the Box Tops app, shop as you normally would, then use the app to scan your store receipt within 14 days of purchase. The app will identify Box Tops products on your receipt and automatically credit your school's earnings online.

Twice a year, your school will receive a check and can use that cash to buy whatever it needs!

DO YOU NEED TO ENROLL YOUR SCHOOL? FIND OUT HOW HERE.

<https://www.boxtops4education.com/enroll>

PRESS RELEASE

STEVIE WINNER PROVIDES LITERACY AND EDUCATIONAL SUPPORT TO ADULTS AND CHILDREN

THE STEVIE® AWARDS
The World's Premier Business Award Competitions

Their Mission: Stevie Award winner New Heights Educational Group, Inc. promotes literacy for children and adults by offering a range of educational support services. Such services include assisting families in the selection of schools, organization of educational activities, and acquisition of materials. They promote a healthy learning environment and enrichment programs for families of preschool and school-age children, including children with special needs.

Award-winning organization New Heights Educational Group (NHEG) was formed in 2006 by Mrs. Pamela Clark. Mrs. Clark discovered that families needed to cooperate, especially in educating children with learning difficulties such as ADHD, bipolar disorder, autism, and neurological disorders. NHEG has served over 350,000 students via online services and courses. Mrs. Clark leads a team of 92 volunteers who research advancements and provide training to teachers and tutors exploring different learning styles.

NEW HEIGHTS EDUCATIONAL GROUP WINS SILVER AND BRONZE STEVIE® AWARDS IN 2022 STEVIE AWARDS FOR SALES & CUSTOMER SERVICE

Defiance, Ohio – March 2, 2022 – New Heights Educational Group (NHEG) was presented with a Silver Stevie® Award in the Best Use of Thought Leadership in Customer Service category and a Bronze Stevie® Award in the Best Use of Thought Leadership in Business Development category in the 16th annual Stevie Awards for Sales & Customer Service.

The Stevie Awards for Sales & Customer Service are the world’s top honors for customer service, contact center, business development and sales professionals. The Stevie Awards organizes eight of the world’s leading business awards programs, also including the prestigious American Business Awards® and International Business Awards®.

Winners will be recognized during a virtual awards ceremony on May 11.

More than 2,300 nominations from organizations of all sizes and in virtually every industry, in 51 nations, were considered in this year’s competition. Winners were determined by the average scores of more than 150 professionals worldwide on eight specialized judging committees. Entries were considered in more than 90 categories for customer service and contact center achievements, including Contact Center of the Year, Award for Innovation in Customer Service, and Customer Service Department of the Year; more than 60 categories for sales and business development achievements, ranging from Senior Sales Executive of the Year to Sales Training or Business Development Executive of the Year to Sales Department of the Year; and categories to recognize new products and services, solution providers, and organizations’ and individuals’ response to the COVID-19 pandemic. New categories this year honor excellence in thought leadership in customer service and sales.

Judges’ Comments

--Congratulations on an incredible and amazingly profound mission. Well done.

--Awesome to see enablement through education, developing support around kids for a better future

--Interesting method to meet the requirements and needs of the business

--Congratulations on your successful thought leadership focus on family education and those with special needs!

--Excellent initiative taken by the company. The company seems to have benefitted tremendously under Mrs. Pamela Clark's leadership. Well done on promoting literacy through various educational programs. Worthy of acclaim!

--Supporting your clients every step along the way is the key to building trust. And since people do business with people they know, like, and trust, you can see how essential this is. You can also see how it's the opposite of trying to SELL. It's about guiding them to find the best solution for their problem ...based on where they are in their Decision Journey.

--True general leadership growth opportunities in an equitable social application. This will impact and assist in true across the board growth in thought leadership

--Overall a good and innovative solution to a time tested problem.

--Congratulations NHEG on your valuable contributions to children's education during the Covid crisis!

--New Heights Educational Group has a very fulfilling goal, which is to provide education to the children with learning difficulties. The increase in the number of course offerings is commendable. Their partnerships with various online course providers is a clear indication of their interest in the growth of the children.

Pamela Clark, Executive Director of NHEG, stated, “we are proud of our team of volunteers that work so hard to bring opportunities to families in need. We are honored by these awards.”

“The nominations we received for the 2022 competition illustrate that business development, customer service, and sales professionals worldwide, in all sorts of organizations, have continued to innovate, thrive, and meet customer expectations during the COVID-19 pandemic,” said Stevie Awards president Maggie Gallagher Miller. “The judges have recognized and rewarded their achievements, and we join them in applauding this year’s winners for their continued success. We look forward to recognizing them on May 11.”

Details about the Stevie Awards for Sales & Customer Service and the list of Stevie winners in all categories are available at www.StevieAwards.com/Sales.

About NHEG

New Heights Educational Group, Inc., promotes literacy for children and adults by offering a range of educational support services. Such services include the following: assisting families in the selection of schools; organization of educational activities; and acquisition of materials. We promote a healthy learning environment and various enrichment programs for families of preschool and school-age children, including children with special needs.

About The Stevie Awards

Stevie Awards are conferred in eight programs: the Asia-Pacific Stevie Awards, the German Stevie Awards, the Middle East & North Africa Stevie Awards, The American Business Awards®, The International Business Awards®, the Stevie Awards for Great Employers, the Stevie Awards for Women in Business, and the Stevie Awards for Sales & Customer Service. Stevie Awards competitions receive more than 12,000 entries each year from organizations in more than 70 nations. Honoring organizations of all types and sizes and the people behind them, the Stevies recognize outstanding performances in the workplace worldwide. Learn more about the Stevie Awards at <http://www.StevieAwards.com>.

Nelson Mandela

Peace often brings with it joy and pain.

Joy in the relief that there are no longer racist governmental policies and pain in the attempt to overcome historically racist and prejudicial acts towards those whose skin color is different.

Mandela, you helped overthrow Apartheid.

For this, the world thanks you.

Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela known throughout the world as a revolutionary and political leader who aided in the dismantling of Apartheid; Black South Africans whose lives were filled with fear due to the historical racist and prejudicial governmental policies of South Africa found their hero in Mandela. The world craved such a leader, as Black South Africans lives were filled with violence, fear and the struggle to end racism, and they were severely affected by policies enacted and intended to make them feel subservient and inferior to White South Africans.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nelson_Mandela

Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela (/məˈnɛlˈdɛlə/;[1] Xhosa: [xolĩḽaḽa mandêːla]; 18 July 1918 – 5 December 2013) was a South African anti-apartheid revolutionary and political leader who served as the first president of South Africa from 1994 to 1999. He was the country's first black head of state and the first elected in a fully representative democratic election. His government focused on dismantling the legacy of apartheid by tackling institutionalised racism and fostering racial reconciliation. Ideologically an African nationalist and socialist, he served as the president of the African National Congress (ANC) party from 1991 to 1997. A Xhosa, Mandela was born into the Thembu royal family in Mvezo, Union of South Africa. He studied law at the University of Fort Hare and the University of Witwatersrand before working as a lawyer in Johannesburg. There he became involved in anti-colonial and African nationalist politics, joining the ANC in 1943 and co-founding its Youth League in 1944. After the National Party's white-only government established apartheid, a system of racial segregation that privileged whites, Mandela and the ANC committed themselves to its overthrow. He was appointed president of the ANC's Transvaal branch, rising to prominence for his involvement in the 1952 Defiance Campaign and the 1955 Congress of the People. He was repeatedly arrested for seditious activities and was unsuccessfully prosecuted in the 1956 Treason Trial. Influenced by Marxism, he secretly joined the banned South African Communist Party (SACP). Although initially committed to nonviolent protest, in association with the SACP he co-founded the militant uMkhonto we Sizwe in 1961 and led a sabotage campaign against the government. He was arrested and imprisoned in 1962, and, following the Rivonia Trial, was sentenced to life imprisonment for conspiring to overthrow the state.

Mandela served 27 years in prison, split between Robben Island, Pollsmoor Prison and Victor Verster Prison. Amid growing domestic and international pressure and fears of racial civil war, President F. W. de Klerk released him in 1990. Mandela and de Klerk led efforts to negotiate an end to apartheid, which resulted in the 1994 multiracial general election in which Mandela led the ANC to victory and became president. Leading a broad coalition government which promulgated a new constitution, Mandela emphasised reconciliation between the country's racial groups and created the Truth and Reconciliation Commission to investigate past human rights abuses. Economically, his administration retained its predecessor's liberal framework despite his own socialist beliefs, also introducing measures to encourage land reform, combat poverty and expand healthcare services. Internationally, Mandela acted as mediator in the Pan Am Flight 103 bombing trial and served as secretary-general of the Non-Aligned Movement from 1998 to 1999. He declined a second presidential term and was succeeded by his deputy, Thabo Mbeki. Mandela became an elder statesman and focused on combating poverty and HIV/AIDS through the charitable Nelson Mandela Foundation.

Mandela was a controversial figure for much of his life. Although critics on the right denounced him as a communist terrorist and those on the far-left deemed him too eager to negotiate and reconcile with apartheid's supporters, he gained international acclaim for his activism. Globally regarded as an icon of democracy and social justice, he received more than 250 honours, including the Nobel Peace Prize. He is held in deep respect within South Africa, where he is often referred to by his Thembu clan name, Madiba, and described as the “Father of the Nation”.

<https://www.un.org/en/events/mandeladay/assets/pdf/mandela100-booklet.pdf>

“Our march to freedom is irreversible. We must not allow fear to stand in our way.” Those who are voteless cannot be expected to continue paying taxes to a government which is not responsible to them. People who live in poverty and starvation cannot be expected to pay exorbitant house rents to the government and local authorities. We furnish the sinews of agriculture and industry. We produce the work of the gold mines, the diamonds and the coal, of the farms and industry, in return for miserable wages.

Why should we continue enriching those who steal the products of our sweat and blood? Those who exploit us and refuse us the right to organise trade unions? ...

I am informed that a warrant for my arrest has been issued, and that the police are looking for me. ... Any serious politician will realise that under present-day conditions in this country, to seek for cheap martyrdom by handing myself to the police is naive and criminal. We have an important programme before us and it is important to carry it out very seriously and without delay. I have chosen this latter course, which is more difficult and which entails more risk and hardship than sitting in gaol. I have had to separate myself from my dear wife and children, from my mother and sisters, to live as an outlaw in my own land. I have had to close my business, to abandon my profession, and live in poverty and misery, as many of my people are doing. ... I shall fight the government side by side with you, inch by inch, and mile by mile, until victory is won. What are you going to do? Will you come along with us, or are you going to cooperate with the government in its efforts to suppress the claims and aspirations of your own people? Or are you going to remain silent and neutral in a matter of life and death to my people, to our people? For my own part I have made my choice. I will not leave South Africa, nor will I surrender. Only through hardship, sacrifice and militant action can freedom be won. The struggle is my life. I will continue fighting for freedom until the end of my days.

“THE STRUGGLE IS MY LIFE,” PRESS STATEMENT ISSUED WHILE UNDERGROUND IN SOUTH AFRICA, 26 JUNE 1961”

In its proper meaning equality before the law means the right to participate in the making of the laws by which one is governed, a constitution which guarantees democratic rights to all sections of the population, the right to approach the court for protection or relief in the case of the violation of rights guaranteed in the constitution, and the right to take part in the administration of justice as judges, magistrates, attorneys-general, law advisers and similar positions. In the absence of these safeguards the phrase “equality before the law,” in so far as it is intended to apply to us, is meaningless and misleading. All the rights and privileges to which I have referred are monopolized by whites, and we enjoy none of them. (I)consider myself neither morally nor legally obliged to obey laws made by a parliament in which I am not represented. That the will of the people is the basis of “I have cherished the ideal of a democratic and free society.... It is an ideal which I hope to live for and to achieve. But if needs be, it is an ideal for which I am prepared to die.” The authority of government is a principle universally acknowledged as sacred throughout the civilised world, and constitutes the basic foundations of freedom and justice. It is understandable why citizens, who have the vote as well as the right to direct representation in the country’s governing bodies, should be morally and legally bound by the laws governing the country.

It should be equally understandable why we, as Africans, should adopt the attitude that we are neither morally nor legally bound to obey laws which we have not made, nor can we be expected to have confidence in courts which enforce such laws. ...

I hate the practice of race discrimination, and in my hatred I am sustained by the fact that the overwhelming majority of mankind hate it equally. I hate the systematic inculcation of children with colour prejudice and I am sustained in that hatred by the fact that the overwhelming majority of mankind, here and abroad, are with me in that. I hate the racial arrogance which decrees that the good things of life shall be retained as the exclusive right of a minority of the population, and which reduces the majority of the population to a position of subservience and inferiority, and maintains them as voteless chattels to work where they are told and behave as they are told by the ruling minority. I am sustained in that hatred by the fact that the overwhelming majority of mankind both in this country and abroad are with me.

Nothing that this court can do to me will change in any way that hatred in me, which can only be removed by the removal of the injustice and the inhumanity which I have sought to remove from the political and social life of this country.

COURT STATEMENT, PRETORIA, SOUTH AFRICA, 15 OCTOBER–7 NOVEMBER 1962

Mandela, we love you for what you stood for

The right for equality

The right to end racism

The right to be human

The right for governmental policies to be just, and

The right to be free.

Thurgood Marshall

Written By: Barbara Bullen

Birthday wishes to a great man.

Honored by many for the work he did to end segregation by taking an active role in his job as a Civil Rights Activist, Lawyer and Justice.

Thank you, Thurgood, for the good you did and may your work and successbe forever in the thoughts of everyone not only in the United States but the world.

https://www.oyez.org/justices/thurgood_marshall

Thurgood Marshall had a fresh, passionate voice and became a champion of civil rights, both on the bench and through almost 30 Supreme Court victories before his appointment, during times of severe racial strains. Marshall was born in Baltimore, Maryland, on July 2, 1908, to Norma Arica and William Canfield Marshall. Marshall’s mother was a kindergarten teacher and his father was an amateur writer who worked as a dining-car waiter on a railroad, later becoming a chief steward at a ritzy club. When Marshall’s father had a day off, he would occasionally take his sons to court so they could watch the legal procedure and arguments presented. Afterwards, the three would debate legal issues and current events together. Marshall’s father would challenge his sons on the points they made, constantly encouraging them to prove their case. Growing up in Baltimore, Marshall experienced the racial discrimination that shaped his passion for civil rights early on. The city had a death rate for African-Americans that was twice that of Caucasians, and due to school segregation, Marshall was forced to go to an all-black grade school. Once, he was unable to use the bathroom because all public restrooms were reserved for whites. Despite the times, Marshall’s parents tried to shelter him from the reality of racism. They earned enough money to live in a nice area, and he was able to attend a first-rate high school. He was often mischievous and sent out of class to read the Constitution for misbehavior.

When Marshall graduated high school in 1925, he knew the Constitution backwards and forwards. Marshall was accepted to Lincoln University in Oxford, Pennsylvania, from where his brother had just graduated. It was known as the black counterpart to Princeton, and one of his classmates was the famous writer Langston Hughes. Marshall chose to focus more on the social life of college. Because of his intelligence, he was able to get through with little effort, but after getting suspended for hazing with his fraternity, he began to focus on academics. Marshall joined the debate club, which helped him realize his passion for becoming a lawyer. He also became more involved with civil rights and helped desegregate a movie theater, which he later described as one of the happiest moments in his life. Marshall met his wife, Vivian Burey, while taking a weekend trip with his friends to Philadelphia.

They soon married on September 4, 1929, before Marshall started his last semester. He graduated college in 1930 as a top-notch student. After being denied by his first choice, the University of Maryland Law School, due to the color of his skin, Marshall decided to go to Howard University. He and his wife moved in with his parents, and his mother sold her wedding ring to help pay for his law school. There he learned about civil rights law and began to think of the Constitution as a living document. His mentors introduced him to the world of the NAACP, often bringing him to attend meetings and watch lawyers discuss key issues. One of the mentors who made the biggest impression upon Marshall was Charles Houston, who taught him to defeat racial discrimination through the use of existing laws. Marshall graduated as valedictorian of his class in 1933 and moved back to Baltimore.

Marshall denied a postgraduate scholarship to Harvard in order to start his own practice and opened an office in east Baltimore. A few people did come to him for help, though unable to pay. Marshall turned none of them away. He began to develop his style as he took cases dealing with police brutality, evictions and harsh landlords. Marshall was respectful but forceful in presenting his case. As his name began to gain notice, he earned big clients such as labor organizations, building associations, and corporations. Marshall started to volunteer with the NAACP and eventually became one of their attorneys, joining his mentor Houston to argue cases together. He won his first case arguing that the University of Maryland Law School should allow an African-American admission. In 1935, Houston got Marshall appointed as Assistant Special Counsel for New York in the organization.

From then on, the two began planning on how to have the Supreme Court overrule the separate but equal doctrine. After Houston resigned and Marshall took over as Special Counsel in 1938, he traveled to dangerous areas in the South in order to investigate lynching, the denial of voting rights, jury service, and fair trials to African-Americans. The face of the NAACP had soon become that of Marshall's.

In 1940, the NAACP set up a legal activist organization known as Fund, Inc., of which Marshall was hired to be special counsel. He was able to work toward his goal of challenging segregation in education. He won his first Supreme Court case dealing with forced confession; and after President Truman rejected the separate but equal doctrine in relation to the G.I. Bill, Marshall was ready to bring the education issue into full light. Marshall finally got the case he had been hoping for, and in 1952 argued Brown v. Board of Education. The case was reargued in 1953, and after five months of waiting, the Supreme Court delivered its opinion that invalidated the separate but equal doctrine. In 1961, President Kennedy appointed Marshall as federal judge to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in New York City. Marshall spent four years on the court, and none of his opinions were reversed on appeal to the Supreme Court. In 1965, President Johnson called upon Marshall to be the country's next Solicitor General. Marshall was sworn into office, but only spent two years in the position. In 1967, the President appointed him as the first African-American to be an Associate Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court. Marshall's voice was a liberal one that held great influence early on in his term. As a proponent of judicial activism, he believed that the United States had a moral imperative to move progressively forward. He staunchly supported upholding individual rights, expanding civil rights, and limiting the scope of criminal punishment. Justice William Brennan shared many of Marshall's opinions and they usually voted in the same bloc. In Furman v. Georgia, these justices argued the death penalty was unconstitutional in all circumstances, and dissented from the subsequent overruling opinion, Gregg v. Georgia, a few years later. He also made separate contributions to labor law (Teamsters v. Terry), securities law (TSC Industries, Inc. v. Northway, Inc.), and tax law (Cottage Savings Ass'n v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue). He had strong views on affirmative action and contributed greatly to opinions on constitutional law. Marshall maintained a down-to-earth style and would often joke with Chief Justice Burger as they passed in the hallways by asking "What's shakin', Chief baby?"

As the court made a shift towards conservatism, however, Marshall became frustrated and his influence weakened. Despite the change of currents, Marshall's voice remained strong until his retirement, when he was succeeded by Associate Justice Clarence Thomas. Marshall died on January 24, 1993 of heart failure in Bethesda, Maryland.

"Thurgood Marshall." Oyez, www.oyez.org/justices/thurgood_marshall. Accessed 2 Jun. 2022.

<https://usa.usembassy.de/etexts/gov/marshall.pdf>

Justice for All: The Legacy of Thurgood Marshall

<https://www.archives.gov/milestone-documents/brown-v-board-ofeducation#:~:text=On%20May%2017%2C%201954%2C%20>

U.S.,amendment%20and%20

was%20therefore%20unconstitutional.

Brown v. Board of Education (1954)

In this milestone decision, the Supreme Court ruled that separating children in public schools on the basis of race was unconstitutional. It signaled the end of legalized racial segregation in the schools of the United States, overruling the "separate but equal" principle set forth in the 1896 Plessy v. Ferguson case.

On May 17, 1954, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Earl Warren delivered the unanimous ruling in the landmark civil rights case Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, Kansas. Statesanctioned segregation of public schools was a violation of the 14th amendment and was therefore unconstitutional. This historic decision marked the end of the "separate but equal" precedent set by the Supreme Court nearly 60 years earlier in Plessy v. Ferguson and served as a catalyst for the expanding civil rights movement during the decade of the 1950s.

Thurgood Marshall

Thurgood is famous for the Brown v. Board of Education case where "separate but equal" was held to be unconstitutional in public schools.

He is a hero for the Civil Rights Era and for the future where his determination, strength, and courage enabled him to stop racism and inequality in schools by taking action.

Thurgood Marshall, Happy Birthday.

CLAUDETTE COLVIN

Written By: Barbara Bullen

When racism rears its ugly head against you should you take action to stop the pain you feel of being discriminated against the laws that aren't right
the laws to protect only whites!

When one hears about the Civil Rights era, it immediately brings to mind activists; Martin Luther King, Jr., Rosa Parks and organizations like the NAACP and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. There are also many other leaders and activists that are in history books throughout the United States and the World. In 1955, a teenager stood up for her rights and was arrested even before the infamous Rosa Parks stand. Rosa Parks, who worked for the NAACP as the secretary for the Montgomery Chapter, was arrested for not getting up from her seat for a White man on a bus. Claudette Colvin, a Black teenager attended Booker T. Washington High School, only 15 at the time, didn't want her constitutional rights violated even though segregation on public transit was the law. Whites were to be seated in the front of the bus, and if there were no seats left for Whites than Blacks had to get up from their seats at the back for Whites to be seated.

Colvin lived in troubled times; times when segregation divided the nation so that Blacks took a back seat to the lives of Whites. Segregation was the norm and the daily lives of all who traveled the public transit until Colvin took a stand.

In Montgomery, Alabama, Colvin is said to be a pioneer, one who led the way and helped end segregation on public transit. When she was forcibly removed from the bus and arrested on March 2, 1955, her attorney, Fred Gray, along with four other plaintiffs filed a federal case, in Federal District Court, February 1, 1956, Browder vs. Gayle, to challenge segregation on public transit. A three-judge panel found the law unconstitutional which was appealed to the Supreme Court where it upheld the state court ruling, finding the law unconstitutional.

When one hears about the Civil Rights era, it immediately brings to mind activists; Martin Luther King, Jr., Rosa Parks and organizations like the NAACP and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. There are also many other leaders and activists that are in history books throughout the United States and the World. In 1955, a teenager stood up for her rights and was arrested even before the infamous Rosa Parks stand. Rosa Parks, who worked for the NAACP as the secretary for the Montgomery Chapter, was arrested for not getting up from her seat for a White man on a bus. Claudette Colvin, a Black teenager attended Booker T. Washington High School, only 15 at the time, didn't want her constitutional rights violated even though segregation on public transit was the law. Whites were to be seated in the front of the bus, and if there were no seats left for Whites than Blacks had to get up from their seats at the back for Whites to be seated.

Colvin lived in troubled times; times when segregation divided the nation so that Blacks took a back seat to the lives of Whites. Segregation was the norm and the daily lives of all who traveled the public transit until Colvin took a stand.

In Montgomery, Alabama, Colvin is said to be a pioneer, one who led the way and helped end segregation on public transit. When she was forcibly removed from the bus and arrested on March 2, 1955, her attorney, Fred Gray, along with four other plaintiffs filed a federal case, in Federal District Court, February 1, 1956, Browder vs. Gayle, to challenge segregation on public transit. A three-judge panel found the law unconstitutional which was appealed to the Supreme Court where it upheld the state court ruling, finding the law unconstitutional.

"Browder v. Gayle 142 F. Supp. 707 (M.D. Ala. 1956) Decided Jun 5, 1956 709 *709 RIVES, Circuit Judge. Statement of the Case. The purpose of this action is to test the constitutionality of both the statutes of the State of Alabama and the ordinances of the City of Montgomery which require the segregation of the white and colored races on the motor buses of the Montgomery City Lines, Inc., *711 a common carrier of passengers in said City and its police jurisdiction.

1 2 711 1 Title 48, § 301(31a, b, c), Code of Alabama of 1940, as amended, which provide: "§301(31a).

Separate accommodations for white and colored races. — All passenger stations in this state operated by any motor transportation company shall have separate waiting rooms or space and separate ticket windows for the white and colored races, but such accommodations for the races shall be equal. All motor transportation companies or operators of vehicles carrying passengers for hire in this state, whether intrastate or interstate passengers, shall at all times provide equal but separate accommodations on each vehicle for the white and colored races. The conductor or agent of the motor transportation company in charge of any vehicle is authorize and required to assign each passenger to the division of the vehicle designated for the race to which the passenger belongs; and, if the passenger refuses to occupy the division to which he is assigned, the conductor or agent may refuse to carry the passenger on the vehicle; and, for such refusal, neither the conductor or agent of the motor transportation company nor the motor transportation company shall be liable in damages. Any motor transportation company or person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars for each offense; and each day's violation of this section shall constitute a separate offense. The provisions of this section shall be administered and enforced by the Alabama public service commission in the manner in which provisions of the Alabama Motor Carrier Act of 1939 are administered and enforced. (1945, p. 731, appvd. July 6, 1945.)"

For the complete case see below:

<https://www.freedomforuminstitute.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/07/Browder-v.-Gayle.pdf>

According to Jonathan Gold in his article, "The Browder in Browder v. Gayle. On April 29, 1955, Aurelia Browder, like so many other black residents of Montgomery, was mistreated on a city bus. According to her testimony in the civil case, she was forced by the bus driver "to get up and stand to let a white man and a white lady sit down." Three other plaintiffs, Mary Louise Smith, Claudette Colvin and Susie McDonald, had reported similar mistreatment. The cumulative effect of these "demeaning, wretched, intolerable impositions and conditions," as boycott organizer Jo Ann Robinson referred to them, inspired Montgomery's black community to begin developing plans for a boycott that eventually began after the arrest of Rosa Park.

For further reading:

<https://www.learningforjustice.org/sites/default/files/general/TT53%20Browder%20v.%20Gayle.pdf>

“Nine months after Claudette Colvin’s arrest, local activist Rosa Parks took similar action. She refused to give up her bus seat to a white rider and got arrested. Colvin’s actions raised awareness, but Parks’s actions set off a boycott of the Montgomery bus lines. Thousands of Black residents rode the bus to work, often for white employers. After Parks’s arrest, though, they refused to ride for an entire year (National Youth Summit 2020).”

<https://americanhistory.si.edu/sites/default/files/file-uploader/NYS%20Case%20Study%E2%80%9393Student%20Kit%20FINAL4.pdf>

Colvin’s case unlike Rosa Parks’s “was dropped by civil rights campaigners because Colvin was unmarried and pregnant during the proceedings.[6][7] It is now widely accepted that Colvin was not accredited by civil rights campaigners at the time due to her circumstances. Rosa Parks stated: “If the white press got ahold of that information, they would have [had] a field day.

The record of her arrest and adjudication of delinquency was expunged by the district court in 2021, with the support of the district attorney for the county in which the charges were brought more than 66 years before.”

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Claudette_Colvin

When people, no matter their race, color or creed cannot take any more discriminatory and racist acts towards them, their only recourse is to take action. Humanity needs people like Colvin and the others who took a stand for their rights despite the consequences.

Martin Luther King Jr. Day

Written by: Barbara Bullen

Martin Luther King Jr., (Michael King Jr., 1929-1968) known internationally throughout the world as one of the greatest mediators of all time, is honored yearly. Brought up as a Christian, he followed in his father’s footsteps (Martin Luther King, Sr.) by becoming a Baptist Minister. A man who took it upon himself to eradicate discrimination against blacks along with his wife, Coretta Scott King, his leaders and activists, helped dismantle the barriers that for so long held blacks from having equal rights. The civil rights movement which began in 1955 led to the enactment of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of which Martin Luther King Jr. was the President. Martin’s mission was to do what ever was necessary in a non-violent way to dismantle discrimination, violence and oppression against blacks which included the use of civil disobedience.

For too long, the laws protected whites in order for blacks to be subservient. He was tired and so were blacks in the South, throughout the United States and around the world, so King participated in and led marches for their civil rights including the right to vote, desegregation and labor rights. King was also instrumental in the 1955 Montgomery Bus Boycott which was a protest against the segregation policies of public transit. December 5, 1955, the Monday after Rosa Parks sat in the white area of the bus and refused to give her seat to a white person, she was arrested due to the segregation laws on public transit, only permitting her to sit in the back of the bus. King led many nonviolent protest marches and was the key figure helping organize the 1963 March on Washington, where he delivered a speech that electrified the nation with his “I have a Dream speech” on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. Part of his speech is listed below because the reinforcement of what King did for the world to change the discriminatory practices and laws need to be remembered by all.

I HAVE A DREAM SPEECH

Martin Luther King Jr

I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.”

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.

I have a dream today!

And when this happens, when we allow freedom ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God’s children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual:

Free at last! Free at last!

Thank God Almighty, we are free at last!

1964 saw the award of the Nobel Peace Prize to King for dismantling racial inequality through nonviolence. In 1965, Martin was instrumental in organizing two marches from Selma to Montgomery in the fight for the right to vote with activists of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. In 1968, Martin was assassinated in Memphis, Tennessee when he planned a national occupation of Washington, D.C.

Martin Luther King Jr. Day is King’s birthday which is a federal holiday signed into bill on November 3, 1983 by President Ronald Reagan for the third Monday of each January.

Martin Luther King Day In Ohio

MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR. HOLIDAY COMMISSION

“The Ohio Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Holiday Commission (Commission) was established in 1985 by Executive Order. Today, the DAS Administrative Support Division provides support to the commission.

The Commission is a statewide advocate of Dr. King’s principles of nonviolence and annually honors Ohio’s citizens who work to promote diversity and eliminate discrimination through nonviolent methods. Each year, the Commission presents awards to Ohioans to celebrate the life of Dr. King, whose teachings encourage nonviolent actions to secure equal rights for all Americans. The commemorative celebration is held each January in downtown Columbus.

The Commission strives to carry out Dr. King’s dream of service to others throughout the entire year through various events (Ohio, Department of Administrative Services).”

For further information on the 37th Annual MLK Awards please go their website:

<https://das.ohio.gov/Divisions/Equal-Opportunity/Martin-Luther-King-Jr-Holiday-Commission>

“Awards are presented in the following categories.

•Governor’s Humanitarian Award

•Individual Award

•Organization Award

•Collaborative Effort Award

•Youth: Capturing the Vision of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.”

King’s legacy continues throughout generations, never to be forgotten for what he did for mankind

Harriet Tubman

Written by: Barbara Bullen

Harriet Tubman an abolitionist renown.

We thank God for her spirit, her strength and her love for her fellow men.

We'll remember her birthday this March to tell her story of the love for mankind, despite the cruelty that she, the slaves and the fugitives received by the merciless slave masters bent on slavery.

March 10 is the day on which it is said that Harriet Tubman (Araminta Ross) famously known as an abolitionist was born. As most Blacks who were born into slavery in the 1800s, Harriet was like them but became a hero when she escaped from slavery and helped other enslaved people escape from their masters or bondage.

Harriet was born in Dorchester County, Maryland where she lived a horrific life like most slaves being beaten and whipped by her slave masters and even experiencing a life-threatening head injury that induced visions and dreams she attributed to the works of God. She became deeply religious because of her Methodist upbringing and these visions and dreams.

“She often fought illness in her childhood, but as she grew older, the “sickly” young household girl grew stronger and even became a fieldhand. On a secluded plantation during her adolescence, Tubman attempted to warn an escaping slave that his master was nearby. She was caught between the slave and his master when the two confronted each other. The master slung a lead weight at the escapee, but hit Tubman in the head. The force of the blow “broke her skull and drove a piece of her bandana” into her head. The head injury would cause her to have headaches, fainting spells, and visions for the rest of her life. In 1844, she married a free black man named John Tubman. Around this time, she hired a lawyer to investigate her family’s slave contracts. The lawyer found her mother should have been freed at the age of 45, meaning that some of her siblings should have been born free.”

<https://www.crf-usa.org/images/pdf/gates/Harriet-Tubman-End-of-Slavey.pdf>

In the mid-1800s she escaped to Philadelphia to return to help those she left behind; she helped her family to escape and led many others to their freedom.

“The Fugitive Slave Law of 1850 was part of the Compromise of 1850. This law required the United States government to actively assist slave holders in recapturing freedom seekers. Under the United States Constitution, slave holders had the right to reclaim slaves who ran away to free states. With the Fugitive Slave Law of 1850, the federal government had to assist the slave holders. No such requirement had existed previously.” https://ohiohistorycentral.org/w/Fugitive_Slave_Law_of_1850

Harriet tried to find and help slaves in captivity escape and this included John Tubman who she later found out had remarried to a woman named Caroline thereby ending her quest to find him.

Frederick Douglass an abolitionist was also said to have worked with Tubman in helping fugitives.

“There is evidence to suggest that Tubman and her group stopped at the home of abolitionist and former slave Frederick Douglass.[63] In his third autobiography, Douglass wrote: “On one occasion I had eleven fugitives at the same time under my roof, and it was necessary for them to remain with me until I could collect sufficient money to get them on to Canada. It was the largest number I ever had at any one time, and I had some difficulty in providing so many with food and shelter. ... “[64] The number of travelers and the time of the visit make it likely that this was Tubman’s group.[63]

Douglass and Tubman admired one another greatly as they both struggled against slavery. When an early biography of Tubman was being prepared in 1868, Douglass wrote a letter to honor her. He compared his own efforts with hers, writing:

The difference between us is very marked. Most that I have done and suffered in the service of our cause has been in public, and I have received much encouragement at every step of the way. You, on the other hand, have labored in a private way. I have wrought in the day – you in the night. ... The midnight sky and the silent stars have been the witnesses of your devotion to freedom and of your heroism. Excepting John Brown – of sacred memory – I know of no one who has willingly encountered more perils and hardships to serve our enslaved people than you have.[65]” https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Harriet_Tubman
In 11 years, Tubman helped rescue 70 slaves in what was said to have taken 13 trips that included family members. Tubman was called “Moses” because of her efforts to free and rescue the slaves from their slave masters and to help fugitives to escape to the north.

She was devout and dedicated to God aided by visions, premonitions and the voice of God which is said to sometimes be attributed to her head injury. Although a religious woman she would not hesitate to use a gun which she carried for her protection and the protection of the slaves, even to the point of using it on them if they ever turned back to their plantation.

“Despite the efforts of the slaveholders, Tubman and the fugitives she assisted were never captured. Years later, she told an audience: “I was conductor of the Underground Railroad for eight years, and I can say what most conductors can’t say – I never ran my train off the track and I never lost a passenger.”[3]...

Scouting and the Combahee River Raid

“When Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation, Tubman considered it an important step toward the goal of liberating all Black people from slavery.[107] She renewed her support for a defeat of the Confederacy, and in early 1863 she led a band of scouts through the land around Port Royal.[108] The marshes and rivers in South Carolina were similar to those of the Eastern Shore of Maryland; thus, her knowledge of covert travel and subterfuge among potential enemies was put to good use.[108] Her group, working under the orders of Secretary of War Edwin Stanton, mapped the unfamiliar terrain and reconnoitered its inhabitants. She later worked alongside Colonel James Montgomery, and provided him with key intelligence that aided in the capture of Jacksonville, Florida.[109]

Later that year, Tubman became the first woman to lead an armed assault during the Civil War.[110] When Montgomery and his troops conducted an assault on a collection of plantations along the Combahee River, Tubman served as a key adviser and accompanied the raid.

On the morning of June 2, 1863, Tubman guided three steamboats around Confederate mines in the waters leading to the shore. [111] Once ashore, the Union troops set fire to the plantations, destroying infrastructure and seizing thousands of dollars worth of food and supplies.[112]

When the steamboats sounded their whistles, slaves throughout the area understood that they were being liberated. Tubman watched as slaves stampeded toward the boats. “I never saw such a sight”, she said later,[113] describing a scene of chaos with women carrying still-steaming pots of rice, pigs squealing in bags slung over shoulders, and babies hanging around their parents’ necks.

Although their owners, armed with handguns and whips, tried to stop the mass escape, their efforts were nearly useless in the tumult.[112] As Confederate troops raced to the scene, steamboats packed full of slaves took off toward Beaufort.[114]

More than 750 slaves were rescued in the Combahee River Raid.[115][113] Newspapers heralded Tubman’s “patriotism, sagacity, energy, [and] ability”,[116] and she was praised for her recruiting efforts – most of the newly liberated men went on to join the Union army.[116] Tubman later worked with Colonel Robert Gould Shaw at the assault on Fort Wagner, reportedly serving him his last meal.[117] She described the battle by saying: “And then we saw the lightning, and that was the guns; and then we heard the thunder, and that was the big guns; and then we heard the rain falling, and that was the drops of blood falling; and when we came to get the crops, it was dead men that we reaped.”[118]

For two more years, Tubman worked for the Union forces, tending to newly liberated slaves, scouting into Confederate territory, and nursing wounded soldiers in Virginia.[119] She also made periodic trips back to Auburn to visit her family and care for her parents.[120] The Confederacy surrendered in April 1865; after donating several more months of service, Tubman headed home to Auburn.[121]

During a train ride to New York in 1869, the conductor told her to move from a half-price section into the baggage car. She refused, showing the government-issued papers that entitled her to ride there. He cursed at her and grabbed her, but she resisted and he summoned two other passengers for help. While she clutched at the railing, they muscled her away, breaking her arm in the process. They threw her into the baggage car, causing more injuries. As these events transpired, other white passengers cursed Tubman and shouted for the conductor to kick her off the train.[122] Her act of defiance became a historical symbol, later cited when Rosa Parks refused to move from a bus seat in 1955.[123][124]”

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Harriet_Tubman

*Harriet Tubman,
your legacy and dream continues,
until the day when slavery,
is abolished throughout the world.*

The Ghost of the Mountains

Written by: Erika S. Hanson

The snow leopard is one of nature’s most beautiful creatures. As of 2021, the snow leopard is no longer considered an endangered species. However, the population is still at risk due to illegal poaching and the encroachment of society into the cats’ habitat. So, although it has been moved from “endangered” to “vulnerable” on the Endangered Species list, the snow leopard is still at risk. According to the International Union for Conservation of Nature, the snow leopard is still on track to lose over ten percent of its wild population over the next three generations.

The natural habitat of the snow leopard is primarily in the mountainous areas of Central Asia, Kyrgyzstan, and Pakistan. Their defining features include a white pelt, with a pattern of dark rosettes and spots. Additionally, the leopard has a tail that is longer than most other cats, in order to assist with balance on steep mounds of snow. Unfortunately, the snow leopard’s distinctive coat makes it a prize for poachers. The bones and other body parts are also used in traditional Asian medicine.

Snow leopards are known to be extremely elusive. Their territory spans over twelve countries, and they live in snowy, mountainous terrain. This makes gathering data on the cat difficult. For this reason, the wild snow leopard population is believed to be between 4,000 and 6,500 in number, and researchers are unable to narrow down that number to a more specific figure.

In addition to poachers, snow leopards face a variety of other threats, including human encroachment on territory and “retaliatory killings”--the leopards are killed by farmers in the area to protect their livestock. Due to humans pushing further into their territory, snow leopards find it increasingly difficult to find food, not only due to industrialization, but because a snow leopard’s prey is also hunted by the surrounding humans.

Snow leopards are capable of bringing down prey that is up to three times their own weight. A typical diet would include blue sheep, Argali wild sheep, ibex, marmots, deer and other, smaller, animals. Because these animals are also consumed by humans, the number of prey in these mountainous areas is dwindling, leading the snow leopards to attack local livestock instead and the aforementioned retaliatory killings by farmers.

According to the Snow Leopard Trust, there has never been a verified instance of a snow leopard attacking a human. The Trust focuses its efforts on protecting the snow leopard by partnering with local communities and creating incentives for those communities to preserve snow leopards.

A snow leopard can live between ten and twelve years in the wild. In captivity, their level of survival sharply increases to twice that, at 22 years. Snow leopards mature quickly. Initially, they are totally reliant on their mother, and their eyes do not open until they are seven days old. At two months old, cubs are able to eat solid food. At three months, they are able to learn basic hunting skills. Between 18 and 22 months, the cubs are ready to leave their mother. It is estimated that male snow leopards reach maturity by age four. Females maturation is harder to pin down, due to scant information.

However, it is estimated that a female snow leopard is ready to have her first litter by age three.

Mating season is the only time you will see more than one of these solitary cats. From January to mid-March, males and females travel together for a few days. Once that time is done, and the female leopard is pregnant, she retreats to a secluded den site.

Pregnancy typically lasts between 93 and 110 days. Her cubs are usually born that June or July, and she becomes their sole caretaker, providing food and warmth, and teaching them how to survive in the wild. Once the cubs are ready, they separate from their mother and strike out on their own.

We continue to gather details about this “Ghost of the Mountains,” but information remains scarce. Their spotted white coats are unique, and unlike other big cats, they cannot roar, but can make other sounds such as a mew, purr, growl or hiss. They also make a low puffing sound called a “pusten” or “chuff.” This is a non-aggressive sound, and can indicate contentment, or be used to communicate with other snow leopards in the area. It is often used as a greeting.

There is still much to learn about these beautiful animals. Researchers continue their work with the people of Central Asia and the Himalayas to preserve and protect the snow leopard. Yet, the snow leopard remains elusive, which only adds to its mystique. Although sometimes misunderstood, this great cat is harmless to humans and is a key part in the planet’s continuing ecology.

Malcolm X

Written by: Barbara Bullen

“No, I’m not an American. I’m one of the 22 million Black people who are the victims of Americanism. One of the 22 million Black people who are the victims of democracy, nothing but disguised hypocrisy. So, I’m not standing here speaking to you as an American, or a patriot or a flag saluter, or a flag-waver-no not I. I’m speaking as a victim of this American System. And I see America through the eyes of the victim.

I don’t see any American dream; I see an American nightmare.”

“And why was he our ‘Shining Black Prince’?

Selected Quotes from Malcolm X: Nation Time: Spring 1997

https://freedomarchives.org/Documents/Finder/DOC513_scans/Malcolm_X/513.Malco

Im.X.Selected.Quotes.pdf

One of the most influential figures of the Civil Rights Movement was Malcolm X. Unlike Dr. Martin Luther King Jr’s non-violent mission for equality and the end of discrimination not only for Blacks but for all races, Malcolm X commanded attention throughout the world.

“Malcolm X (born Malcolm Little, later Malik el-Shabazz; May 19, 1925 – February 21, 1965) was an African-American Muslim minister and human rights activist who was a prominent figure during the civil rights movement. A spokesman for the Nation of Islam until 1964, he was a vocal advocate for black empowerment and the promotion of Islam within the black community.

Malcolm spent his adolescence living in a series of foster homes or with relatives after his father’s death and his mother’s hospitalization. He engaged in several illicit activities, eventually being sentenced to 10 years in prison in 1946 for larceny and breaking and entering.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Malcolm_X

Malcolm’s childhood was fraught with misfortune yet he never stopped looking forward to another day in which to excel even to the extent of educating himself while in prison.

“... Malcolm X was one of the most articulate and powerful leaders of black America during the 1960s.

A street hustler convicted of robbery in 1946, he spent seven years in prison, where he educated himself and became a disciple of Elijah Muhammad, founder of the Nation of Islam. In the days of the civil rights movement, Malcolm X emerged as the leading spokesman for black separatism, a philosophy that urged black Americans to cut political, social, and economic ties with the white community. After a pilgrimage to Mecca, the capital of the Muslim world, in 1964, he became an orthodox Muslim, adopted the Muslim name El Hajj Malik El-Shabazz, and distanced himself from the teachings of the black Muslims. He was assassinated in 1965. In the following excerpt from his autobiography (1965), coauthored with Alex Haley and published the year of his death, Malcolm X describes his self-education ...

It was because of my letters that I happened to stumble upon starting to acquire some kind of a homemade education.

I became increasingly frustrated. at not being able to express what I wanted to convey in letters that I wrote, especially those to Mr. Elijah Muhammad. In the street, I had been the most articulate hustler out there - I had commanded attention when I said something. But now, trying to write simple English, I not only wasn’t articulate, I wasn’t even functional. How would I sound writing in slang, the way I would say it, something such as, “Look, daddy, let me pull your coat about a cat, Elijah Muhammad-“

Many who today hear me somewhere in person, or on television, or those who read something I’ve said, will think I went to school far beyond the eighth grade. This impression is due entirely to my prison studies.

It had really begun back in the Charlestown Prison, when Bimbi first made me feel envy of his stock of knowledge.

Bimbi had always taken charge of any conversations he was in, and I had tried to emulate him. But every book I picked up had few sentences which didn’t contain anywhere from one to nearly all of the words that might as well have been in Chinese. When I just skipped those words, of course, I really ended up with little idea of what the book said. So I had come to the Norfolk Prison Colony still going through only book-reading motions. Pretty soon, I would have quit even these motions, unless I had received the motivation that I did. I saw that the best thing I could do was get hold of a dictionary - to study, to learn some words. I was lucky enough to reason also that I should try to improve my penmanship. It was sad. I couldn’t even write in a straight line. It was both ideas together that moved me to request a dictionary along with some tablets and pencils from the Norfolk Prison Colony school.

I spent two days just riffling uncertainly through the dictionary’s pages. I’d never realized so many words existed! I didn’t know which words I needed to learn. Finally, just to start some kind of action, I began copying.

In my slow, painstaking, ragged handwriting, I copied into my tablet everything printed on that first page, down to the punctuation marks.

I believe it took me a day. Then, aloud, I read back, to myself, everything I’d written on the tablet. Over and over, aloud, to myself, I read my own handwriting I woke up the next morning, thinking about those words - immensely proud to realize that not only had I written so much at one time, but I’d written words that I never knew were in the world. Moreover, with a little effort, I also could remember what many of these words meant. I reviewed the words whose meanings I didn’t remember. Funny thing, from the dictionary first page right now, that “aardvark” springs to my mind. The dictionary had a picture of it, a longtailed, long-eared, burrowing African mammal, which lives off termites caught by sticking out its tongue as an anteater does for ants.

I was so fascinated that I went on - I copied the dictionary’s next page. And the same experience came when I studied that. With every succeeding page, I also learned of people and places and events from history. Actually the dictionary is like a miniature encyclopedia. Finally the dictionary’s A section had filled a whole tablet-and I went on into the B’s. That was the way I started copying what eventually became the entire dictionary. It went a lot faster after so much practice helped me to pick up handwriting speed. Between what I wrote in my tablet, and writing letters, during the rest of my time in prison I would guess I wrote a million words.

I suppose it was inevitable that as my word-base broadened, I could for the first time pick up a book and read and now begin to understand what the book was saying. Anyone who has read a great deal can imagine the new world that opened. Let me tell you something: from then until I left that prison, in every free moment I had, if I was not reading in the library, I was reading on my bunk. You couldn’t have gotten me out of books with a wedge. Between Mr. Muhammad’s teachings, my correspondence, my visitors,... and my reading of books, months passed without my even thinking about being imprisoned. In fact, up to then, I never had been so truly free in my life.”

http://www.lattc.edu/Lattc/media/lattc_media/PDFs/Learning-to-Read-by-MalcolmX-PDF.pdf

The Autobiography of Malcolm X

New York, June 1965

CHAPTER ONE NIGHTMARE

“When my mother was pregnant with me, she told me later, a party of hooded Ku Klux Klan riders galloped up to our home in Omaha, Nebraska, one night. Surrounding the house, brandishing their shotguns and rifles, they shouted for my father to come out. My mother went to the front door and opened it. Standing where they could see her pregnant condition, she told them that she was alone with her three small children, and that my father was away, preaching, in Milwaukee. The Klansmen shouted threats and warnings at her that we had better get out of town because “the good Christian white people” were not going to stand for my father’s “spreading trouble” among the “good” Negroes of Omaha with the “back to Africa” preachings of Marcus Garvey.

My father, the Reverend Earl Little, was a Baptist minister, a dedicated organizer for Marcus Aurelius Garvey’s U.N.I.A. (Universal Negro Improvement Association). With the help of such disciples as my father, Garvey, from his headquarters in New York City’s Harlem, was raising the banner of black-race purity and exhorting the Negro masses to return to their ancestral African homeland—a cause which had made Garvey the most controversial black man on earth. Still shouting threats, the Klansmen finally spurred their horses and galloped around the house, shattering every window pane with their gun butts. Then they rode off into the night, their torches flaring, as suddenly as they had come.”

<https://antilogicalism.com/wp-content/uploads/2018/04/malcom-x.pdf>

Advocacy and teachings while with Nation

“From his adoption of the Nation of Islam in 1952 until he broke with it in 1964, Malcolm X promoted the Nation’s teachings. These included beliefs:

- that black people are the original people of the world[99]
- that white people are “devils”[2] and
- that the demise of the white race is imminent.[3]

Louis E. Lomax said that “those who don’t understand biblical prophecy wrongly label him as a racist and as a hate teacher, or as being anti-white or as teaching Black Supremacy”.[100] He was accused[of being antisemitic.[101] In 1961, Malcolm X spoke at a NOI rally alongside George Lincoln Rockwell, the head of the American Nazi Party; Rockwell claimed that there was overlap between black nationalism and white supremacy.[102]

Many who today hear me somewhere in person, or on television, or those who read something I’ve said, will think I went to school far beyond the eighth grade. This impression is due entirely to my prison studies.

It had really begun back in the Charlestown Prison, when Bimbi first made me feel envy of his stock of knowledge.

Bimbi had always taken charge of any conversations he was in, and I had tried to emulate him. But every book I picked up had few sentences which didn’t contain anywhere from one to nearly all of the words that might as well have been in Chinese. When I just skipped those words, of course, I really ended up with little idea of what the book said. So I had come to the Norfolk Prison Colony still going through only book-reading motions. Pretty soon, I would have quit even these motions, unless I had received the motivation that I did. I saw that the best thing I could do was get hold of a dictionary - to study, to learn some words. I was lucky enough to reason also that I should try to improve my penmanship. It was sad. I couldn’t even write in a straight line. It was both ideas together that moved me to request a dictionary along with some tablets and pencils from the Norfolk Prison Colony school.

I spent two days just riffling uncertainly through the dictionary’s pages. I’d never realized so many words existed! I didn’t know which words I needed to learn. Finally, just to start some kind of action, I began copying.

In my slow, painstaking, ragged handwriting, I copied into my tablet everything printed on that first page, down to the punctuation marks.

I believe it took me a day. Then, aloud, I read back, to myself, everything I’d written on the tablet. Over and over, aloud, to myself, I read my own handwriting I woke up the next morning, thinking about those words - immensely proud to realize that not only had I written so much at one time, but I’d written words that I never knew were in the world. Moreover, with a little effort, I also could remember what many of these words meant. I reviewed the words whose meanings I didn’t remember. Funny thing, from the dictionary first page right now, that “aardvark” springs to my mind. The dictionary had a picture of it, a longtailed, long-eared, burrowing African mammal, which lives off termites caught by sticking out its tongue as an anteater does for ants.

I was so fascinated that I went on - I copied the dictionary’s next page. And the same experience came when I studied that. With every succeeding page, I also learned of people and places and events from history. Actually the dictionary is like a miniature encyclopedia. Finally the dictionary’s A section had filled a whole tablet-and I went on into the B’s. That was the way I started copying what eventually became the entire dictionary. It went a lot faster after so much practice helped me to pick up handwriting speed. Between what I wrote in my tablet, and writing letters, during the rest of my time in prison I would guess I wrote a million words.

I suppose it was inevitable that as my word-base broadened, I could for the first time pick up a book and read and now begin to understand what the book was saying. Anyone who has read a great deal can imagine the new world that opened. Let me tell you something: from then until I left that prison, in every free moment I had, if I was not reading in the library, I was reading on my bunk. You couldn’t have gotten me out of books with a wedge. Between Mr. Muhammad’s teachings, my correspondence, my visitors,... and my reading of books, months passed without my even thinking about being imprisoned. In fact, up to then, I never had been so truly free in my life.”

http://www.lattc.edu/Lattc/media/lattc_media/PDFs/Learning-to-Read-by-MalcolmX-PDF.pdf

One of the goals of the civil rights movement was to end disenfranchisement of African Americans, but the Nation of Islam forbade its members from participating in voting and other aspects of the political process.[103] The NAACP and other civil rights organizations denounced him and the Nation of Islam as irresponsible extremists whose views did not represent the common interests of African Americans.[104][105]

Malcolm X was equally critical of the civil rights movement.[106] He called Martin Luther King Jr. a “chump”, and said other civil rights leaders were “stooges” of the white establishment.[107][G] He called the 1963 March on Washington “the farce on Washington”, [109] and said he did not know why so many black people were excited about a demonstration “run by whites

in front of a statue of a president who has been dead for a hundred years and who didn’t like us when he was alive”.[110]

While the civil rights movement fought against racial segregation, Malcolm X advocated the complete separation of African Americans from whites. He proposed that African Americans should return to Africa and that, in the interim, a separate country for black people in America should be created.[111][112] He rejected the civil rights movement’s strategy of nonviolence, arguing that black people should defend and advance themselves “by any means necessary”.[113] His speeches had a powerful effect on his audiences, who were generally African Americans in northern and western cities. Many of them—tired of being told to wait for freedom, justice, equality and respect[114]—felt that he articulated their complaints better than did the civil rights movement.[115][116]”

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Malcolm_X

Malcolm X a great but controversial leader is remembered by memorials and tributes that include the first home he was brought up in which is now a historical monument. Malcolm X is also portrayed in the movies, TV and on stage.

Malcolm X was a great leader known for his beliefs that not everyone liked. But he proved to everyone that despite being incarcerated for seven years he put his time to good use through selfeducation turning out to be the most prolific, educated speaker that there was in the United States. We welcome the holiday that celebrates Malcolm X for we live in a democracy where both sides must be heard; the good, the bad and the ugly that rears its head because of the suffering, racial discrimination and fear and torture of Blacks.

Let us look forward to another day for great leaders to appear to lead us to justice for the benefit of all races in the United States

THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 2022
BY KERRY MCDONALD

Self-directed education, grounded in play, is most beneficial for youth learning and development.

Boston College Psychology Professor: “School Has Become a Toxic Place for Children”

More families may be flocking to homeschooling and other schooling alternatives over the past two years, but Peter Gray has been urging families to flee coercive schooling since long before the pandemic began. The Boston College psychology professor wrote in his 2013 book Free To Learn: “The more oppressive the school system becomes, the more it is driving people away, and that is good.”

Gray joins me on this week’s episode of the LiberatED Podcast to talk about the harms of forced schooling and why self-directed education, grounded in play, is most beneficial for youth learning and development. In our conversation, Gray explains that standard schooling today is a key factor in the continuous rise in rates of childhood and adolescent anxiety, depression, and suicide. Its imposed, one-size-fits all curriculum, reliance on reward and punishment as external motivators, and dismissal of natural childhood curiosity and creativity erode learners’ powerful drives for learning and discovery. Stripped of these drives, and increasingly deprived of opportunities to play, explore, and pursue individual interests outside of school without the constant hovering of adults, children and adolescents become more melancholic and morose.

“We adults are constraining children’s lives, in school and out of school,” says Gray in our podcast discussion. “School has become a toxic place for children, and we refuse to say that publicly. The research can show it but it almost never gets picked up in the popular press,” he adds. Our discussion digs deeper into Gray’s research on the link between standard schooling and skyrocketing rates of diagnoses of ADHD, which Gray asserts is essentially “a failure to adapt to the conditions of standard schooling.” He talks about the disappearance of childhood play and the corresponding rise in childhood mental health disorders, as well as why parents shouldn’t be too concerned about their children’s screen time use.

Gray believes that parents should remove their children from standard schooling and embrace schooling alternatives that are centered on self-directed education. “I’m cheered by the ever-growing stream of people who are leaving coercive schooling for relaxed homeschooling, unschooling, Sudbury schooling, and other forms of education that allow children to control their own learning,” he wrote in Free To Learn. The current exodus of families away from standard schooling and toward other, often freer, learning models, may have positive, long-term effects on young people’s intellectual development and emotional well-being.

Listen to the weekly LiberatED Podcast on Apple, Spotify, Google, and Stitcher, and sign up for Kerry’s weekly LiberatED email newsletter to stay up-to-date on educational news and trends from a free-market perspective.

FRIDAY, APRIL 29, 2022
BY KERRY MCDONALD

Now is an ideal time for more parents, educators, and innovators to build new K-12 learning models.

From Pandemic Playgroups to a Thriving Microschool: How One “Edupreneur” Met Rising Parent Demand for Schooling Alternatives

Ada Salie heard a lot of complaints. Parents were upset about what was happening in their children’s schools last fall, and were reluctant to send their children back. Many of the parents she heard from had pulled their children out of a district school for homeschooling during the 2020/2021 academic year—something that millions of parents did that year, according to US Census Bureau data. They wanted a place to send their children in fall 2021, but many didn’t want their kids masked all day or contending with various other school policies.

Ada decided to turn those complaints into an opportunity. The Massachusetts mother of three had been running playgroups and offering gatherings and activities for homeschooled children throughout the pandemic response. She decided to make these offerings more formal. So, last August she leased a building in central Massachusetts and launched Life Rediscovered, a home-school learning center that attracted dozens of children, ages 5 to 13. The children can attend part-time or full-time, and engage in Montessori-inspired learning activities and plenty of play.

On this week’s LiberatED podcast, Ada Salie shares how she launched her program, including the ups and downs of education entrepreneurship and her advice for aspiring entrepreneurs who are dreaming of launching a similar microschool or schooling alternative. Ada’s story is familiar. Other parents and educators who created informal “pandemic pods” and co-ops during school shutdowns evolved those programs into brick-and-mortar businesses as well. Ada thinks the parent demand for such programs is enormous. “I don’t think there’s going to be any shortage of kids and families looking for services, but right now I do see a shortage of services,” says Ada. “We have families that drive up to an hour to get to us because there’s nothing in their area.” With the Associated Press recently reporting that homeschooling rates remain at record high levels this academic year despite school reopenings, and public school enrollment declines continuing, now is an ideal time for more parents, educators, and innovators to build new K-12 learning models.

Listen to the weekly LiberatED Podcast on Apple, Spotify, Google, and Stitcher, and sign up for Kerry’s weekly LiberatED email newsletter to stay up-to-date on educational news and trends from a free-market perspective.

THURSDAY, SEPT 10, 2020

BY JON MILTMORE

The lesson of 1989 is that today's culture and ideas are tomorrow's politics and policies.

The New York Times Reported 'the Mainstreaming of Marxism in US Colleges' 30 Years Ago. Today, We See the Results

In August 1989, Poland's parliament did the unthinkable. The Soviet satellite state elected an anti-communist as its new prime minister.

The world waited with bated breath to see what would happen next. And then it happened: nothing.

When no Soviet tanks deployed to Poland to crush the rebels, political movements in other nations—first Hungary, followed by East Germany, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Romania—soon followed in what became known as the Revolutions of 1989.

The collapse of Communism had begun.

'Marx's Ideological Heirs'

On October 25, 1989, a mere two months after Poland's pivotal election, the New York Times published an article, headlined "The Mainstreaming of Marxism in US Colleges," describing a strange and seemingly paradoxical phenomenon. Even as the world's great experiment in Marxism was collapsing for all to see, Marxist ideas were taking root and becoming mainstream in the halls of American universities.

"As Karl Marx's ideological heirs in Communist nations struggle to transform his political legacy, his intellectual heirs on American campuses have virtually completed their own transformation from brash, beleaguered outsiders to assimilated academic insiders," wrote Felicity Barringer.

There were notable differences, however. The stark, unmistakable contrast between the grinding poverty of the Communist nations and the prosperity of Western economies had obliterated socialism's claim to economic superiority.

As a result, orthodox Marxism, with its emphasis on economics, was no longer in vogue. Traditional Marxism was "retreating" and had become "unfashionable," the Times reported.

"There are a lot of people who don't want to call themselves Marxist," Eugene D. Genovese, an eminent Marxist academic, told the Times. (Genovese, who died in 2012, later abandoned socialism and embraced traditional conservatism after rediscovering Catholicism.)

Marxism wasn't truly retreating, however. It was simply adapting to survive.

Watching the upheaval in Poland and other Eastern bloc nations had convinced even Marxists that capitalism would not "give way to socialism" anytime soon. But this would cause an evolution of Marxist ideas, not an abandonment of them.

"Marx has become relativized," Loren Graham, a historian at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told the Times.

Graham was just one of a dozen of the scholars the Times spoke to, a mix of economists, legal scholars, historians, sociologists, and literary critics. Most of them seemed to reach the same conclusion as Graham.

Marxism was not dying, it was mutating.

"Marxism and feminism, Marxism and deconstruction, Marxism and race - this is where the exciting debates are," Jonathan M. Wiener, a professor of history at the University of California at Irvine, told the paper.

Marxism was still thriving, Barringer concluded, but not in the social sciences, "where there is a possibility of practical application," but in abstract fields such as literary criticism.

A Strategic Shift

Marxism was not defeated. The Marxists had just staked out new turf.

And it was a highly strategic move. "Practical application" of Marxism had proven disastrous. Communism had been tried as a governing philosophy and had failed catastrophically, leading to mass starvation, impoverishment, persecution, and murder. But, in the ivory tower of the American university system, professors could inculcate Marxist ideas in the minds of their students without risk of being refuted by reality.

Yet, it wasn't happening in university economics departments, because Marxism's credentials in that discipline were too tarnished by its "practical" track record. Instead, Marxism was thriving in English departments and other more abstract disciplines.

In these studies, economics was downplayed, and other key aspects of the Marxist worldview came to the fore. The Marxist class war doctrine was still emphasized. But instead of capital versus labor, it was the patriarchy versus women, the racially privileged versus the marginalized, etc. Students were taught to see every social relation through the lens of oppression and conflict.

After absorbing Marxist ideas (even when those ideas weren't called "Marxist"), generations of university graduates carried those ideas into other important American institutions: the arts, media, government, public schools, even eventually into human resources departments and corporate boardrooms. (This is known as "the long march through the institutions," a phrase coined by Communist student activist Rudi Dutschke, whose ideas were influenced by early twentieth-century Marxist theoretician Antonio Gramsci.)

Indeed, it was recently revealed that federal agencies have spent millions of taxpayer dollars on programs training employees to acknowledge their "white privilege." These training programs are also found in countless schools and corporations, and people who have questioned the appropriateness of these programs have found themselves summarily fired.

A huge part of today's culture is a consequence of this movement. Widespread "wokeness," all-pervasive identity politics, victimism, cancel culture, rioters self-righteously destroying people's livelihoods and menacing passersby: all largely stem from Marxist presumptions (especially Marxism's distorted fixations on oppression and conflict) that have been incubating in the universities, especially since the late 80s.

As it turned out, what was happening in American universities in 1989 was just as pivotal as what was happening in European parliaments.

Especially in an election year, it can be easy to fixate on the political fray. But the lesson of 1989 is that today's culture and ideas are tomorrow's politics and policies.

That is why the fate of freedom rests on education.

To advance the cause of freedom for today and tomorrow, please support the Foundation for Economic Education.

Correction: This article originally stated that Gramsci coined the phrase "the long march through the institutions."

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE)

<https://fee.org/>

SATURDAY, APRIL 7, 2018
BY MIKE LEE

In the age of helicopter parenting, free-range parenting is under attack.

Free-Range Parenting Makes for Responsible Kids. We Shouldn't Penalize It

It's a scene as American as apple pie. Neighborhood children are playing together at a park. Then, as the sun starts to fade and their stomachs start to rumble, the children scatter and begin the journey back to their various homes for dinner and an evening of homework before bed.

But in the age of helicopter parenting, this is happening less and less.

Kids Learn from Parent-Free Experiences

Lenore Skenazy popularized this issue when she wrote about allowing her 9-year-old to ride the New York City subway by himself. Her child wanted to ride and navigate the subway alone, and after convincing his parents that he was capable of doing so, they allowed it.

The backlash was immediate. She was even dubbed the "worst mom in America" for "endangering" her child. But her story brought even more disturbing stories into the public eye: cases of parents being investigated or prosecuted for simply allowing their kids to walk to school or play in the park by their house without direct parental supervision.

What makes this concerning is that it's these types of predictable, parent-free experiences that teach children to use their judgment and to develop problem-solving skills. They teach them the joy of play, physical activity, and how to entertain themselves. It socializes them and shows them how to compromise, empathize, and communicate with their peers.

And, maybe most importantly, these experiences show children they are capable of accomplishing things on their own.

These skills are essential in productive, self-sufficient adults, and the government should not be intimidating parents from deciding how best to cultivate them in their children.

Protect Free-Range Parenting

This is why I pushed to include a "free-range" parenting amendment in 2015 Every Student Succeeds Act. While I was unable to support the bill as a whole, the amendment to this K-12 education bill stated that parents should not be penalized for allowing their children to walk or bike themselves to school as long as they had their parent's permission.

Just last month, the governor of my home state of Utah signed the state's free-range parenting bill that expanded on that idea. The bill, the first of its kind in the nation, allows kids the freedom to be self-sufficient. This includes walking by themselves to school, playing outside unsupervised, or even sitting in a car by themselves while their parents run an errand.

Now, neither my amendment nor the legislature's law gives parents carte blanche permission to neglect or endanger their children. Rather, the law encourages law enforcement to work on a case-by-case basis instead of equating lack of immediate supervision with endangerment.

The law does not set specific ages but rather stresses that children need their parents' permission and need to be mature enough to handle the activity in which they are engaged.

It is parents who are best suited to gauge what kind of experience a child is mature enough to handle. And it should be the child's maturity and the activity involved, not government intimidation, that informs a parent's decision.

Hopefully, other states will follow Utah's example and in a few years, parks, sidewalks, jungle gyms, and basketball courts will be full of more free-range kids from coast to coast.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE)

<https://fee.org/>

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 29, 2020
BY LAWRENCE W. REED

Early America had widespread literacy and a vibrant culture of learning.

The Myth that Americans Were Poorly Educated before Mass Government Schooling

Parents the world over are dealing with massive adjustments in their children's education that they could not have anticipated just three months ago. To one degree or another, pandemic-induced school closures are creating the "mass homeschooling" that FEE's senior education fellow Kerry McDonald predicted two months ago. Who knows, with millions of youngsters absent from government school classrooms, maybe education will become as good as it was before the government ever got involved.

"What?" you exclaim! "Wasn't education lousy or non-existent before government mandated it, provided it, and subsidized it? That's what my government schoolteachers assured me so it must be true," you say! The fact is, at least in early America, education was better and more widespread than most people today realize or were ever told. Sometimes it wasn't "book learning" but it was functional and built for the world most young people confronted at the time. Even without laptops and swimming pools, and on a fraction of what government schools spend today, Americans were a surprisingly learned people in our first hundred years.

I was reminded a few days ago of the amazing achievements of early American education while reading the enthralling book by bestselling author Stephen Mansfield, Lincoln's Battle With God: A President's Struggle With Faith and What It Meant for America. It traces the spiritual journey of America's 16th president—from fiery atheist to one whose last words to his wife on that tragic evening at Ford's Theater were a promise to "visit the Holy Land and see those places hallowed by the footsteps of the Savior."

In a moment, I'll cite a revealing, extended passage from Mansfield's book but first, I'd like to offer some excellent, related works that come mostly from FEE's own archives. In 1983, Robert A. Peterson's "Education in Colonial America" revealed some stunning facts and figures. "The Federalist Papers, which are seldom read or understood today even in our universities," explains Peterson, "were written for and read by the common man. Literacy rates were as high or higher than they are today." Incredibly, "A study conducted in 1800 by DuPont de Nemours revealed that only four in a thousand Americans were unable to read and write legibly" [emphasis mine].

Well into the 19th Century, writes Susan Alder in "Education in America," "parents did not even consider that the civil government in any way had the responsibility or should assume the responsibility of providing for the education of children." Only one state (Massachusetts) even had compulsory schooling laws before the Civil War, yet literacy rates were among the highest in our history.

Great Britain experienced similar trends. In 1996, Edwin West wrote in "The Spread of Education Before Compulsion in Britain and America in the Nineteenth Century" that "when national compulsion was enacted ([in 1880], over 95 percent of fifteen-year-olds were literate." More than a century later, "40 percent of 21-year-olds in the United Kingdom admit[ted] to difficulties with writing and spelling."

Laws against the education of black slaves date back to as early as 1740, but the desire to read proved too strong to prevent its steady growth even under bondage. For purposes of religious instruction, it was not uncommon for slaves to be taught reading but not writing. Many taught themselves to write, or learned to do so with the help of others willing to flout the law. Government efforts to outlaw the education of blacks in the Old South may not have been much more effective than today's drug laws. If you wanted it, you could find it.

Estimates of the literacy rate among slaves on the eve of the Civil War range from 10 to 20 percent. By 1880, nearly 40 percent of southern blacks were literate. In 1910, half a century before the federal government involved itself in K-12 funding, black literacy exceeded 70 percent and was comparable to that of whites.

Daniel Lattier explained in a 2016 article titled "Did Public Schools Really Improve American Literacy?" that a government school system is no guarantee that young people will actually learn to read and write well. He cites the shocking findings of a study conducted by the US Department of Education: "32 million of American adults are illiterate, 21 percent read below a 5th grade level, and 19 percent of high school graduates are functionally illiterate, which means they can't read well enough to manage daily living and perform tasks required by many jobs." Compulsory government schools were not established in America because of some widely-perceived failure of private education, which makes it both erroneous and self-serving for the government school establishment to propagate the myth that Americans would be illiterate without them.

As Kerry McDonald wrote in "Public Schools Were Designed to Indoctrinate Immigrants," the prime motivation for government schooling was something much less benign than a fear of illiteracy. Her remarkable 2019 book, Unschooling: Raising Curious, Well-Educated Children Outside the Conventional Classroom, explains the viable, self-directed alternatives that far outclass the standardized, test-driven, massively expensive and politicized government schooling of today.

If you're looking for a good history of how America traveled the path of literacy to a national education crisis, you can find it in a recent, well-documented book by Justin Spears and associates, titled Failure: The History and Results of America's School System. The way in which government short-changes parents, teachers, and students is heart-breaking.

I promised to share a passage from Stephen Mansfield's book, so now I am pleased to deliver it. Read it carefully, and let it soak in:

We should remember that the early English settlers in the New World left England accompanied by fears that they would pursue their "errand into the wilderness" and become barbarians in the process. Loved ones at home wondered how a people could cross an ocean and live in the wild without losing the literacy, the learning, and the faith that defined them. The early colonists came determined to defy these fears. They brought books, printing presses, and teachers with them and made the founding of schools a priority. Puritans founded Boston in 1630 and established Harvard College within six years. After ten years they had already printed the first book in the colonies, the Bay Psalm Book. Many more would follow. The American colonists were so devoted to education—inspired as they were by their Protestant insistence upon biblical literacy and by their hope of converting and educating the natives—that they created a near-miraculous culture of learning.

This was achieved through an educational free market. Colonial society offered "Dame schools," Latin grammar schools, tutors for hire, what would today be called "home schools," church schools, schools for the poor, and colleges for the gifted and well-to-do. Enveloping these institutions of learning was a wider culture that prized knowledge as an aid to godliness. Books were cherished and well-read. A respected minister might have thousands of them. Sermons were long and learned. Newspapers were devoured, and elevated discussion of ideas filled taverns and parlors. Citizens formed gatherings for the "improvement of the mind"—debate societies and reading clubs and even sewing circles at which the latest books from England were read.

The intellectual achievements of colonial America were astonishing. Lawrence Cremin, dean of American education historians, estimated the literacy rate of the period at between 80 and 90 percent. Benjamin Franklin taught himself five languages and was not thought exceptional. Jefferson taught himself half a dozen, including Arabic. George Washington was unceasingly embarrassed by his lack of formal education, and yet readers of his journals today marvel at his intellect and wonder why he ever felt insecure. It was nothing for a man—or in some cases a woman—to learn algebra, geometry, navigation, science, logic, grammar, and history entirely through self-education. A seminarian was usually required to know Greek, Hebrew, Latin, French and German just to begin his studies, instruction which might take place in a log classroom and on a dirt floor.

This culture of learning spilled over onto the American frontier. Though pioneers routinely moved beyond the reach of even basic education, as soon as the first buildings of a town were erected, so too, were voluntary societies to foster intellectual life. Aside from schools for the young, there were debate societies, discussion groups, lyceums, lecture associations, political clubs, and always, Bible societies. The level of learning these groups encouraged was astounding. The language of Shakespeare and classical literature—at the least Virgil, Plutarch, Cicero, and Homer—so permeated the letters and journals of frontier Americans that modern readers have difficulty understanding that generation's literary metaphors. This meant that even a rustic Western settlement could serve as a kind of informal frontier university for the aspiring. It is precisely this legacy and passion for learning that shaped young Abraham Lincoln during his six years in New Salem.

Not bad for a society that hardly even knew what a government school was for generations, wouldn't you say? Why should we blindly assume today that we couldn't possibly get along without government schools? Instead, we should be studying how remarkable it was that we did so well without them.

When I think of the many ways that government deceives us into its embrace, one in particular really stands out: It seeks to convince us how helpless we would be without it. It tells us we can't do this, we can't do that, that government possesses magical powers beyond those of mere mortals and that yes, we'd be dumb as dirt and as destitute as drifters if we didn't put it in charge of one thing or another.

When it comes to education, Americans really should know better. Maybe one positive outcome of the virus pandemic is that they will rediscover that they don't need government schools as much as the government told them they do. In fact, we never did.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE) <https://fee.org/>

FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 2022
BY KERRY MCDONALD The growing interest in and supply of hybrid schooling across the country reflect a larger educational trend away from traditional schooling and toward innovative, decentralized solutions.

How Hybrid Schools Are Reshaping Education

They're not exactly schools, but they're not homeschools either. They have elements of structured curriculum and institutional learning, while offering maximum educational freedom and flexibility. They provide a consistent, off-site community of teachers and learners, and prioritize abundant time at home with family. They are not cheap but they are also not exorbitant, with annual tuition costs typically half that of traditional private schools.

Hybrid schools are, in the words of Kennesaw State University Professor Eric Wearne, the "best of both worlds," drawing out the top elements of both schooling and homeschooling while not being tied too tightly to either learning model.

Wearne studies hybrid schools and is the director of the National Hybrid Schools Project which seeks to better understand this educational approach and why it's been gaining popularity in recent years. Wearne joined me on this week's episode of the LiberatED Podcast to talk more about hybrid schools and how they are reshaping American education. Hybrid schools are as diverse as the people who launch them and the communities they serve. Some of these schools think of themselves as a group of homeschoolers that comes together in a physical building for formal learning several times a week, while other hybrid schools think of themselves as formal private schools that meet on a part-time basis.

The ability of these schools to emerge in varied and spontaneous ways to meet local learning needs, and to define their communities however they see fit, exemplifies the promise of free-market education solutions and the process of voluntary exchange. The unique structure of hybrid schools makes it easier for entrepreneurial parents and educators to open one, and often enables them to avoid government regulation and oversight that can limit innovation and experimentation.

In their new paper on hybrid schooling, Wearne and his colleague John Thompson, acknowledge that the autonomy and independence of these schools are among their attributes. "One can imagine the policy and regulatory issues that may arise from a set of schools who custom-design themselves in ways that may make them impossible for states and localities to categorize consistently," they write. "This may pose problems for policymakers, but for these schools, this bespoke nature is a feature, not a bug. These schools tend to avoid the political battles involved in startup charter schools, and are less of a financial lift to create compared to five-day, conventional private schools." In his earlier research, including his 2020 book on the topic, Wearne found that hybrid schools satisfy a rising demand by families for smaller, more personalized, more family-centered learning models rather than larger, more standardized conventional schooling. In fact, Wearne found that most of the hybrid school students in his sample had attended public schools prior to enrolling in a hybrid school, and most said they'd prefer full-time homeschooling, rather than full-time private schooling, if they could. Parents also indicated that they were much more satisfied with their children's hybrid school than with their previous schools.

The growing interest in and supply of hybrid schools across the country reflect a larger educational trend away from traditional schooling and toward innovative, decentralized solutions. Keeping government regulation and intrusion at bay will help hybrid schools and similar models expand and evolve to meet the distinct preferences and needs of local learning communities, and will introduce a greater variety of interesting and affordable educational options for families.

Learn more about hybrid schools on the latest episode of the LiberatED Podcast, available on Apple, Spotify, Google, and Stitcher.

And sign up for Kerry's weekly LiberatED email newsletter to stay up-to-date on educational news and trends from a free-market perspective.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE) <https://fee.org/>

FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 2022
BY PAUL BOYCE By continuing along with this standardized type of schooling, we are putting millions at a disadvantage.

Schools Are Outdated. It's Time For Reform

The public education system we currently know has been around for more than 150 years. However, the basic schooling model remains the same. Roughly 20 to 30 kids of the same age are stuffed into a classroom and taught by one teacher.

Even though the curricula have developed, the essence has stayed the same. Children are still taught in a standardized and industrialized way. As with anything that comes from centralized control, it is highly inefficient, bureaucratic, and wasteful.

Yes, the overall educational system has changed in many regards. However, the way we are taught has not. A teacher at the front and the children seated is the optimal way to learn for some students, but others struggle in this environment.

Children learn best in different ways. Some children are best suited to learn through visual stimulation. Others may learn best through hands-on education. The reality is that the current educational system doesn't really accommodate any learning style, nor does it aim for anything other than high test scores.

Let Children Be Children and Enhance Their Minds

Children rarely are allowed to be children. Play is stifled. Students are crammed into a classroom and taught in a standardized way. Creativity is restricted. They aren't allowed to harness their inquisitive minds. Questioning things is part of the analytic mind and a key to societal development, but this takes a backseat to examinations.

The very nature of tests relies on memorization, repetition, and regurgitation: Tests infrequently harness the analytical mind. They train students to know the answers. However, they don't train them on how to find the answers.

Faculty aspire to develop students' thinking skills, but research shows that in practice, we tend to aim at facts and concepts in the disciplines, at the lowest cognitive levels, rather than the development of intellect or values.

Critical thinking is key to creating free and individual minds. It is also increasingly important in today's age, where the line between information and facts is so fine. In fact, 95 percent of statistics are made up. A critical mind will question where this actually came from. Where did this statistic come from? Is it actually reliable?

The issue we have today is that students are taught to test. Whether the information makes sense or not is irrelevant as long as it is correct. This comes at a cost. Schools teach students what to think as opposed to how to think. There are important critical skills that aren't taught. Do students truly question whatever they read or accept any claim blindly? Or, perhaps, do they accept it as long as it confirms their biases? The current system is failing because it is offering the wrong type of education. We must develop individual minds, not mindless zombies.

Learning Styles

Each child is unique in their own right. Each has a different personality and preferred way of learning. Under the current system, each child is bundled under one standardized umbrella. When considering the different types of learners, it is easy to see why some get left behind.

The four learning styles include: visual learners, auditory learners, reading/writing learners, and kinesthetic learners. However, the idea of learning styles is not definitive. That is to say that you are not exclusively one type of learner or another.

Research from Pashler et al. disputes the evidence of specific learning styles.

Rather, these learning styles are preferences rather than “hard-coded.” This is to say that these preferred learning styles can change over time. When a specific learning style is preferred, it is easier for students to take in that information. For example, some students may prefer visual stimulation to emphasize a point, so graphs and charts may be useful. If this engages the students, they take more in. This inevitably affects educational outcomes.

Kinaesthetic learners are probably the biggest anomaly in the classroom. For students who learn best by being active, the classroom is the last place to be. It is no wonder why there are always a few individuals who are consistently disengaged. These individuals are often sporty and have high levels of energy. The traditional football captain who struggles to maintain his place on course may spring to mind. By continuing along with this standardized type of schooling, we are putting millions at a disadvantage.

Educational Stagnation

Whether you buy into learning styles or not, it is evident that the current classroom system is outdated. Literacy rates have stagnated since 1971, while there has been no progress in math since 1990. So what are the causes of this stagnation?

The New York Times would have you believe the issue is underfunding. Throwing more money at something is a classic proposal used by modern-day liberals. This problem cannot be solved with money alone, however. Kansas City, Missouri, provides us with a perfect example. It currently spends roughly 63 percent of its entire budget on schooling. Benefiting from the best-funded school facilities in the country, student performance has failed to improve. Furthermore, the US spends more on education than any other OECD country besides Norway.

At the same time, it is receiving little value for the money. Outcomes are average, but mathematic results are particularly poor. Countries such as Vietnam, Hungary, and Slovakia score higher.

Testing Is Outdated

So why is testing such a bad thing? It teaches children how to absorb information. Children “learn for a test.” However, once the test is taken, is the information truly absorbed? How long does it stay present in the mind? Research by neurobiologists Blake Richards and Paul Frankland suggests it isn’t very long.

According to the neurobiologists, the brain quickly disregards information that is no longer required. Forgetting is an evolutionary strategy to promote the survival of the species. Richards and Frankland state:

From this perspective, forgetting is not necessarily a failure of memory. Rather, it may represent an investment in a more optimal mnemonic strategy.

It is true that repetition can help with memory retention. However, if that specific memory is not recalled, it is eventually forgotten. Further research from Bacon and Stewart studied individual students for up to two years following course completion. They concluded that most of the knowledge gained during the course was lost within two years. It is clear that the current system is generally based upon memory—who can memorize the most information to prepare for the test. Is this really arming kids with the tools they need for adulthood?

Potential Solutions

One potential solution for education would be to start “formal” schooling at age seven. Research from the University of Cambridge concludes that there are benefits of later starts to formal education. This evidence relates to the contribution of playful experiences to children’s development as learners and the consequences of starting formal learning at the age of four to five years of age.

There also needs to be a reduction in the level of testing. We have developed a system whereby teachers have a strong incentive to “teach to test.” It’s about memorizing as much information as possible rather than learning how to think. Furthermore, the testing culture is putting a strain on both teachers’ and students’ mental health. Test results are the be-all and end-all. It is for that reason that many teachers are already leaving the profession. Reforming this testing culture would not only reduce teacher and student stress but also relieve teacher turnover rates.

Thirdly, school vouchers are a viable option. There are already a number of states that have experimented with this. Mostly, there has been large success across the board. The benefits of school choice are widely documented. The vast majority of existing studies find positive effects. Not only are test scores improved, but graduation rates and civic engagement are also enhanced.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE) <https://fee.org/>

FRIDAY, JANUARY 31, 2020 BY LAURA WILLIAMS In “tuition towns,” the funds local governments expect to spend per pupil are instead given directly to the parents of school-age children.

93 Vermont Towns Have No Public Schools, But Great

In just a couple of weeks, 50 boys with learning disabilities will take to a stage in Vermont, one after the other, to recite the Gettysburg Address from memory. It’s a daring experiment undertaken each February at the Greenwood School and its population of boys who’ve struggled in public schools. Diagnosed with ADD, dyslexia, and executive function impairments, Greenwood’s boys stand before an auditorium full of people (and once even a Ken Burns documentary crew) to recite powerful words many adults would struggle to retain.

Many of these young men are residents of Vermont’s “tuition towns.” Too small and sparsely populated to support a traditional public school, these towns distribute government education funds to parents, who choose the educational experience that is best suited to their family’s needs. If the school doesn’t perform up to parents’ expectations, they can take their children, and the tuition dollars they control, elsewhere.

The Greenwood School is one of more than 100 independent schools in the tiny state of Vermont (population: 626,000). The whole state has just 90,000 students in K-12 schools (the city school districts of Denver and Albuquerque have more students, and some county districts are twice as large). How can Vermont sustain such a rich network of educational options?

Tuition Towns and the Families They Serve

Ninety-three Vermont towns (36 percent of its 255 municipalities) have no government-run school at all. If there were enough kids, the pot of public money earmarked for education would be used to buy a building and hire teachers. In these towns, the funds local governments expect to spend per pupil are instead given directly to the parents of school-age children.

This method gives lower- and middle-income parents the same superpower wealthy families have always had: school choice. Kids aren’t assigned to public schools by zip code—instead, parents have the ability to put their kids in school anywhere, to buy the educational experience best suited to each child. If that decision doesn’t work out, they can change it the following year and try a school that might better fit their child’s needs.

Better Outcomes, Similar Costs

So how much money are we talking about? As far as income distribution, Vermont looks a lot like the national average. The per-student expenditure of $18,290 is high by national standards (only New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, and DC spent more). But independent, tuition-driven schools spend $5,000 less, on average, than public schools in the area, which is near the national average.

In many other parts of the country, even the most “progressive” ones, government-run schools consume ever-more resources while doing little to address disparities of outcome. The promise of equal opportunity through public education continues to fall short, and lower-income families are the most likely to feel trapped by the lack of choices. A variety of schools has arisen to compete for these tuition dollars. A spectrum from centuries-old academies to innovative, adaptive, and experimental programs competes for students from tuition towns, just as for the children of independently wealthy families.

Eligibility for tuition vouchers actually increased home values in towns that closed their public schools. Outsiders were eager to move to these areas, and the closure of public schools actually made at least some people already living nearby significantly wealthier as their home values rose, according to real estate assessments.

Because parents, not bureaucrats or federal formulas, determine how funds are allocated, schools are under high economic pressure to impress parents—that is, to serve students best in their parents’ eyes.

Educational Alternatives = Comparative Advantages

The Compass School, nestled on the New Hampshire border, enrolls 80-100 high school students from three states and a mix of demographics. Forty percent of students qualify for subsidized lunch (the school system’s proxy for poverty), and 30 percent have special learning needs. Nearly any public school in the country with Compass’ student population (considered mid-poverty) would be aspiring to a 75 percent graduation rate and a 60 percent college-readiness rate. Compass has a virtually 100 percent graduation rate, and 90 percent of graduates are accepted to college. And still, Compass achieves these results with $5,500 less funding-per-pupil than the average Vermont government-run public high school.

Emergent programming for children with physical, intellectual, or behavioral challenges provides a 22-school menu of accountable, adaptive alternatives to public school remediation. Increasingly, “mainstreaming” students with these challenges has become a priority at larger high schools, which compete to serve special-needs students as fiercely as any other.

Room to Grow? Watch for More Tuition Towns

Having watched these models develop nearby, two more Vermont towns voted in 2013 to close their government-run schools and become “tuition towns” instead. The local public elementary and high schools there closed and reopened as independent competitors in an increasingly rich marketplace of education options. We eagerly wait to see what the innovative combination of private control and public investment can bring to students in those areas.

Can Vermont’s quirky school program work elsewhere? Probably. An independent evaluation by the Ethan Allen Institute, a free-market think tank in Vermont, reported:

...an expansion of Vermont’s publicly funded tuition model can be an effective way to lower costs, improve student outcomes, achieve greater diversity in the classroom, and increase parental satisfaction with and participation in their children’s education.

Wealthy parents will always have school choice. They have the power to choose the best opportunity and the best fit for their individual child. Tuition towns—where all parents direct their child’s share of public education spending—give that power to every family.

Vermont’s empowered parents feed a rich landscape of educational choices, not just one or two. In such fertile soil, smaller, tailored programs pop up and grow to meet children where they are instead of where a one-size-fits-most default curriculum says they should be. If the family’s needs change, their choices can, too.

We pour plenty of public money into educational potential. Only parents’ power of choice can unleash it.

Source: The Foundation for Economic Education (FEE) <https://fee.org/>

Michael Donnelly, JD, February 24, 2022	HOSPITAL CALLS CPS TO STOP HEALTHY MOM AND BABY FROM LEAVING https://hsllda.org/post/hospital-calls-cps-to-stop-healthy-mom-and-baby-from-leaving?utm_source=hsllda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=2-24-2022&utm_id=WU
Dave Dentel February 23, 2022	HOMESCHOOLED TEEN’S TENACITY: DETERMINED TO FIND A CURE FOR DAD’S ALZHEIMER’S https://hsllda.org/post/homeschooled-teen-s-tenacity-determined-to-find-a-cure-for-dad-s-alzheimer-s?utm_source=hsllda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=2-24-2022&utm_id=WU
Daniel Beasley, Esq. February 17, 2022	GOVERNMENT FUNDING FOR HOMESCHOOLING HAS A HIGH COST https://hsllda.org/post/government-funding-for-homeschooling-has-a-high-cost?utm_source=hsllda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=2-24-2022&utm_id=WU
Dave Dentel March 02, 2022	“LET CHILDREN PLAY” RESEARCHER QUESTIONS MANDATORY PRESCHOOL https://hsllda.org/post/let-children-play-researcher-questions-mandatory-preschool?utm_source=hsllda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=3-2-2022&utm_id=WU
Thomas J. Schmidt, Esq. March 02, 2022	DISTRICT THREATENS FAMILY WITH CPS UNLESS THEY “REGISTER” https://hsllda.org/post/district-threatens-family-with-cps-unless-they-register?utm_source=hsllda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=3-2-2022&utm_id=WU
Scott Woodruff, Esq. April 20, 2022	ON THE DOUBLE: HSLDA HELPS VETERAN OVERCOME DISCRIMINATION IN TWO HOURS https://hsllda.org/post/bill-seeks-to-help-more-families-homeschool?utm_source=hsllda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=2-9-2022&utm_id=WU
Jessica Cole April 09, 2022	WHEN THE TODDLER RUNS YOUR SCHOOL DAY https://hsllda.org/post/when-the-toddler-runs-your-school-day?utm_source=hsllda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=4-20-2022&utm_id=WU
Steven Duvall, PhD April 12, 2022	HOMESCHOOL SURGE STILL GOING STRONG https://hsllda.org/post/homeschool-surge-still-going-strong?utm_source=hsllda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=4-13-2022&utm_id=WU
HSLDA April 06, 2022	HSLDA PRESIDENT MIKE SMITH ANNOUNCES HIS RETIREMENT https://hsllda.org/post/hsllda-president-mike-smith-announces-his-retirement?utm_source=hsllda&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=4-6-2022&utm_id=WU

NATIONAL NEWS REPORTS IN EDUCATION

Civil Beat By Suevon Lee February 16, 2022	FIGHTS AT HAWAII SCHOOLS HIGHLIGHT THE NEED FOR MORE MENTAL HEALTH SUPPORT https://timesofmalta.com/articles/view/home-education-association-ignored-by-government.908437
KTVH News by Marian Davidson October 28, 2021	HOMESCHOOLING IN MONTANA: TWO PARENTS’ REASONS FOR LEAVING THE TRADITIONAL CLASSROOM https://www.ktvh.com/news/us-news/two-americas/homeschooling-in-montana-two-parents-reasons-for-leaving-the-traditional-classroom
KTVH News by Laura Yuen October 29, 2021	YUEN: WHAT’S BEHIND THE BUMP IN BLACK HOME-SCHOOLING https://www.startribune.com/yuen-whats-behind-the-bump-in-black-home-schooling/600111200/

GRILLED BLUE MARLIN WITH LEMON-BUTTER SAUCE RECIPE

Ingredients

- 150 grams blue marlin
- rock salt
- 1 tbsp calamansi juice
- 1 tsp garlic salt
- 1 tbsp seasoning
- dash paprika
- 1 tbsp melted butter
- 1 tsp chopped garlic, fried
- Lemon Butter sauce:e N
- lemon
- butter
- salt
- parsley

Directions

1. Wash and clean fish with rock salt. Rinse and set aside.
2. Mix together calamansi juice, garlic salt, seasoning, paprika and butter.
3. Marinate blue marlin in mixture for few minutes, turning both sides from time to time.
4. Over hot charcoal, grill the fish 15 minutes or until done on both sides.
5. Baste blue marlin with marinade all over while cooking.
6. remove from heat and serve with lemon and butter sauce. Sprinkle with fried garlic for the finale then serve.

SIMPLE PAN-FRIED FISH WITH INDIAN SPICES RECIPE

Ingredients

- 2 pounds fish fillets (Swai, Tilapia, Catfish, Orange Roughy, etc.)
- 1 Tbsp paprika (approx)
- 1 Tbsp cumin (approx)
- 1 tsp turmeric (approx)
- Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 1-2 Tbsp vegetable oil

Directions

1. Heat the oil in a large frying or saute pan.
2. Meanwhile liberally sprinkle the paprika and cumin on both sides of the fish fillets, while less liberally sprinkling the turmeric. Then sprinkle both sides with Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper.
3. When the oil is hot, add the fish to the pan and cover. Cook for 2 minutes on a side, then flip and cover again and cook an additional 2 minutes on the other side. If the fillets are thick, cut in the thick part with a knife to check if the fish is white and flaky on the inside. If the fish is still pink or translucent in the thickest part, continue cooking for approximately 2 more minutes, flipping back to the other side for the last minute.
4. Serve over or next to rice with a vegetable.

PAWPAW COOKIES RECIPE

Ingredients

- 1½ c. pawpaw pulp (or mashed bananas)
- ¾ c. shortening
- 1& 1/3 c. sugar
- 1 egg
- 3 c. sifted flour
- 1 Tbsp. baking soda
- 1 tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. ginger
- ¼ tsp. allspice
- 1 tsp. nutmeg
- 1 tsp. cinnamon

Directions

1. Cream the shortening and sugar thoroughly.
2. Add beaten egg and pawpaw.
3. Stir in the dry ingredients, and mix well.
4. Form into small balls and place on cookie sheet.
5. Press into round flat shape with the bottom of a glass that has been lightly greased.
6. Bake in a moderate oven about 15 minutes.

BEEF FAJITA BEST MARINADE RECIPE (GLUTEN FREE)

Ingredients

- 2 tsp chili powder
- 1 tsp sweet paprika
- 1/2 tsp ground cumin
- 1 tsp sugar (I use turbinado)
- 1 tsp granulated onion
- 1/2 tsp granulated garlic
- 1/4 tsp cayenne pepper
- 1 T cornstarch
- 1 tsp coarse salt
- 1/4 C chopped fresh cilantro (coriander)
- juice of 1 lime
- 2 T olive oil

- While the meat is resting for 10 minutes, core, seed, de-rib and slice a couple of sweet bell peppers and an onion and saute them in the same skillet used to cook the meat. Slice the rested steak and re-sear on a serving iron or back in the skillet, plate & serve.

Directions

1. Gather your spices
2. Add the 'wet' ingredients to the dry and combine well
3. Rub the marinade completely into the meat and let it rest in the cooler for an hour
4. Wipe the excess marinade off the meat. Sear the meat to your taste, slice it very thin and serve very hot with sweet peppers and onion slices

CONDENSED MILK GLUTEN FREE CAKE RECIPE (GLUTEN FREE)

Ingredients

- 1 cup almond meal
- 3 eggs
- 1 can sweetened condensed milk
- 1/4 teaspoon baking power
- pinch of salt

Directions

1. Preheat oven to 180°C/160°C fan-forced. Grease 20cm x 20cm cake pan and line base with baking paper.
2. Beat eggs with a whisk or fork until well combined. Mix with baking powder, salt and almond meal until well combined.
3. Pour mixture into cake pan and bake for 45 minutes until golden brown.
4. Sprinkle with coconut flakes when ready (optional).

<https://cookeatshare.com>

Partners & Affiliates

New Heights Educational Group Inc.

14735 Power Dam Road, Defiance, Ohio 43512

+1.419.786.0247

NewHeightsEducation@yahoo.com

<https://www.NewHeightsEducation.org>